Middlesex Fells Is Opened Saturday For A Fall Foliage Tour

The Water and Sewer Board has invited the citizens of Winchester to visit the reservoirs on Saturday, October 5th, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Traffic will be one way with entrance on Hillcrest Parkway.

For many years the water-shed has been closed to the public and a forester, with police powers, patrols the area. Last spring, on May 25th, Thomas W. Conlon, Jr., superintendent of the Water Department, opened up the Fells to a public tour for the first time, and 120 cars full of interested local individuals, families and groups took advantage of the offer and visited the area. At that time, Mr. Conlon stated that the tour was so enthusiastically received that he hoped to make it a bi-annual affair—once in the spring and once in the fall.

Supt. Conlon said the fall foliage is so beautiful in the Fells reservoir area now that the board was convinced that it should open up the water-shed for public tour this week end.

The water-shed located in the Middlesex Fells, near the Stoneham and Medford lines, is the principal water supply of the town and services all the homes except those west of Cambridge Street.

The construction of the Winchester Water Works was begun ninety year ago when Chapter 277 of the Acts of 1873 authorized the town to take water from this area in Middlesex Fells provided that none of the water tributary to Spot Pond "shall be diverted from said pond." The population of the town was then about 3000, and it is now over 20,000. There are approximately 87 miles of street mains, close to 5500 water customers and 842 fire hydrants in Winchester at the present time.

The reservoirs were created by the construction of dams so that certain basins could be used for the collection and storage of water. The land was cleared of trees, stumps and underbrush and a suitable surface for the floor of the reservoirs was prepared. Water began to fill the North Reservoir on December 5, 1873.

The resrvoirs, three in number, are known as North, Middle and South Reservoirs and the water-shed tributary to these areas is remarkable in that there is not a house upon it.

These reservoirs were built over a period of years from 1873 to 1891. During many of those years the work was at a standstill due to insufficient funds and a reluctance on the part of the townspeople to provide money to go ahead with the work. However, in 1890 at a historic town meeting the argument and oratory poured forth both pro and con and when it was all over the vote was recorded 193 to 14 in favor of finishing the work at the South Dam.

The area of the water shed is about 812 acres of which 614 acres is land surface and the balance of 198 acres is the area of the reservoirs when full. The reservoirs when full contain 993,600,000 gallons of water. The Middle Reservoir, highest in elevation, is used only for storage and water can be drawn from it into either the North or South Reservoirs. They are so located that pumping is necessary for a limited part of the Town, the larger part being supplied by gravity.

In 1918 when fuel was high and scarce, the Board authorized the cutting of trees bordering the reservoirs by the citizens for use as fuel. This cleared land was replanted with pine trees so that as they increased in size they would act as a barrier to keep the leaves of the hardwood trees from blowing into the reservoirs. The advantage of pine trees over hardwood is that the evaporation of water from the ground is retarded by the thicker coverage of the pine trees. This plantation of trees has now grown to a size that adds greatly to the attractiveness of the forest-covered banks of the three ponds.

The Water and Sewer Board announces that the water shed around the Town Reservoirs will be open to the public on Saturday, the 5th of October, from 10 A.M. to 5 P.M.

Visitors may walk or drive.

Automobile traffic will be one way with entrance on Hillcrest Parkway.

The Board urges the public to take all necessary precautions to prevent fires or pollution of this area.

Mr. Antippas makes his home here with his father, well known as the owner and proprietor of the former Splendid Lunch in the center, and his brother, Gerry, who is associated with the National Company, (electronics) in Malden.

Bloodmobile Day Is October 11th At The Epiphany

News from the Hospital points up the Red Cross' need for help in supplying blood.

A recent bicycle accident ruptured the spleen of a young local boy and necessitated 10 pints of blood in less than a week.

An adult leukemia patient here needs a continuing supply of blood from walking donors.

A young burn accident victim still in the hospital after several months must have a pint of blood at every dressing change.

On top of these there are the complete transfusions of Rh babies and the sustaining blood needed for pre-planned operations.

If you put the use of blood at the Winchester Hospital in the past two weeks - 44 pints - up against the average collection at a local (five times a year) Bloodmobile visit here - 70 to 75 pints - it is easy to see that the supply needs constantly to be increased.

Next Friday, October 11, at the Epiphany Church between 12:45 and 6:45 p.m., a large volunteer Red Cross staff of nurses and doctors will be on hand to make all Bloodmobile donors happy and comfortable in their generous giving of the life-saving fluid.

Call 729-2300 to make a date ahead, or walk in on that day and join those who think of the needs of others. "They give so that someone may live."

THE BEAUTIFUL FALL FELLS SCENE. The full fall foliage splendor of the Middlesex Fells will be unveiled to visitors there this Saturday. The Fells, opened this one day to the public for touring in the fall by the local Water and Sewer Board, is Winchester's prime source of water supply. Development of the three reservoir water-shed began in 1873 and was finished in 1891.

Selectmen Accept Counsel's Rule: No Interest Conflict

The Board of Selectmen noted in its Monday night meeting at the Town Hall that the investigation by that board into a possible conflict of interests case in the School Department, begun on September 9th, has been officially terminated as a result of a "no cause" ruling by Vincent P. Clarke, town counsel.

The question of a conflict of interests arose when the Selectmen were asked on two successive occasions to sign unlisted warrant items on July 30th and September 3rd for $260 and $760, respectively, to pay William F. Branley, an industrial arts teacher in the employ of the School Department and also the town's official Sealer of Weights and Measures, for summer carpentry services in installing doors at several school buildings.

The Selectmen at that time asked the School Committee for an explanation for the bills, saying that it was their interpretation of the state statute—which became effective on May 1st after being initiated and approved by former Governor John A. Volpe of Winchester—that it expressly prohibited town employees from entering into contractual relationships with the town.

However, Mr. Clarke disputed the Selectmen's interpretation of the statute, and ruled in a letter to the School Committee dated September 23:

"Based on the facts as submitted by you in your letter to me (September 16) it is my opinion that these facts do not constitute any 'Conflict of Interest' and do not violate the provisions of General Laws Chapter 268A. This stat-

Hospital to Have New Cornerstone Laying Ceremony

The Friends and Directors of the Winchester Hospital look forward with great satisfaction to the laying of the cornerstone of the new addition on Sunday afternoon, October 6th, at 4:30. The support and generosity of the people of Winchester and the surrounding areas has made it possible for the hospital to keep pace with increased needs with the addition of new beds and the best in modern equipment for the care of its patients.

The story of the Winchester Hospital is one of growth and steadfast loyalty to the idea of service to the town. In 1916 the ground was broken for the old building as we know it. A handful of farsighted women had worked and gathered enough contributions to start this project on its way. Then in 1950, after several years of work by a building committee and the directors of the hospital, a new wing was added.

This included more service facilities and brought the total number of beds to 104 and bassinets to 40. Now in 1963 the present hospital with many renovations plus the new building is opening its doors to all.

Coming across a green one enters a spacious lobby and waiting room. Adjacent to this is the new enlarged gift shop and coffee shop. Patients are admitted on the ground floor off Fairmount Street.

New Conduits For Telephone Cables Placed in Center

During the past week a group of about 12 laborers with the Nawn Construction Company of Dorchester, under contract with the New England Telephone Company, have been digging a three-foot-wide and eight-foot-deep trench in a diagonal line across Winchester Center—beginning on Church Street at the Common and running beside the rotary to Main Street between the Esso and Shell service stations.

Scheduled to complete their work by Wednesday, the crew is laying eight 3½-inch conduits between old conduit pipes for phone ducts.

Corliss Hunter, manager of the New England Telephone Co., said the ditch would be covered over and the conduits left in place until December, when a telephone crew will install new trunk lines to service the area. The project is expected to be completed by spring.

Mr. Hunter pointed out that the new trunk lines are needed due to the tremendous growth of telephone usage in the routes out of Arlington, Burlington, Lexington, Winchester and Woburn into Bos-

Miss Winchester Beauty Contest On Columbus Day

As part of the Sons of Italy's annual Columbus Day celebration this year on Saturday, October 12, the Men's and Women's League are sponsoring a "Miss Wincehster" beauty contest for girls between the ages of 16 and 21.

This is the second year the event is being held, due to the tremendous enthusiasm and response to last year's first Miss Winchester contest. Last year's winner, Joanne Addario of Woburn, will crown this year's winner at a banquet and dance at the Sons of Italy home on 117 Swanton Street that night.

Robert Maietta, chairman of the event, said the beauty contest will be a full and rewarding day for all the contestants that enter. There will be an 11 o'clock motorcade procession through the main streets of the town with all the contestants riding in convertibles. Then, at about 1:30 in the afternoon, the beauty contest will take place before a capacity audience and five capable judges in the S.O.I. Hall. The girls will be judged in both evening dress and swim suit categories, with the winner being announced at the banquet where she will receive her crown, cape and loving cup.

Mr. Maietta, remembering last year's contest with its 25 contestants, said the event is a lot of fun for the young ladies. He noted that the S.O.I. is anxious to keep the number of contestants around 25 so as not to have too many contestants, but that there is still time and room for about five or ten more candidates to apply. Aspirants should contact Mrs. William Maggio of 6 Stevens Street (PA 9-5242), to register and receive additional information.

On display in Hevey's Drug Store window are the crown, cape and loving cups to be awarded. First and second runner-ups in the beauty contest will also receive handsome trophies.

The Sons of Italy rave retained a professional hair stylist to be in attendance throughout the beauty contest to aid the girls with any hair problems. The stylist will also be present during the motorcade to help in the event of open convertible wind problems.

Bellino Captures Providence, Plays First "Pro" Game

There's still magic in the name of Joe Bellino. A record-breaking crowd of some 11,000 attested to this last Friday night at Providence's City Stadium where the Providence Steamrollers defeated the Boston Nu-Way Sweepers, 26-7. Up to that time, the largest crowd that general manager Joe McGee's professional football club had drawn was 9,000 in a game against the Newark Bears. McGee attributes this precedent to none other than Lieutenant (j.g.) Joe Bellino of the United States Navy.

"I heard that he was stationed at the Newport Naval Training Station," the young and affable businessman related, "so rather than make an impersonal 'phone call, I decided to go there and see him myself. I asked him if he would be interested in playing football if the contract was right. He asked for a day or so to think it over. When I spoke to him next he revealed that as far as he was concerned the answer was 'yes,' but that the Navy would also have to give their sanction."

Fire Department Begins 48-Hour Week Sunday; Six New Firemen Named

The Winchester Fire Department starts a new schedule of operation starting this Sunday, October 6th, at 8 a.m. At that time, the new 48-hour week—a drop of eight hours from the present 56-hour week schedule—becomes effective.

The newly reduced work week for the firefighters is a result of the passage of Article Six at the annual Town Meeting last spring, when the members voted to approve the article which called for the change from a 56 to a 48-hour week, with no reductions in pay, and the addition of six new firefighters to the regular complement of 36 officers and men at a cost of $8,637 for this last quarter of 1963. In 1964 the six new firefighters will add slightly over $32,500 to the personnel budget expenses of the Fire Department.

Last Monday night the Board of Selectmen approved of Fire Chief Frank Amico's temporary appointment of five new firefighters: Joseph R. McDonough of 924 Main Street, John A. Zaffina of 989 Main Street, Charles J. Mullen of 23 Pine Grove Park, and John J. Hennelly of 10 Russell Road, all veterans, and John J. Regan of 7 Russell Road, a non-veteran, but a member of the local Auxiliary Fire Department volunteers for three years. Last week the Selectmen approved of the permanent appointment of John F. Nowell of 86 Middlesex Street.

The new men will have to pass town required physical examinations before Sunday. The five just appointed were among 11 out of 13 men who took a Civil Service exam on June 29th and passed. Mr. Nowell passed a similar exam a year ago, and was waiting for an opening to be appointed.

The new firefighters will work days for one week to get orientated to the routines of the Fire Station and to participate in a familiarization course on firefighting techniques, under the direction of Captain Peter L. Galuffo, drillmaster. Then they will be integrated into the regular duty tour groups.

According to Capt. Galuffo's elementary training course for the recruits, the new arrivals will have a full week's activity cut out for them. They'll be learning how to make a hydrant, the use of preconnects, how to carry and advance hoses, how to place Siamese and wye layouts, the proper uses of various hoses, the method of opening and closing nozzles, picking up after a fire, the carrying, raising, and placing of various kinds of ladders, how to use forcible entry tools, how to use different kinds of masks, rescue work, the differences between types of extinguishers, and the location of equipment and apparatus.

Chief Amico said the week's elementary training course is just the beginning though. "It takes at least two years of not only training through instruction courses but also in training through learning by experience before a man becomes a first-rate firefighter."

Chief Amico asserted that even though the length of the firefighters' week has been reduced from 56 to 48 hours, the coverage at the

Adult Education Has Large Registration

Tuesday night's registration for the Adult Education program supported School Department planners in the contention that the citizens were ready for more courses of enrichment and told a clear story that Winchester parents really want to know what the "new mathematics" is all about. Over 230 adults had signed up for courses by the end of Tuesday's registration.

Registration is accepted at the School Department all this week. The evening courses start their ten week run next Monday evening, October 7.

Some 34 parents have already signed up for "Modern Mathematics and Your Child," and have necessitated a seond session of the ocurse to be called for on Tuesday evenings. Art Appreciation, with 15, drew next highest enrollment among the new courses, Russian Conservation stands next with 12, and the A B C's of investments already has 9 signed up.

Of the repeat subjects the bridge course has a top registration of 38, but a few of the classes need more enrollees to insure their being kept on the list for this semester. Those subjects needing more "students" are the French II course (which makes use of the language laboratory at McCall), Spanish II (at the High School lab), the study of Crystals and Minerals, and Developmental Reading, which is the Rotary-sponsored course.

Like the course in mathematics, Sewing I is over-subscribed with 28 signed up, and in these two courses persons interested in studying the subject on Tuesday evening rather than Monday are asked to contact Mrs. Elaine Kelly at the assitsant superintendent's office (PA 9-1780).

The remaining courses, Spanish I, Personal Typing, Physical Fitness Recreation for Men and Keeping Fit for Women, Sewing II, Party Cookery and Woodworking and Furniture Repair, all have registrations running at present from eight through 13. Subscribers to Sewing II are reminded that this year work with tailoring will be offered in the winter term and not included in the first course.

Richard E. Desjarlais, assistant school superintendent, who is in charge of the program today, announced instructors not previously named but now ready to take over classes next week. Paul Goodwin will instruct the course in woodworking and furniture. Mr. Goodwin is the Lynch School faculty member in this subject and the course will be at the High School shop.

Mrs. Vera Erdely will teach the course in Russian for those with no previous experience with the language. New to teaching in town, she taught in France, at Oklahome State University, and in California.

James Fallon, who holds a Tufts A.B. and M.A. and who has been at Wakefield High School since 1961, will teach Spanish I; Alexander Bloch, who holds his A.B. and M.A. from the University of Miami and who studied at the University of Madrid, will teach Spanish II.

Sewing I will this year be in the hands of Miss Barbara Dunby, a Regis College graduate with an M.A. from B. C. and who is coordinator of home economics in Woburn where she taught in this field for ten years.

N.Y. Jury Gives Death Penalty To Killer Of 6

A New York Supreme Court jury Monday night ordered the death penalty for a 21-year-old Winchester man convicted of slaying a Manhattan liquor store proprietor and his clerk in a December robbery. In proscribing the electric chair for Henry P. Dusablon of 3 Holland Court, the New York jury made the first such decision under a newly enacted state law which permitted the jury to determine the penalty in a first-degree murder case.

Dusablon was also accused of killing a 59-year-old Woburn antique dealer, and three additional New York store owners in other robberies in the last week of December, 1962.

Also convicted and sentenced to a death penalty for being Dusablon's accomplice in crime was Emanuel Samperi, 31, of Patchogue, L. I.

Ths two men were convicted last week in the liquor store holdup-slaying of Martin Himmelstein, 47, and his clerk, Caesar Largo, 62, on December 28. The jury received the case at 3:50 p.m. on Monday, returned with a verdict for Dusablon at 10:30 p.m., and went back into deliberation until 1:15 a.m. before reaching a unanimous verdict on Samperi.

Dusablon appeared unmoved as the jury called for his death, according to New York newspaper accounts of the trial, but Samperi was visibly shaken.

Sentencing was set for October 30th in this the first instance where a New York jury was charged by the court with affixing the penalty for a first-degree capital offense as well as determining the innocence or guilt of an individual. Formerly, conviction of first-degree murder carried a mandatory death sentence in New York. A death

New Name Badges Issued, Worn By Local Policemen

All 37 Winchester Police patrolmen and officers were issued new name badges on Monday morning.

The name badges are worn over the official police badges on the breast pocket where they can easily be seen. They will serve to identify the officers by large black-on-white lettering of the policeman's last name. The white background, about ¾ inch wide by 2½ to 3 inches long, is encased with an attractive gold ⅛ inch wide border.

The nameplates, manufactured by the Reeves Company, Inc., of Attleboro, were also issued by order of Police Chief Joseph J. Derro to the four special officers now attached to the department.

Chief Derro said he believed the new name badges, acquired at a nominal cost of less than $2 apiece, will aid officers in their dealings with local and out-of-town people due to the fact that others will know the name of whom they are talking to—and not to just an anonymous policeman.

Chief Derro said he is contemplating issuing similar name badges to the 20 school traffic officers.

Fire House to Be Headquarters For Dystrophy Drive

Accepting the first canister in Winchester is Fred Felber, proprietor of Winton Hardware Store on Mt. Vernon Street, from Lt. Ernest Howard of the Winchester Fire Department. Lt. Howard is spearheading the 1963 Muscular Dystrophy Association drive by placing canisters in the stores throughout Winchester.

The house-to-house march will be held Sunday, October 27, and Chief Francis I. Amico has consented to have the firehouses as a collection point for those marchers who wish to avail themselves of this dropoff point.

Lt. Howard has stated that the money raised from the annual appeal will support the research projects at leading hospitals in the Greater Boston area and will help to continue the patient service program of purchasing wheel chairs, braces, lifts, and other medical appliances as well as sending those afflicted with muscular dystrophy to summer camp each year. A free clinic at Massachusetts Memorial Hospital, headed by Dr. Charles Kane, is also supported by the association.

It is hoped that everybody will be as generous as possible in making this year's dirve a successful one. So, don't forget the date—Sunday, October 27, and welcome the Muscular Dystrophy volunteer.

Local Investment Company Changes Its Affiliation

Announcement is made elsewhere in the Star this week of the opening of a new branch office of Townsend, Dabney and Tyson, of Boston at 47 Church Street, with the manager to be Maurice C. Bird and registered representative Maxwell McCreery.

MAURICE C. BIRD

For Winchester investors who have been transacting business at this hospitable address it represents in fact a new affiliation for a team of brokers who were formerly aligned with the A. C. Allyn Company which opened its branch here six years ago.

The official change-over took place at the close of business on Monday, September 23. It came about subsequent to a merger through which A. C. Allyn became incorporated with Francis I. du-Pont and Co. of New York.

"We are happy to be able to continue to serve the people of Winchester in our new association with Townsend, Dabney and Tyson," said Mr. Bird, who stressed his pleasure in the New England history of the firm which holds membership in the Boston, New York and American Stock Exchanges and traces its 75 years' service to the establishment of the original firm of Hayward and Townsend at 40 State Street, Boston.

The present home office at number 30 State Street is at present headquarters for offices which cover New England from Bangor, Me. and Keene, N. H., to Greenfield, Mr. Bird pointed out.

Winchester had a strong and early link with this firm in the person of the late Augustus J. Boyden, of Central Street, who became a partner in 1902 and served it for more than twenty years through a period of consistent expansion.

Mr. Bird and Mr. McCreery are both well known and long time residents here. They expect to add another member to their staff in the near future.

Highlights of The Far East Benefits D. A. R. Schools

On Wednesday, October 9, the Crawford Memorial Methodist Church will be the scene of a trip to far away places as Marion and Marshall Symmes present a set of colored slides based on their most recent trip to the Orient.

The Symmes, well known for their previous lectures, have named their latest presentation "Highlights of the Far East," and will display some slides featuring Japan with its double image of one face turned to the classical past and the other pre-occupied with the present; the busy port of Hong Kong with a look at the Bamboo Curtain and the Philippines, a typical tropical country.

This new and fascinating program is being presented under the auspices of the Commitee of Safety Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution as a benefit performance to aid in its work of helping to maintain D.A.R. schools, notably the Hillside School for Boys at Marlboro.

Co-chairmen for tickets for the affair are Mrs. Lindsay Caldwell and Mrs. Paul Stoneman, assisted by an able committee of Mrs. Thomas Dowd, Mrs. Louis C. Kuhn, Jr., Mrs. Maxwell McCreery and Mrs. Lewis Wadsworth. Mrs. William W. Goodhue and Mrs. Harold Twombley are in charge of decorations. Mrs. Kingman P. Cass, Mrs. Harry D. Locke and Mrs. Michael MacDonald will be in charge of coffee to be served at 7:30 p.m.

The program will start at 8:00 p.m. Everybody is welcome. Tickets may be purchased from committee members mentioned above or from any member of the executive board. It is hoped that many Winchesterites will avail themselves of this opportunity to visit the Orient via colored slides and at the same time help some very deesrving youngsters right in our own country.

Miss Winchester Contest

As mentioned for the past few weeks, there is a combined effort between the Ladies' and Men's Lodges of the Winchester Sons of Italy to hold its annual Columbus Day Celebration at the Sons of Italy Home with an all day affair and a "Miss Winchester" beauty contest as one of the features.

Girls between 16 and 21 who could well qualify for the title are urged to make their intentions known as soon as possible because there are but two weeks remaining. Call Mrs. William Maggio at 6 Stevens Street (PA 9-5242). She will be happy to give all the necessary information to you.

Beauty contest aspirants will be honored with a motorcade in the morning and will ride in convertibles around town. Don't worry about your hair being wind-blown because it will be cared for by a professional stylist any time during the day. Yes, they will do your hair up for the contest.

The beauty contest will be held at the Winchester Sons of Italy Hall on 117 Swanton Street starting about 2:00, and the "Miss Winchester" and runners-up will have an honored seat at the evening's banquet and head table.

Following the crowning of the queen and the banquet there will be dancing.

To start the day's program there will be a flag-raising ceremony in front of the S.O.I. Hall, followed by a procession to St. Mary's Church for a 9:00 a.m. Mass in honor of the deceased members of the Winchester Lodges. An "open house" will be had after the return from church with the other activities taking place as mentioned above.

THE HOPE SHIP. The 15,000-ton, white hospital ship, aptly named the HOPE, stationed off the coast of South Viet Nam recently. The ship has served many countries in its two-year existence as a privately sponsored vessel of mercy. It is scheduled to leave shortly for Ecuador, South America, for another program of medical teaching and treatment.

Rear Admiral Leroy Honsinger Returns to Town

Rear Admiral Leroy V. Honsinger, now retired after thirty-nine years in the United States Navy, has recently returned to Winchester to make his permanent home. He lives at 45 Myopia Road.

REAR ADMERIAL HONSINGER

Rear Admiral Honsinger was graduated from the U. S. Naval Academy in 1927, and after earning his degree in Naval Architecture from M. I. T. in 1932, spent twenty years in his field in naval shipyards, and ten years in Washington, D. C., the last two of which he served as the Deputy Chief of the Bureau of Ships.

While serving as Deputy Chief of the Bureau of Ships, Rear Admiral Honsinger was introduced to prominent Washington Cardiologist Dr. William B. Walsh, president of Project Hope, by presidential assistant Sherman Adams.

Project HOPE is a non-profit medical treatment and teaching program which is entirely dependent upon the generosity of the American people for its continuing support and ability to serve others.)

Rear Admiral Honsinger became interested in the project, and was instrumental in making several ex-hospital ships available to an inspection which led to the choice of the USS Consolation in 1958 by the project group.

The ship was refitted and newly commissioned the HOPE in 1960. Rear Admiral Honsinger was commander of the Mare Island Naval Shipyard near San Francisco when the HOPE was commissioned, a ceremony which he proudly attended.

Rear Admiral and Mrs. Honsinger lived in Winchester from 1948 to 1951 while he was attached to the Boston Naval Shipyard. Now retired, he is the manager of production and purchasing for the William Underwood Corporation, America's oldest cannery.

Rear Admiral Honsinger is also on the executive board of the New England Committee for Project HOPE, and has been helpful to Mrs. Albert L. Muggia, also on HOPE's executive board, who is forming a local Winchester HOPE Committee.

The officers of the new local committee will be announced shortly, and any Winchester redident who is interested in learning more about HOPE or in working with the committee is invited to talk with Mrs. Muggia at PA-9-3383.

Sons Of Italy News

Columbus Day Celebration Chairman Bob Maietta and his diligent working committee have been holding frequent organizational meetings and they anticipate the members will show their true support by attending the all-day affair. Let's have an encouraging showing of ladies and men, members and non-members, for the 8:15 A.M. flag raising ceremony in front of the S. O. I. Hall and procession to St. Mary's Church for a 9:00 a.m. Mass in remembrance of the deceased members of our local lodges.

Pres. Michael Saraco and his board of directors met on Monday night to discuss various doings of the board for the past year. Members of the S. O. I. are also members of the A.C.A. which is the governing body of our organization. It is perfectly legitimate for any of us to attend a board meeting and even be heard.

Pres. Mike gave his farewell speech as his second term came to an end at this meeting and thanked all for the cooperation received during his reign in office but urged all members to become more active and share in the various functions. Finally, he wished the new officers much success in the year to come.

The steak cookout and dance last Saturday night was successful. Those not coming certainly missed an excellent steak and dancing that followed. Chairman Frank Provinzano wishes to extend his many thanks to the following for the hard work and fine job performed for the night: Boss Dattilo, Carl Bertolucci, Mel Fiore, Joe and John Paonessa, Pat Bruno, Randy Kazazian, and Joe DiTucci.

Congratulations to Attorney and brother Bob Maietta on being appointed to the committee for the Italian Cultural Program of the Grand Lodge. This is a new endeavor to provide means to the members of the various S.O.I. organizations to be exposed to the culture, traditions and history of the land of our forefathers. Many functions will be held whereby the fields of music, art, history and the like will be the topic.

Co-chairmen of the S. O. I. blood bank, Richie Penta and Tony Melaragni, have announced that plans are being made for the Bloodmobile to be at the S. O. I. Hall on January 20th.

Ven. Bob Fiore has announced that the Friday night specials start this week. Come on down, bring your wives and friends for a delicious plate of steamed clams or quahogs or lobsters. Serving will start at 7:00 and first come first served until all is gone and it doesn't take too long!

The 1580 Boy Scouts are meeting every Monday night and Scoutmaster Bob Fiore reports 52 now in membership. Bob is being assisted by Mel Fiore, Carl Bertolucci, Norman Doucette, Randy Kazazian, Bill Maggio and Tony DeLuca. A "parents night" is in the making.

Sorry to hear that Tony De Luca is hospitalized and we certainly hope for a quick and complete recovery.

Hail to the S. O. I. golf champions. In class "B" Tony Saraco defeated Mario Buzzotta and Moose Bellino took Frank Costa. Chick Vespucci battled Paul Amico and finally won and Angelo Costa beat Angelo Amico to round off Class "A." The finalists will now compete against each other the next time out for the titles in the respective classes.

Speaking of golf, if you take a walk to the eleventh hole at the Unicorn, you will see a golf club wrapped around a tree. It belongs to Angie Amico who left it there as a memento for missing a short putt.

Chairman Art Dunbar and his Xmas Party Committee are working hard to make the party a success and are already in the process of purchasing toys and refreshments. Art urges all bowlers of the S. O. I. League and other members of the organization to report to the S. O. I. Hall every Tuesday night after bowling to put some of our thoughts together.

Veterans Services

Korean veterans in Massachusetts were warned today by State Veterans' Services Commissioner, Charles N. Collatos, that the last full year of education or training courses available to them under the G.I. Bill of Rights begins this month.

When this school year ends, he declared in a Directive to all City and Town Veteran's Agents, only a half year of schooling will still be obtainable under the program. Courses starting in September 1964 must be concluded by January 31, 1965, Collatos said.

The Commissioner reminded Korean Conflict Veterans that Congress has set the cut-off date for the readjustment program for those without service-connected disabilities. The law gives no authority to extend the benefits beyond these dates.

To be eligible, veterans must have had active service at any time between June 27, 1950 and January 31, 1955. They must also have served at least 90 days and entered training within three years from their first discharge from that service. Re-enlistment, Commissioner Collatos declared, does not extend the three-year limit.

Eligible veterans will receive an allowance each month to help defray training and living expenses.

The Commissioner said that Korean Veterans with service-connected disabilities come under a different program and have no deadline to cut off their training.

Community School Dance Committee Survey Results

The Winchester Community School Association has expressed its sincere and grateful appreciation to those parents who cooperated so wholeheartedly with the recent survey regarding the Dance Assemblies for the Ninth Grade pupils.

A survey of the results should note the following facts:

1. Of 370 questionnaires mailed with return postage included 162 answers were received. Many parents took much time and effort in giving detailed answers which were most helpful.

2. Of the 162—99 said their 9th graders would support the program; 33 said they would not and 30 were indefinite or undecided.

3. The vast majority, whether "for" or "against", felt that there should be a fairly even balance between boys and girls but acknowledged that this was difficult to control. However, a surprisingly large number suggested registrations be accepted on a "first come first served" basis, limiting the number of girls to the acceptances of the boys. One suggested drawing lots.

4. The same large percentage stated that discipline was needed and that after one or at the most two warnings any offender should be excluded from the group, not allowed back and the parents notified of this action.

5. Some felt that sixth grade was too young to start the dance program while others implied that while the younger ages were fine, sports, etc. interferred with any planned program for 9th grade and up.

After a careful weighing of the answers the Committee has decided that for this season they should cancel the ninth grade program. It was noted that of the 99 ninth graders interested 63 were girls and 36 were boys. If the suggestions for balancing the number of boys and girls attending were to be followed, close to half of those girls interested would have to be excluded from the group. However, there were parents of the 21 boys who stated that they were interested in having their sons attend but that their sons were not interested so they would not attend. If those 21 parents had supported the program with action as well as interest the count would have been 63 girls and 57 boys and it would have been feasible to attempt to continue the dances.

The attitudes and interest of the present 8th grade groups will be observed before any action is taken regarding next seasons 9th grade program.

Carl de Suze Captivates Capacity Audience in Premiere Performance

Carl de Suze, foreign correspondent, newsreel cameraman, good will ambassador, showman and disc jockey, among other accomplishments, gave a solid performance Friday night, September 27, at the McCall Junjor High School auditorium to a packed house which enjoyed every minute of the two-hours-plus program entitled "Empires Revisited—The New Europe."

The program consisted of completely new material compiled during Mr. De Suze's trip this spring and early summer to the countries of Europe. The theme was the Common Market and the amazing changes which have taken place in the past several years in these six countries comprising the Common Market.

Mr. de Suze traced the civilization of Europe to the present day, He took his audience through the many factories of Europe owned by American companies to emphasize the great role we have been and are playing in Europe. There were interviews with factory managers, representatives of the Common Market, and ministers of state. It was visual proof of what we had been hearing and reading about what is going on over there, dramatically presented.

One should not gain the impression that the program was just a dissertation on the progress of Europe. There were many side trips to such spots as the Italian and French Riviera to show the effect of Europe's post-war renaissance and how the Europeans are enjoying their prosperity. These side trips were often amusing, and at times hilarious.

Through most of the program Mr. De Suze showed color films which he had taken on his trip. The colors were gorgeous and highly effective in capturing the brilliant colors of the coronation of the new Pope, the pomp and panoply of the Swiss Guard, the wildly excited and colorful crowd and the majesty of the entire ceremony.

Also a first for the audience was the films in color of President Kennedy's trip to Rome and Naples and his interview with the Pope..

Through the entire program Carl de Suze kept up a running commentary in his descriptive and witty style. There were a few minor technical difficulties which the audience accepted good naturedly. Mr. de Suze explained that it is inevitable in any initial showing. The program was, in effect, a world premiere.

The Winchester Kiwanis were extremely gratified at the success of Mr. de Suze's appearance, which far exceeded expectations. Every member of Kiwanis pitched in to make a significant contribution to the overall effort-

On the basis of his performance last Friday night, Carl de Suze is welcome in Winchester any time.

CAPITOL COMMENT

By
YOUR CONGRESSMAN
BRAD MORSE

Since I discussed the danger to the United States of possible intelligence activities of Russian fishing trawlers off the coast of Massachusetts. I have received assurances from the Department of State that our defense agencies are maintaining constant surveillance over Soviet vessels near our shores.

In my letter to Secretary of State Rusk, I had also urged that the State Department investigate "carefully and thoroughly" reports that the Soviet fishing fleet was violating the International Convention for the Northwest Atlantic Fisheries. The Department reports that the difficulty in ascertaining such violations is inherent in the Convention itself. Under present rules mesh nets of a minimum of four and one-half inches must be used when trawling for cod and haddock. The regulation does not apply to fishing for whiting and herring which is frequently carried on by Russian ships in this area. In addition the enforcement of the Convention is currently the responsibility of each party to the agreement. Thus, the United States Coast Guard and the Fish and Wildlife Service may police American fishermen, but have no authority to board foreign fishing vessels to investigate possible violations. It has been suggested that the Convention be amended to provide for an international inspection service which could inspect all vessels. The United States supports this amendment.

In the meantime legislation has been introduced here in Congress to protect our fishing grounds. A bill has been approved by a Senate Committee which would make it unlawful for foreign vessels to engage in fishing within the territorial waters of the United States except as provided by an international agreement to which the United States is a party. This measure is now awaiting action on the floor of the Senate. Hearings have been promised shortly on a similar measure by the House Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

Even if we are successful in preventing the exploitation of our fishing resources, we must continue to be alert for Soviet intelligence activities. Many commentators have speculated that some of the Russian crewmen may be naval officers engaged in espionage. Until definite evidence of these activities can be developed, we must rely on the vigilance of our Coast Guard and Navy. It is reassuring to know that the United States Government is taking active steps to guard against Soviet intelligence interference with the military and communications systems of the Atlantic Alliance.

Conflict Of Interests Statute Protects The Public Interest: Analyzing A Local "No Cause" Case

The conflict of interests statute, or code of ethics law, was created under the governorship of Winchester's John Volpe with the aim of providing statutory outlines for Massachusetts state and municipal governments with a guide rule toward correct ethical practices, behavior and responsibilities that would serve to protect the high ideals embodied in the concept of "the public interest" entrusted by the people in its governmental leaders.

Briefly, the public interest is served best when it is served by both elected and appointed governmental officials and employees (and ordinary citizens, too) who place the welfare and protection of the governed society above those of individual gain or favor. The necessity of the conflict of interests law's existence is seen when individuals are placed in positions where they may be poised between having to choose between their own gain or the community's good—presenting a critical situation where only the more responsible and strongest willed can resist the easy temptation to compromise the general good for one's own.

It is almost an unnatural act for a human being to decide against himself in some such matters without the buttress of a written law expressly making the "unethical" illegal. This writer has seen specific examples of this. While reporting on the local government of another small town in this state, a member of a three-man Board of Selectmen was seen to vote a $10,000 plus town truck contract to the local dealership which he owned—even though his bid was the highest of three by several hundred dollars—and colleagues went along with him. In a resultant taxpayer's suit, it was pointed out that the awarding of the bid was the Selectmen's prerogative, so while the action was unethical it was not technically illegal. (This occurred just a few months before the conflict of interests statute became law, and, as a matter of interest, he was vociferously against the passage of the bill.)

Here in Winchester we have had the misfortune of seeing one resident recently convicted by the state for violating the public interest and trust in 27 counts of larceny. The town's besmirched name was partially reinstated by the appointment of one of our own to serve as an investigator on the Mass. Crime Commission's staff. The very existence of the commission, with its many pending indictments, attests to the true facts of life in this matter and to the importance which the people of the Commonwealth place in its endeavor.

The problem of law involved in the conflict of interests statute from its beginnings has been the fact that it engages in nebulous legal arenas—where there is little legal precedent, where there is difficulty in asserting the precise boundaries of the conditional terms, and where administration and enforcement of the law is a matter of interpretation and relatives not hertofore assumed by legal counsels and government officials.

But, many may ask, should a law fail to be brought into existence or adhered to when enacted because it is difficult to describe or enforce? Was the Prohibition fiasco a comparative example? The answer to the latter is both yes and no. That attempt to legislate "morality" was unsuccessful because it was a law people could not and would not subscribe to. However, in the case of the ethics law, the people of this state wanted so much to be protected from the constant corruption of the public interest trust (especially at the state level) that the law was enacted by the Legislature because of the expressed will of the people.

This past month the Selectmen began investigating what it believed was a possible conflict of interests case involving a school teacher who contracted with the town (through the School Department) to do summer carpentry work.

The Selectmen were advised of the situation by the town comptroller, who was doing the job he was hired to do: be accountable for the accounts of the town. He is to be noted for his alertness in thinking of the public interest above potential criticism from important individuals or groups for bringing salient facts out into the open and pointing them out to the reviewing board which is responsible for making executive decisions in such matters.

The Selectmen, it appears, are becoming increasingly more active and perspicacious in their reviewing capacity—which is good to see, for they do not then pay mere duty service to the town but assume a more dynamic and functional role in the interest of the public interest. (If our executive board failed or reneged in this capacity, the entire community would lose the value of its trust in the public interest service of its elected governors.)

However, in this case, the town counsel ruled that there was no conflict of interests violation. We are pleased with this quick ruling from our legal authority in completely exonerating a well-known and very much respected local teacher from any position of question under the conflict of interests statute.

The individual who served the town beyond his usual term of employment by doing extra work during the summer was, in fact, engaged in dual employments with his regular employer; and the town counsel had said there is absolutely nothing irregular in this as far as the conflict of interests statute is concerned, for it merely represents an extension of his regular employment under a different job category.

The problem here was not one of either the teacher's assumption of a contract in which there was any questionable circumstances, or of the School Department's letting out a contract in which there was any believed violation of a state law . . . but was the nebulousness of the provisions of the statute. Obviously, the School Department felt that there was nothing questionable in contracting with a regular employee to do their extra work.

However, if we may point out one sideline issue: The School Department through the School Committee made in this particular case the same "mistake" that many town departments, committees and boards inadvertently make from time to time, and that is the requiring of ex post facto legal interpretation or help to allay either opinions or charges raised on actions that should have been checked into fully before the acts were de facto complete.

Errors in failing to look (legally) into actions before leaping into irreversible position of fact, has and can continue to cost the town dearly (And we even have some residents who like to bait the town in this way to collect). When legal opinion is slower in coming to town departments, boards and committees than is necessary for the circumstances, those officials should request a transfer of money from the Finance Committee's Reserve Fund to purchase the legal protection on the outside.

The Attorney-General was apparently questioned on this same matter by the Massachusetts Association of School Committees due to similar cases, for in that group's September News Letter the Attorney-General commented: "It is my opinion that a school committee could hire a school teacher for summer work. Dual employment as such is not prohibited by the Act . . . (but) were the school department employee to contract with the department in any other way, this would involve a violation of section 20 of the Act . . . be the employee special or regular."

Wheat . . .
To Sell, Send Good $ After Bad, Or Let It Rot?

The United States has been approached by the Soviet Union to sell its wheat before on several occasions, but always it was "imprudent," or "inconvenient" to sell to aid that country in buying itself out of its agricultural plight.

Not so this time. With the Cold War tensions reduced by the signing of the Test Ban Treaty, and with the Sino-Soviet split intensifying Russia's economic and political problems (and which appear to augur well for future increasingly friendly associations between the Soviet Union and the United States), the administration will probably go along with the possibility of negotiating the sale of about $380 million worth of wheat from our costly government storage bins where it just sits and waits for a use.

The worn analogy that the selling of U. S. goods (in this case wheat) to Russia would be like our selling of steel to Japan in the late 1930's is a little absurd in this case.

First of all, it costs the U. S. Government (and, of course, the taxpayers) millions each year to simply store wheat just to keep it off our markets so food prices won't drop (which is also kind of ridiculous).

Secondly, our present problem of the balance of international payments working against us is a serious one, and if it gets to be much more of a problem there will have to be either drastic economic measures taken or the dollar will drop in value.

Now if Russia has the money and wants to buy this "non-strategic" produce of ours, with the above two problems considered it would be asinine not to sell. Who cares if it helps the Russians out of their farming fix; because our conflict isn't with the Soviet people or their stomachs . . . it's with their philosophy of government as it exists today. Besides, in helping out their lack of wheat problem, we'll probably be helping ourselves more by reducing our overabundance of wheat problem. (A little bit, anyway.)

Finally, important notice should be given to the fact that several of our close international friends are trading farm produce with Russia, namely Canada and Australia. Should we, like an ostrich stick our head in the sand on an outmoded principle (vis-a-vis our trade relationships with the Soviets) until the sand smothers the well-being of our own economic trade?

Trade is an important ingredient of international relations, and to refuse to meet a nation half-way in this realm of friendly enterprise is to reject other areas of potential meetings of minds and agreements.

Of Writers And Writing

By Frank Procopio

Are Writers Made or Born?

At one time or another almost everyone who reads thinks he can better the efforts of a professionally trained writer. He feels certain his mind has become a veritable gusher of imagination, originality, and creative insight. So he sharpens a few pencils and applies the seat of pants to a cushion-soft chair. He scribbles a line, maybe two or three. Something's missing. He ponders over it. Finally, he turns a nearby radio on, waits for it to warm, then, as the first strains of music emit from it, declares: "Ah, inspiration!"

Now he begins to work with feverish abandon. Soon his flashing pencil has saturated the blank sheets of paper; made them vibrant, pulsating things with an existence unto themselves. As he finishes each page, he lays it fondly aside; beaming over it like a master craftsman. Even before the ink is dry on his manuscript envelope, and before the local post office has had a chance to impress its mark upon it, he dreams of his name in print; of prestige and recognition; of satisfaction; of wealth.

The days pass slowly; then drag at a torturous pace. A week goes by, and a second begins. He fears his masterpiece has been lost amid the confusion of some indifferent editor's desk. He dreads the thought of writing it again. At last, a long white envelope arrives, the name and address of a national magazine imprinted on the upper left-hand corner. Eagerly, he tears it open, and extracts from it a disappointingly small piece of blue or green or red paper. Summoning all his composure, he reads its shattering message: We are sorry that your manuscript does not meet our editorial requirements . . . Thank you for your interest.

Our aspiring writer couldn't have been hit harder with a nine-pound sledge hammer.

All writers are born; no amount of inspiration and hard work can make someone who happens to write a writer. But for those who have been gifted with the spark of writing genius, writing must be developed on a training ground that is both harsh and demanding. In this sense, writers are also made.

A few weeks ago I talked to Martin Shaughnessy of Princeton, Mass., who is a field representative for the Famous Writers School at Westport, Connecticut. I met Martin about a year ago, and at that time had decided to improve my writing by enrolling with the people of Westport via the correspondence scheme. But I have never been very dependable, and did not fulfill my obligation. So, when Martin revealed that he had recently enrolled Boston Traveler sports columnist, Tim Horgan, I felt a little better about my lack of consideration for a nice guy.

"The writer should observe, listen, look," says Rod Serling, one of the advisers on the Westport staff, "and then write. Nothing begets better writing than the simple process of writing." Briefly, this is the method the Famous Writers School employs to make ordinary writers good writers. Notice, I didn't say would-be writers. According to some literary theoreticians anybody who can sit down and scribble off a friendly letter to Aunt Susie is a potential Hemingway. The professionals at Westport think differently. They realize it's impossible to plant talent the way a farmer plants his crops. They wisely suggest that you take an initial testing to determine your intellectual and imaginative powers. If you fail, they plainly tell you so, and politely advise you to seek your livelihood in some other field.

What do you gain by taking a correspondence course? Probably more in the writing field than in any other, because writing can only be taught by application. The instructors at Westport see to it that you do a healthy share. Without being demanding they encourage some sort of daily discipline until, gradually, the student recognizes his mistakes and becomes aware of his progress.

There is a tremendous amount of satisfaction in writing, but, at the same time, a great deal of hard work and discouragement. Unless you're willing to accept constant criticism, do something else.

There is also a required sense of involvement with everything you do. You should read more than you write; no newspaper, magazine, or book, should escape your notice. You must learn to detach yourself from everyday environment, and still maintain a perspective that is entirely undetached. Above all, you must possess the quality of compassion. The heart of a writer must swell more sensitively than any other artist, because he deals with weakness and failure as well as strength and success; with death as well as life.

If, after considering all these things, you feel you still want to write, you may have the necessary stuff to succeed. It may be worth at least a try. Without obligation, contact Martin J. Shaughnessy, Gregory Hill Road, Princeton, Massachusetts.

Behind The Waterfowl Regulations

Northeast gunners can look forward to a modest relaxation of the recent tight restrictions on waterfowl hunting under the regulations just announced by the Secretary of the Interior, according to John S. Gottschalk, Director of the Northeast Region, Bureau of Sports Fisheries and Wildlife of Interior's Fish and Wildlife Service.

The addition of one bird in the bag, he explained, is a reflection of improved breeding conditions in the more westerly breeding grounds and to a generally satisfactory outlook for duck production in the nesting grounds of the Northeast.

Noting that despite curtailed seasons and bag limits, the black duck, the northeast hunter's prime target, has not bounced back to the abundance of the mid-50's, Gottschalk stated that it is believed that the one bird increase in bag limit and the 10 days added to the Canada Goose season, will provide more hunting opportunity without jeopardizing the essential breeding stocks.

He warned, however, that the federal bureau believes that any greater liberalization under present conditions would result in excessive shooting pressure and would likely delay recovery of black duck populations. "The duck situation, nationwide, is much improved", he said, "but the northeast gunner has no cause for a complacent attitude. Marsh destruction goes on apace in the wintering grounds and may prove, in the long run, to be far more calamitous to waterfowl than the gun."

Director Gottschalk points out that in forecasting changes in the fall flight of ducks in the Atlantic Flyway, breeding ground survey data is not used as in the other three flyways because of the physical difficulty of making surveys in the important Quebec-Labrador breeding grounds. It is necessary to depend to a large extent, he explains, on the results of the annual winter survey, plus the record of breeding success from the preceding year, in determining trends in the breeding population of this flyway.

The winter survey revealed that all ducks collectively, increased 7 percent with the chief increases occurring among mallard, shoveler, green-winged teal, redhead, ring-neck, and golden eye. There were decreases in scaup, ruddy, and merganser. The latter generally do not figure prominently in hunting interest in the Northeast.

Between the outside dates of Saturday, October 5, 1963 and Sunday, January 5, 1964, all States in this flyway may select concurrent open seasons on ducks (except canvasback and redhead) and coots of 50 consecutive days or a split season totaling 45 days with basic limits on ducks collectively of 3 daily and 6 in possession; or 40 consecutive days or a split season totaling 36 days with basic limits on ducks collectively of 4 daily and 8 in possession. The daily bag limit is 8 coots and the possession limit is 16 coots under either option. Shooting hours will be from sunrise to sunset, E.S.T.

The daily bag limit may not include more of the following species than: (a) 1 hooded merganser; (b) 2 wood ducks; (c) 2 mallard or black ducks, singly or in the aggregate of both kinds. The possession limit may not include more of the following species than: (a) 2 hooded mergansers; (b) 2 wood ducks; (c) 4 mallard or black ducks, singly or in the aggregate of both kinds.

In all States in the Flyway, a daily bag limit of 5 and a possession limit of 10 American and red-breasted mergansers, singly or in the aggregate of both kinds, is permitted in addition to the basic limits on ducks collectively.

In the entire States of Delaware, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, New York, Connecticut, Rhode Island, Massachusetts, Vermont, New Hampshire, and Maine, and in six specified areas of Florida, a daily bag limit of 2 and a possession of 4 scaup ducks is permitted in addition to the basic limits on ducks collectively.

Between the outside dates of Tuesday, October 1, 1963, and Wednesday, January 15, 1964, all States in this flyway may select concurrent open seasons on geese (except snow geese) and brant of 70 consecutive days or a split season totaling 70 days with a daily bag limit of 2 and a possession limit of 4 geese, and a daily bag and possession limit of 6 brant.

The shooting of crippled waterfowl from a motorboat under power will be permitted on an experimental basis on those coastal waters and all waters of rivers and streams lying seaward from the first upstream bridge in the States of Maine, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Rhode Island, and Connecticut; and in those coastal waters of New York State lying in Long Island and Block Island Sounds and the waters of Gardiner's Bay lying east of a line from the Long Beach lighthouse to the most easterly point of Ram Head Point light; but not including any coastal waters of New York lying on Shelter Island to the Cedar south of Long Island.

St. Mary's Fall Paper Drive Sunday, October 6

St. Mary's Parish will hold its annual Fall Paper Drive on Sunday, October 6, beginning at 1 p.m. The drive is under the charge of Father O'Donnell and Tony DeTeso, 75 Nelson Street.

Adult helpers and high school boys are needed to make the drive a success. Anyone wishing to help can contact either of the above, or leave his name at the rectory.

Parishioners are urged to tie their papers securely and not make the bundles too large. The drive will start at 1 p.m. and papers should be on the street before that time. In the past some have put their papers out after the trucks have passed their area and have made it necessary for extra trips to be made. Your cooperation in this regard and also to the tying of the paper will help us to Keep Winchester Clean.

Probation Officer From Middlesex Coming Here

The Women's Alliance of the Winchester Unitarian Society will have its first meeting of the year on October 8th. After a business meeting at 11:30, luncheon will be served at 12:45 by Mrs. Don R. Kroell and her committee.

Therafter, Miss Pauline M. Bachelder will speak upon the subject "Does Probation Rehabilitate?" Miss Bachelder is a graduate of Simmons College of Social Work and has been connected with the Middlesex County Probation Department for twenty years. Using specific cases, she will describe the methods used to rehabilitate women who have been guilty of crime.

She is optimistic about the results of her work and her talk should be of great interest. Preschool children may be cared for in the nursery as usual.

WYOMING SUMMER

By Mary O'Hara

What makes WYOMING SUMMER such a thoroughly satisfying book? It is very well written, but technique is never enough. The savor is in the personality of the author herself responding to her surroundings with explicit enjoyment. Here for a change is a nice person speaking—an intelligent, enthusiastic, optimistic person (note particularly that last adjective; it can't very often be used of writers today). However, I do not see how the book can be listed as a novel or even as fiction. Webster defines a novel as "an invented prose narrative" and WYOMING SUMMER is definitely not invented. It is a condensed and coalesced journal which had been kept intermittently for ten years when Miss O'Hara ran a summer camp for boys on Goose Bar Ranch in Wyoming. She showed it to a publisher, who suggested that the public would not be interested in an autobiographical book until she had first acquired fame as an author. So she very sensibly and successfully produced MY FRIEND FLICKA, THUNDERHEAD and GREEN GRASS of WYOMING—all based on the experiences in her journal.

Since I have not read the novels, I cannot say if WYOMING SUMMER will seem repetitive to those who have, but I'm sure I wouldn't mind if it did. Mary O'Hara records daily ranch life and the constant impact of the vivid scenery with perception and humor but an economy of adjectives. Most important are her own reactions to everything. She is sensitive but not sentimental, a mystic without being esoteric and she has an unusual ability to communicate her sensations to the reader. Of course she is an artist—most of all a musician. I know absolutely nothing about music but I was drawn into her descriptions of composing until I could acutally hear the pieces and felt all the frustration and triumph of creation.

Goose Bar Ranch is as full of adventure as the best Western and no individual is slighted. Every animal is a personality, even "Roamer" the bull—who broke loose and accompanied the author on a fishing trip. "He was curious. He saw something was going on and he wanted to know what it was. Besides, he didn't want to be left out. Animals are congenitally lonesome and seek companions—unless they are sick. Unless they are about to die. Unless they are about to give birth."

People are not neglected—the boys who come from the East to the dude ranch, the hired help, and of course Michael, Miss O'Hara's very interesting husband who needs, like all interesting husbands, to be "handled" on occasion. The book is not static in spite of no real plot but full of excitement and emotion. Mary O'Hara loves living and makes you wonder why anyone doesn't.

(Friends of Mrs. Elisabeth Shepard will be interested to know that she is Mary O'Hara's sister.)

Correction: The Book Review of TALE FOR THE MIRROR and TEXTURES OF LIFE by Hortense Calisher, published in the September 12 issue of the Star, was written by Leila-Jane Roberts, not by Katrine C. Laban as incorrectly stated.

Town Uses More $$ Than It Gives UF: '63 Drive Starts

Editor of the Star:

During the next month, over 700 Winchester citizens will be devoting a large portion of their free time to accomplish a goal which, in past years, has been far too difficult of attainment. Their task? Meeting Winchester's quota in the annual United Fund campaign.

Such a job should not be so difficult. Winchester boasts one of the highest per capita income rates in the country; the beauty of our homes and streets is well known throughout the state; our school system has the most modern equipment and the faculty is tops; Winchester's recreational and cultural facilities are unexcelled.

And yet, therein is the main reason for the difficulty in reaching the United Fund goal. Because of the town's overall wealth, we tend to think that few, if any, Winchester residents would find it necessary to call on United Fund services and that our contributions would, in reality, be helping other towns and cities with their needy.

This feeling represents, however, a false sense of security according to figures released by Audley Clarke, chairman of the 1963 UF campaign in Winchester.

Last year, over 5,700 Winchester citizens, both young and old, found it necessary to call upon various United Fund services. The cost, to the fund, of these particular services was $41,722.95. Exclusive of those who may have given at work, last year's local drive collected about $30,000.

The town of Wellesley, with which we frequently compare ourselves, gave two and one-half times as much.

This year, we would like to see Winchester go over the top...not merely for the sake of local pride in our town but because there are a great many of our fellow townspeople who are in need, one way or the other, of the United Fund services which our contributions make possible.

Sincerely,
Phil C. Wallwork

Drive to Limit Exec. Council's Power Clarified

Editor of the Star:

As general chairman of the current Statewide drive to curb the powers of the Executive Council through an initiative petition, I'd like to point out the council would retain its constitutional power to vote on pardons, as specified in the State Constitution.

The question has arisen, in view of the current interest in John J. Kerrigan's appeal for clemency form his murder conviction.

The petition, sponsored by the League of Women Voters of Massachusetts, the Massachusetts Jaycees and the Massachusetts Federation of Taxpayers Associations, would remove most of the statutory powers granted to the council that now prevent any Governor from running the Executive Branch efficiently. Constitutional powers would remain untouched.

Sincerely,
Ronald C. MacKenzie

Writer Advocates Town Honor Roll English Changes

Editor of the Star:

I would suggest that, prior to the dedication of the new Town Honor Roll, a contest be held to try to improve the English of the inscription on this Memorial.

Winchester students of the fourth and fifth grades only, to be eligible.

In the event that said contest does not bring forth a better heading than that now on display, an investigation of the Winchester schools would seem to be indicated.

Yours very truly,
J. V. Augusta

S.O.I. to Join Anti-Litter Civic Campaign

Editor of the Star:

We are happy to announce that the Winchester Lodge of the Sons of Italy are now enthusiastically joining us in our drive to Keep Winchester Tidy. This means that there will be about 2,000 members of these families who will see to it that no litter is discarded on our streets by any of them, and that they will help to spread the good word to others in the town who are really interested in MAKING WINCHESTER THE TIDIEST TOWN IN AMERICA.

Thank you very much for your fine cooperation.

Cordially yours,
J. F. Fitzsimmons

Official Installation: K of C Officers

Conflict

ute does not contain any penalty or general prohibition against dual office or position holding. A town employee is not, because of this statute, prohibited from having outside employment of a kind which does not violate the provisions of this chapter. Dual employment is not within the purview of the act and is not prohibited.

"I might add that numerous opinions that the Attorney General has issued make a similar assertion.

"From the facts as stated this involves an employment of Mr. Branley as a carpenter at an hourly wage. In my opinion this is not the type of contract referred to in Section 20 of the Chapter."

The town counsel continued his discussion of the matter by pointing out how future misunderstandings over dual employment as against conflicts of interests could be avoided, saying:

"In order to avoid any question in the future as to any additional or other work that might be done, or any similar cases that involve an employment basis I would advise that they be charged under the item of 'Personal Services' rather than under 'Other Expenses.'

Your letter also refers to the rendering of professional academic services and of your employing department heads and senior teachers in revising and rewriting curricula in different subjects, and that faculty members are occasionally employed for a limited number of weeks during the summer at the rate of $100 per week working under certain specified school department or other supervision.

"Based on the facts as submitted in your letter, it would likewise be my opinion that such employment is lawful and not forbidden under the 'Conflict of Interest' law. The same recommendation is renewed as to accounting for those services under 'Personal Services' rather than under 'Other Expenses".

After receiving copies of the town counsel's ruling from the School Committee (and after the School Committee had met in a two hour executive session with the Selectmen on Monday, September 23rd, reportedly to debate both the issue and the supposed propriety of releasing the information to the press), the Board of Selectmen announced on Monday night that the question of there being a conflict of interests had been satisfactorily answered in the negative by the town counsel and therefore the matter was officially closed as far as they were concerned.

The Selectmen also added in their discussion of the case that they hoped the individual involved in the question had not been embarrassed by the investigation, but that they were merely trying to protect him, the School Department, and the town in general from possible state intervention if there had in fact been any legal validity to the question of there being a conflict of interests.

Charity Ball Important For K. of C. Oct. 12

Council 210 of the Winchester Knights of Columbus held their 67th annual installation of officers last Saturday, September 28.

The installation was preceded by the Council chaplain Father James Kenny. After the Mass the members proceeded to the council home where the installation took place.

The installation was performed by District Deputy James Curran and his staff of the North Cambride Council. Upon closing the Grand Knight Edward McManus outlined forthcoming events for Winchester Council, which include the present membership drive which climaxes at the next meeting of October 7th. For any Catholic gentleman who is interested in participating, the program will include a movie on Columbianism, and an active discussion period in which the prospective members will participate.

After the installation, the wives and members enjoyed dinner and dancing for the remainder of the evening.

Winchester Council No. 210 will participate in the Columbus Day activities of the Massachusetts State Council, Knights of Columbus, Saturday, October 12. Grand Knight Edward McManus will head a large number of the local knights with their families in attending a special Solemn High Mass at the Church of the Holy Name in West Roxbury, at 12:00 noon.

The day long observance will close in the evening when a large delegation of members and their ladies attend the Knights of Columbus Charity Ball in the main ballroom of the Sheraton-Plaza Hotel, Boston.

The Columbus Day ball, an activity of the Knights of Columbus in Massachusetts for over half a century, has become the major source of revenue for the organization's Charity Fund which is disbursed to the bishops of the dioceses in the Commonwealth for use among retarded or exceptional children.

Jury

sentence is automatically appealable, however, and the date of execution—if it is to be carried out—may be delayed some time.

Dusablon's defense attorney told the all-male jury that they were being called upon "to play God" in their adjudgment of a penalty. But Judge Charles Marks told the jury that they should have "no thoughts you condemned a man to death."

The judge praised the jury for their work, said the evidence was "quite clear as to the guilt," and that the sentences were fully warranted. "The sentences are the result of their own actions," he added. He described the crimes as "vicious," and remarked that if the trial had been conducted under the old law before September 1 and if the jury had recommended mercy, "I don't think I would have accepted that recommendation."

Police said that Dusablon had admitted that he fired shots into the heads of all six victims with a .32 caliber pistol in a one week robbery and shooting spree that netted less than a total of $1000 in loot.

Killed were: Frank C. Ross, 59, of Harlow Street, Woburn, who was found dead in his Walnut Street antique shop after being robbed of about $100 on Christmas Eve; Henry Jassem, 54, who was found dead in his Ninth Avenue novelty shop on Wednesday, December 26, after being robbed of a ring and $20; and, within an eight-hour period on Friday, Martin Himmelstein, 47, was found shot in his wine and liquor store in Manhattan; Morris Neuringer, 59, was discovered murdered in the bathroom of his liquor store; Harry Schneider, 50, was found dead in his Army and Navy surplus goods store; and Caesar Largo, 62, an employee at Himmelstein's store, died from a critical bullet wound in the Knickerbocker Hospital.

New York Detective George Barrett, who headed the search for the killers, said the single motive in every case was robbery, and the largest amount taken in any robbery-murder was $100.

New York police had found an $850 ring taken in one of the robberies at a pawn shop. Dusablon had pawned the ring, police said, and signed both his name and Winchester, Massachusetts, address. A check of New York hotels located Dusablon at the Hotel Belvedere in Times Square, where he had registered under his own name. Both men were arrested by police at gunpoint on Friday night, December 28th.

Dusablon was born and raised in Woburn, the oldest of four children. He quit Woburn High School after a short stay there, and built up a long juvenile court record, including indecent assault in Boston.

After moving to Winchester, local police said their troubles with Dusablon began. At one point, not too long before the shooting and death spree began in December, police had occasion to chase Dusablon for discharging firearms within the town limits.

Fire Department

Fire Station will remain at the same level for the protection of the township. The shorter hours of duty will be taken up by the new men, while still maintaining the two shift operation: one shift from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m., and the other from 6 o'clock to 8 in the morning.

In explaining the new schedule of operation, Chief Amico pointed out that there are seven groups of six men on the roster. There are always two groups on duty, both during the day and during the night, with a captain and a lieutenant almost always on duty.

This system, called the Malden plan, as opposed to the Boston plan which the firefighters voted against, allows each firefighter to have two 3-day weekends off in every six week period. Under the old system, the firefighters got one two day weekend off in every seven week period.

ton. The portion being done in Winchester runs from Arlington to Woburn, and this section is being done at a cost of $75,000 to the telephone company.

Approximately 600 new trunk lines will be needed to service the overall area as a traffic carrier between the central offices in the towns and Boston, according to Mr. Hunter.

Mr. Hunter said the following statistics point up the telephone company's need for laying new trunk lines. From January in 1953 to the first of 1961, the number of telephones in Winchester increased from 6,898 to 11,195. Similarly, in Burlington the number jumped from 952 to 8,922; in Woburn from 6,687 to 13,395; in Arlington from 16,708 to 24,660; and in Lexington from 7,950 to 31,340.

Fishing is not permitted in the reservoirs and naturally when the pond is not fished the fish grow very large but do not harm the water. Periodically the State Deparment of Conservation is requested to remove the fish and they are placed in nearby ponds where fishing is permitted. We believe in this present law which allows only the Department of Conservation the right to go into any reservoir, with the permission of the local Water Department.

In 1957 the Town voted to take additional water from the Metropolitan District Commission and an 18 inch connection and a pumping station were installed at Spot Pond so that when the level of the reservoirs goes down the Town may pump water from Spot Pond into the Middle Reservoir. This link has the capacity to deliver as much water as it is expected will be required by our maximum anticipated population.

The Town owes a debt of gratitude to the far-sighted men who developed a system which furnishes water of such softness and purity at a cost far below that of most supplies.

Democratic Town Committee Notes

Members need no longer reserve October 9 for a meeting in the Small Town Hall. It is hoped to have that meeting later. In the meantime, plans are underway to obtain the presence of Senator Mario Umana for the second meeting in October, the date to be fixed at his convenience.

Senator Umana is the gentleman who has a plan to submit which would obviate some of the difficulties which arose during the last primary. His ideas will be reported in the Star after we will have had an opportunity to hear him here in Winchester. Those of us who heard him recently in Medford appreciate how worthwhile his plan is.

The Town Committee's sympathy has been extended to the family of the late George Govostes. Mrs. Govostes and son George, Jr., are associate members of our committee.

One of our associate members, John V. Costello, left for Washington, D. C. Sunday afternoon to be present Monday and Tuesday at the Conference of the American Association of Junior College Executives. Jack is the very active acting director of the Massachusetts set-up of Junior Colleges.

League Announces October Schedule

What does the Test Ban Treaty really say? Should disarmament negotiations be continued to avoid wars? The United Nations and Arms Control will be the topic under discussion at the first series of unit discussion groups to be presented by the League of Women Voters October 8, 9 and 10.

Dr. Stephen A. Thernstrom, a member of the Massachusetts Political Action for Peace executive committee, showed deep understanding of this tonic when he spoke at the first general meeting of the League on September 25 at the home of Mrs. Robert Nyere. Dr. Thernstrom, instructor of history and literature at Harvard University, is also a member of the research associates of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology-Harvard University Joint Center for Urban Studies.

The purpose of the League of Women Voters is to promote political responsibility through informed and active participation of citizens in government. The League is divided into informal groups or Units to discuss this timely topic. These unit meetings have a discussion leader and a member of a resource committee, which has studied the subject thoroughly. These meetings are scheduled so that everyone who is interested will be able to select a convenient time or location.

The unit meetings are scheduled as follows:

Tuesday, October 8, 7:45 p.m.: Mrs. Lewis L. Wadsworth, 54 Wedgemere Avenue, hostess; Mrs. Sears Walker (729-3564), chairman.

Wednesday, October 9, 1:00 p.m.: Mrs. O. Guinn Smith, 38 Rangeley Road, hostess; Mrs. James E. Kimball (729-2347), chairman.

Wednesday, October 9, 7:45 p.m.: Mrs. Richard W. Freeman, Jr., 14 Franklin Road, hostess; Mrs. David J. Ashton (729-2708), chairman.

Thursday, October 10, 9:30 a.m.: Mrs. Franklin K. Patterson, 3 Herrick Street, hostess; Mrs. John S. Ahern (729-3914), chairman.

For the convenience of those attending the Thursday morning discussion, babysitting is available for pre-school children at the home of Mrs. Marshall J. Kincaid, 12 Prospect Street. For further information concerning these meetings, call the chairman of the unit you wish to attend. Women who are not members of the league are welcome to attend these meetings as well as the membership.

• MAY WE speak frankly about costs? It seems to us that making this a "hush-hush" subject only leads to dissatisfaction and possible recrimination later on. At our establishment it is possible to clarify the subject of costs — itemized and total — privately and discreetly: It is something between the person making the arrangements and the funeral director to which no outsider need be a party. Experience repeatedly has shown us that frankness in advance of arrangements removes many doubts and worries from the mind of the person who discusses them with us.

Five thousand signatures in two weeks from October 14 to November 1, 1963, is the goal in Winchester of the initiative petition drive now being undertaken by the League of Women Voters and the Junior Chamber of Commerce. Circulation of the petitions asking for abolition of the statutory powers of the Governors' Council is the most intensive statewide action program attempted in recent years by LWV-Jaycees.

The success of the drive is expected to be a clear indication to the Legislature of the wishes of the citizens, to the end that the provisions of the petition will be adopted into law by May 16 of next year. Failure of the Legislature to act will necessitate the collection of 11,000 additional signatures so that the issue may go before the voters as a referendum question in November of 1964.

A Stronger Governor Is The Goal

Massachusetts is one of three states with constitutional provision for an executive council, Maine and New Hampshire being the other two. The seven other states which originally had such councils have long since abolished them. The Council has long been "an albatross hung around the necks of Massachusetts Governors," and, significantly, John Adams, author of the Constitution, wished that the Council could be abolished. All suporters of the petition would agree that it is more important for what it adds to the Governor's authority than for what it subtracts from the Council's.

The intent of the petition is to give the Governor the authority to manage the executive branch by making It possible for him to appoint or remove his subordinates without the consent of the council. The obstructionist tactics of recent councils has served to emphasize that this reform is a needed first step toward strengthening the executive, remembering always that the Governor is answerable to the citizens and can be defeated at the polls.

The council will retain all those powers granted to it by the Constitution, primary among those being the aproval of all judicial appointments. In addition, appointments to such quasi-judicial positions as the Youth Service Board, the Parole Board, the Industrial Accident Board, the Appellate Tax Board and the Public Utilities Commission have been excepted from the scope of the presently proposed petition. The Council will no longer need concern itself with the myriad duties assigned to it over the years by statute, particularly those involved with the business conducted by the state government, approval of contracts, leases, etc.

Townspeople will soon be contacted (during October 14-November 1) to lend their signatures and support to this important step toward good government. If you wish to sign this petition and have not been contacted prior to November 1, please telephone Mr. Richard F. Brackett, PA 9-2444, or Mrs. James R. Willoughby, PA 9-5137.

"I Don't Like The Catholic Church BECAUSE..."

Ask many non-Catholics to finish this sentence in 25 words or less, and their answers might surprise you.

Some of them, no doubt, would attribute their opposition to doctrinal differences. They might be critical of some or all of the Seven Sacraments accepted by Catholics. Others might not like the Church's ritual and devotions, or even the Catholic attitude on social questions.

But none of these is the dominant reason for the opposition of some people . . . and the unwillingness of others to inquire into the truths of Catholicism.

The great stumbling block is the unwillingness of many people to believe that Priests and Bishops and a Pope . . . all men like themselves . . . are vested with divine authority to speak for God.

They refuse to believe that another human being has the authority to forgive sin, even though Christ told the Apostles: "Whose sins you shall forgive, they are forgiven them: whose sins you shall retain, they are retained." They reject the idea that God delegated any of His powers to mere men, even though Christ gave Peter the power "to bind or loose on earth," and promised the disciples: "He that heareth you, heareth me."

Those who reject the discipline of the Church will contend, at times, that God would not have delegated His powers to any but the spiritually perfect . . . and there are no such people. In contradiction of this, Christ clearly did appoint deputies to teach His gospel and . . . though He did not make them personally immune to temptation and sin . . . He guaranteed them against error in the teaching of His gospel.

It is quite possible that a perfectly sincere person . . . after fully investigating the Catholic religion . . . might not in good conscience be convinced that he should become a Catholic. But if it is true . . . as claimed since the time of Peter . . . that the Catholic Church is Christ's true church, those seeking religious truth should not be deterred by personal objections to some aspects of Catholicism which may become acceptable to them upon investigation.

"What Do You Find Wrong With The Catholic Church?" is the title of a frank and highly interesting pamphlet just published. It discusses freely why more than 550 million people throughout the world gladly accept the discipline of the Church, and why many others reject it. Upon request we will mail you a free copy. Nobody will call on you. Just ask for Pamphlet No. KC-54.

N. E. Painting Show Opens Sunday In Lincoln

Forty Artists In Invitational Exhibition At DeCordova Museum

The public is invited to attend the opening of the De Cordova Museum's first major exhibition of the fall season on Sunday afternoon, October 6, from 2 to 5 p.m. Entitled "New England Art, Part II, Paintings," the exhibition presents a servey of the best in contemporary New England painting. Forty top-flight artists are participating in the show; each artist is represented by a recent, important work selected for the exhibition by the Museum's Director, Frederick Walkey.

The exhibition is the second in a series of five shows entitled "New England Art in Five Parts" which the De Cordova Musuem is presenting in 1963 and 1964. The first exhibition in the series, a competitive drawing show, was presented last spring, and subsequent exhibitions will be devoted to paintings on paper, sculpture, graphics and new talent.

Director Frederick Walkey has visited the studios of artists throughout New England to select work for the New England painting exhibition. He describes the result as "aggressively mid-20th century" in contrast to the more traditional New England drawing exhibition last spring. Without exception, the paintings in the current exhibition are authoritative by mature artists. Each artist has a personal aesthetic conviction, and displayed in paintings that range in size from 2 feet by 2 feet to monumental 6 feet by 12 feet canvases.

Among the painters from the Boston area who are participating in the exhibition are Joseph Ablow, Albert Alcalay, David Aronson, Ros Barron, Cynthia Bloom, Ralph Coburn, Gardner Cox, George Dergalis, Fannie Hillsmith, Beverly Hallam, Arthur Hoener, Gyorgy Kepes, Biganess Livingstone, Robert Neuman, Frank Pearson, Arthur Polonsky, Murray Reich, Renee Rothbein, Donald Stoltenberg, John Thornton, and Jack Wolfe.

While "Part II, Paintings" is on exhibition, a series of four illustrated lectures will be presented by four of the participating artists. Albert Alcalay, well-known Boston artist, will present a semi-autobiographical talk, "The Growth of an Artist"; Richard Lytle, Dean of the Silvermine School of Art and formerly of the Yale faculty, calls his talk on the artist as teacher, "Feedback'; John Thornton, who graduated from Princeton with a degree in Engineering and has since pursued a successful career as a painter, will speak on "Surface, Scale and the Edge'; and Murray Reich, who teaches art at Boston University, will speak on "Surrealist Expressionism—New York to Boston."

Allstate Life Sells $1 Billion In Record Time

Allstate Life Insurance Company has surpassed the historic one billion dollar level of individual policyholder's insurance in force in record breaking time.

President Judson B. Branch on Monday delivered to a Chicago suburban family the policy that put Allstate Life over the insurance industry's milestone just six years after the company began operatons in September, 1957.

Of the more than 1,400 U. S. Legal Reserve Life Companies, no other has reached this billion dollars of individual ordinary insurance in force in so short a time. According to latest industry records, only 57 other companies ever have achieved the goal and it has taken them 25 to 50 years or more to do it, Mr. Branch pointed out.

Allstate Life's individual insurance in force increased more than $183,000,000 during the first nine months of 1963, Mr. Branch said. This was 44 per cent greater than the in force gain of $127,000,000 during a comparable period of 1962.

"This acceleration of life insurance sales continues our growth at a rate far faster than the average for the industry, Mr. Branch declared.

Total Allstate Life Insurance in force including both individual and group insurance, now exceeds $2 billon 500 million, Mr. Branch said.

The Life Company's growth has been notable because its planned expansion was on a state by state basis, selling only in Illinois during the first three months of operation. The company now writes in all 50 states, the District of Columbia and Canada.

Allstate Life is a subsidiary of Allstate Insurance Company, which is wholly owned by Sears, Roebuck and Co. Allstate Life's agents also offer Allstate insurance for the auto, family, home and business.

Mme. Pandit Will Speak Before Technology Dames

The more than thirty Winchester members of the Technology Dames of MIT and their husbands are invited to a special meeting of their group featuring Mme. Vijaya Lakshmi Pandit, head of India's delegation to the United Nations, at the Hayden Library Lounge on Sunday, October 6, at 3:30.

According to Mrs. John Elliott, of 118 Arlington Street, a member of the group's Board of Advisors, Mme. Pandit's acceptance was received too late for mail notification of her appearance before this first meeting on the year's theme, "The American Woman in Society Today."

Mme. Pandit, sister of India's Prime Minister Nehru, was her country's first ambassador to USSR in 1947. In 1949 she was appointed ambassador to the United States and head of the Indian UN delegation. Elected president of the UN General Assembly in 1953, she was the first woman to occupy that post.

The Dames will officially open their meetings on October 14 at Kresge Auditorium at 8:00 p.m. Speaker will be MIT president, Dr. Julius Stratton. A social hour will follow when the members will have an opportunity to become acquainted with the various interest groups offered throughout the year. Groups planned are: bridge, arts and crafts, swimming, sewing, bowling, exercises and dance, reading, current events, child study, and choral society.

Membership is open to any wife, mother or sister of any student or teaching fellow of MIT.

YOUR Pharmacist SPEAKS

By: Fred McCormack

Mankind owes a great debt to Joseph Lister, for it is very possible that the lives saved by this brilliant surgeon's work are numbered in the millions.

It was Lister who introduced antisepsis less than a century ago, and this means of preventing infection removed the final great stumbling block to modern surgery.

In Lister's day, surgery was a chancy and discouraging proposition in that no matter how fine the surgeon's talent and despite careful planning, patient mortality was alarmingly high due to post-surgery infections.

In our day, prescriptions are becoming increasingly more important to our health and well being from time to time. Look for a complete prescription service at McCORMACK'S APOTHECARY, 568 Main St. Phone PA 9-2700. 24-hour prescription service. Free local delivery.

Language Clinic Specialist Speaks To Mystic Mothers

The factors of language and reading problems were highlighted in a talk given to the Mystic Mothers' Association last week by a staff member of the Massachusetts General Hospital.

Brought out in numbers by the beautiful fall weather last Thursday, the mothers were greeted by Mrs. David Mears, president, who reported on the activities of the association since the last meeting in May. She then introduced Mrs. David Choate, president of the Community School Association, who briefly addressed the audience, outlining the purposes and sponsorships of the parent organization.

The guest speaker for the day was Mrs. Alice Garside, reading supervisor of the Language Clinic at the Massachusetts General Hospital. Mrs. Garside held her listeners captive as she read an autobiography written by a young student, a patient at the clinic, who set forth his experiences with a language disabality.

Upon conclusion of the report, Mrs. Garside pointed out that many of the factors that contributed to this patient's language disability are similar to those of most children possessing reading problems. She stated that the child with a reading problem often finds difficulty in the related areas of writing, spelling, speech and articulation, and that the aim of the clinic in helping the patient is to treat the symptom.

This is a subject of great interest to many parents, and Mrs. Garside in concluding her speech urged all with an interest in this problem to read the article published in the September 14th issue of the "New Yorker" magazine.

Mrs. Mears thanked Mrs. Garside and the business meeting was adjourned. Refreshments were served under the direction of Mrs. Robert Black and her committee, and the pleasant custom of inviting the teachers to join the mothers at this point was an enjoyable conclusion to the fall meeting.

NEC Affirms "3rd Level" Aviation's Area Importance

A new and important phase of air transportation is presently being maintained in New England by the small airlines. Known in airline industry jargon as "third level lines" and more popularly referred to as "scheduled air taxis, they supplement the major and regional air services.

To many air travelers these sleek, pert little planes have aroused nebulous speculation as they wing smartly in and out among the preponderance of jets at Logan and other major airports.

In June 1962, the New England Council reports they conducted an experiment and subsequently consultants' reports to the Council stated that there are 14 potential "air taxi or feeder service routes" in the six-state region. The report went on to say that six of these were already in service, mostly south of Boston. The development of northern New England's future air service will be influenced by probable curtailment of rail passenger service and extension of super highways.

At present, the Council states, there are eight third level ventures, five of which are based in Massachusetts and three in Connecticut. These include National Executive Flight Service, Boston-Provincetown Air Lines, Yankee Air Lines, Wiggins, Colony Air Lines, Bi-Air and Pilgrim. There are also several helicopter taxis home based at Logan. Carson Helicopter of New England, Inc., and a "scheduled Helicopter Airlines, Inc., are two servicing the area.

The Council has participated in a successful campaign to have the Port Authority cut the landing fee of $3.00 in half and give two small carriers which were formerly located out in left field new convenient locations near the passenger terminal.

Economic survival for future small carriers will be dependent upon wise planning and new legislation which would permit contracts for carrying air mail and star route air mail. The Council has recommended that the public and pertinent government agencies enthusiastically back these third level airlines in pioneering a new and progressive service to all of New England.

EMARC's Meeting Describes Progress Of Camp Hope

The first monthly meeting of EMARC, East Middlesex Association for Retarded Children, was held Wednesday, September 25th, at the Reading Community Center on 52 Sanborn Street, Reading at 8 p.m.

Father George Smith, pastor of St. Patrick's Church in Stoneham, gave the invocation.

The program for the evening concerned Camp Hope, Summer Day Camp for Retarded Children.

Robert Ford of Lynn, director of the Camp, introduced Miss Elizabeth Osborne of Winchester who was in charge of the arts and crafts program at the camp. Miss Osborne is now teaching at the Wrentham State School for nine weeks training. She is a senior at Fitchburg State College and hopes to teach a trainable class in this vicinity.

Mr. Ford described an ordinary day at the camp and showed slides of one of the cookouts at Pine Banks in Malden.

Mrs. Gloria Johnson, chairman of the camp, told the audience, "This was the most successful year the camp has had. There were 49 children registered, three of whom came from Winchester. The staff did a terrific job, giving so much of themselves to make the program a success."

William Powers of Lynnfield, president of EMARC, informed everyone that the Boy Scout Troop under the leadership of Mr. Thomas Basti of Burlington will begin meeting at the Occupational Center on Wednesday, October 2nd. The activities group will also have their first meeting of the season Monday, October 7th, at the Occupational Center on 52 Sanborn Street, Reading.

Fire Prevention Week Is Oct. 6-12

Fire killed 11,800 Americans last year, over half of them in their own homes, according to National Fire Protection Association estimates.

Fire destroyed approximately $1.5 billion worth of property in the same period, in a total of about 2,100,000 fires.

The great tragedy of these statistics, Winchester Fire Chief Frank Amico points out, is that most of this waste of lives and property is avoidable. The record could be far different if everyone would assume personal responsibility for observing the rules of fire safety at home and on the job. "Don't Give Fire A Place to Start" is the watchword.

Fire Prevention Week which this year falls in the period October 6-12, provides an excellent opportunity to re-emphasize the fact that preventing fires is everybody's job.

The local observance of Fire Prevention Week will be sponsored by the Winchester Fire Department, according to Chief Amico.

So please make it a point to drop in at the bloodmobile on October 11th, or better still phone 729-2300 for an appointment.

Anderson Heads Special School Sub-Committee

The town's Citizens' Advisory Committee on Secondary School-College Relations, the special subcommittee which has been at work for the School Department since 1955, had its first meeting of the year last week at which it elected a chairman and secretary and greeted seven new members.

Robert M. Anderson, of 8 Winslow Road, professor of education and director of the Elementary School Internship Program at Harvard University, was elected to chair the group and Frederick J. Zappala, of 24 Sargent Road, professor of accounting at Boston College, will act as secretary.

Joining the group this year are Howard R. Bartlett of 15 Herrick Street, professor of humanities at M.I.T.; John Gibson of 20 Cabot Street, associate professor of government at Tufts University; John F. McLaughlin of 18 Lloyd Street, dean of faculty at Mass. Bay Community College; Don A. Orton of 6 Wincrest Drive, president of Lesley College; Franklin Patterson of 3 Herrick Street, director of the Lincoln Filene Center at Tufts University; Loring Thompson of 17 Nassau Drive, executive assistant to the president at Northeastern University; and Joshua Whatmough of 17 Central Street, professor emeritus at Harvard University.

Returnig to the group after a year's leave of absence are Wallace McDonald, director of financial aid at Harvard, Norman Padelford, professor of political science at M.I.T. and Eugene G. Rochow, professor of chemistry at Harvard.

The 24 men and women who serve on this committee, the majority of whom are administrators or faculty members at neighboring colleges and universities, work according to the committee's original directive to advise the school committee on how it can improve the educational preparation of that large segment of our school population which is going on to higher education. In its area the committee has consistently made valuable contributions since its inception.

Returning committee members are: Mrs. Elizabeth B. Baker, of the Community School Association; Dana M. Cotton, executive secretary, New England Association of Secondary Schools and Colleges; Thomas E. Crooks, dean of special students and Richard G. King, associate director of admissions, of Harvard; Leonard C. Mead, vice-provost, Earle F. Littleton, head of the department of civil-engineering, and Alice L. Palubinskas and Robert D. The Rhododendron

Here in New England we're very lucky; our climate is one of the few in which Rhododendrons and Azaleas will thrive. Out in the central plains, the winters are too cold and dry. The far West, while not afflicted with severe winters, does not receive enough rain during the summer months.

The eastern seaboard states boast an ideal climate for Rhododendrons and other members of its family. Temperate winters and moist summers constitute the ideal environment.

Rhododendrons and Azaleas are both members of the Heath Family, or Ericaceae. Other relatives are the Mountain Laurel, Blueberry, Andromeda, and the Heathers and Heaths of Scotland, to name a few.

All varieties possess definite similarities in both flower and general plant structure.

A bell-shaped flower formed by the joining of four or five petals is the distinct trademark. Every member of the Heath Family shows a marked preference for acid soils, and most are evergreen, although the same plant may retain its leaves in one section but may be deciduous when moved to another.

Historians say that the Chinese were cultivating Azaleas during the eighth century. It is supposed that the Dutch East India Company is responsible for the introduction of this Family to Europe.

Rhododendrons are ideally suited for naturalization in a woodland garden. Moisture in the air as well as in the ground is a requirement which must be met.

All Heaths are shallow-rooted, so make sure the ground around your plants is always moist. Soil with a pH of 4.0 to 5.5 would be ideal.

The location for the Rhododendron must be chosen with extreme care. The site must give protection from cold winter winds, a controlled amount of sunlight, and, to a certain degree, control of the soil temperature.

Large shade trees in the area are usually the answer to all the requirements. The resulting shade checks rapid evaporation during the summer and preserves an even temperature during the winter. The latter is extremely important since rapid freezing and thawing is the worst enemy of these plants.

Filtered sunlight is the ideal light for all Heaths. If planted in an area which receives morning sun, Easterly shade must be provided during the winter.

Rhododendrons require the minimum amount of maintenance. As mentioned before, the plants are shallow-rooted, so one should not cultivate around them. Since a mulch is advised, weeds usually do not appear, and the less pruning the better.

Winter protection is the only time-consuming task connected with the plants. It is a common rule of thumb that, "Rhododendrons are small enough to need winter-protection until they're so big that the operation would be too expensive and time-consuming."

Some devoted Rhododendron enthusiasts, however, spray onto all their shrubs a thin wax mixture as winter-protection. The equipment necessary for this operation is, however, quite expensive and is out of the reach of most home gardeners.

A more sensible manner of protecting your shrubs during the winter is to enclose them with some sort of lath-work paneling, which would permit air circulation. The plants do not need to be kept warm. What they do need is protection from the cold winds and bright sun.

None of the members of the Heath Family seem to be especially susceptible to disease and insect attacks.

The appearance of dark spots on the leaves is not the result of a disease, but is from sunlight striking the leaves when wet.

Rhododendrons may be propagated by cuttings, grafts, air layering or seeds. The seeds germinate quickly, but inferior varieties usually are produced, so this method is seldom practiced by the home gardener.

Cuttings or grafts are quite possible, but are not desirable since it takes many years for them to bloom.

The best way to acquire plants is to purchase them from a reliable nurseryman. He can give you valuable advice in choosing the right plant for your location.

20 Backstage Workers Busy On "Relative Values"

Chairmen of the many essential groups working behind the scenes at the fall production of the Unitarian Players have now assumed their roles as the cast moves into its busy rehearsal schedule.

The play, Noel Coward's "Relative Values" is to be staged at 8:30 on the evenings of November 1 and 2 at the Unitarian Church. Direction is by Jacqueline Sibley who will be remembered for her fine direction in last spring's production "Everybody Loves Opal". "Relative Values" is a light comedy about an English household of means, who must solve the problem of what to do if m'lady's maid should become an in-law in a not-so-classless society.

Production is being handled by Mrs. Woodford Wilcox. Chairmen of the several working committees are: set design, Jacqueline Sibley; set construction, Woodford Wilcox; stage manager, Steffi Rath; lighting, William Sorenson; set decor, Dr. Robert Storer; hand props, Mrs. John White; costumes, Phyllis Stearns; make-up, Betty Ann Pritchard; sound effects, Ted Knowlton; prompters, Peg Smith and Mrs. Joseph Vaccaro, Jr.; program, Mrs. Joseph Willoughby; ushers, John White; rehearsal refreshments, Nancy Boyle; audience refreshments, Patricia Astill and Marjorie Bradford; tickets, Ellen Kimball; publicity, Ken Astill; and cast party, Charlotte LeClaire.

Plan Winter Car Care Now, ALA Advises

Get your car ready for winter now, the Automobile Legal Association today urged motorists, because of the unpredictability of New England weather.

A.L.A. safety experts offered the following suggestions:

(1) check the battery, and electrical system;

(2) replace worn windshield wipers;

(3) check condition of brakes, tires, and wheel alignment;

(4) check snow chains for broken, or missing links;

(5) have cooling system thoroughly flushed and drained, before filling the radiator with anti-freeze;

(6) apply a protective coating of wax or polish to the car's paint finish;

(7) give your car a motor tune-up.

Waiting until the last minute, the A.L.A. advised motorists, may result in needless expense and inconvenience.

Duplicate Bridge Club

Section A of the game on September 25 was conducted as a dress rehearsal for the 1963 team of four championship. Players who entered this practice round selected their own partners but were then combined by lot with another pair to make up a team of four for the evening. The resulting nine-table movement produced an average score of 24 and a very close finish in which the top three teams were separated by no more than two points—the equivalent of one board out of the 24 played by the field.

Section B was a standard ten-table Mitchell with a 63 "par" to shoot at. The leading finishers were:

Donna Redpath and Alta Stewart	84½
Betty Yeomans and Gerry Lawrence	73
Martha Walker and Ellen Schofield	73

This hand was played last week, and is interesting from three directions (1) bidding in a team of four match, (2) handling interference bidding, and (3) play of the trump suit, depending upon whether or not one is in a small or grand slam.

My lovely partner opened the bidding with one club, and South, Bill Duryea, used an interference bid of three diamonds, first to show his partner a long diamond suit and a weak hand, and secondly to interrupt the bidding between East and West at any low level. West bid three spades, and North passed. East "the beautiful one," proceeded directly to four no trump, and after Blackwood responses by me, of five hearts and then six diamonds, jumped directly to seven spades.

Her judgment was excellent as always, however, she did have some assistance by the bidding. While pre-empt interference bidding does often interrupt communication between the opponents, it does tell East that South has essentially a weak hand, and when West freely bids three spades, and North does not support South at any higher level, the indication is that North also has a rather weak hand, and the great balance of power is in the East-West direction.

The play of the hand is interesting also from the point of view of the final contract. North led quite properly the KD, which East, the dummy, overtook with the ace. The spade ace was then played to see if the queen was a singleton, and when this key card did not fall, declarer came to his hand with the ace of hearts, and played the spade Jack. When North played low, West played the ace, catching South's spade queen and the remainder of the hand was a lay down.

The play of the hand depends entirely on whether one is in 6 or 7 spades. In six spades you play for the 2-2 split in spades, first because if it works you make seven, and even if it does not work, you can, with no freak distribution in clubs, run your club tricks and allow South to take the queen of spades whenever he wishes, because you can pitch your losing diamond and heart on the long clubs.

The one unusual aspect of this hand as played, for those not familiar with team of four play, is that the great majority of players played this hand at four spades. This would seem a gross underbid. However, you must remember your partners in a team match play these same hands in the opposite direction from which you play them, and many players apparently felt they could not take a chance on bidding a slam which might be in the least risky because if the hand falls short of a slam requirement they would also be affecting their partners chances as well as their own.

MOTTO: When playing with a team of four, don't look for an astronomical score, when playing regular game, go for broke or take the blame.

U.S. Labor Dept. Announces Change

New England residents seeking information, official forms or literature concerning the U. S. Welfare and Pension Plans Disclosure Act should direct queries henceforth to the Office of Labor-Management and Welfare-Pension Reports, 333 Washington Street, Boston.

The location change became necessary because the Bureau of Labor-Management Reports and Office of Welfare and Pension Plans have merged in Washington. Therefore, the Boston Area Office of the BLMR is now the focal point for the merged agencies.

Previously, local and field inquiries of the OWPP were handled by the regional and field offices of Wage and Hour and Public Contracts Divisions at 18 Oliver Street.

V-O Parents Plan Mothers' Coffee, Talk on New Math

The Vinson-Owen Parents' Association which started its yearly program with its traditional serving of a buffet luncheon to the teachers on the first day of school, will hold another annual event on October 8th.

This is to be the informal coffee hour for mothers new to the school this year, giving them a chance to meet the association board members and become acquainted with the school.

The first general meeting of the Parents' Association will be held on October 17, at 8 p.m. in the school auditorium. Mr. John J. Waite, Jr., head of the mathematics department of the high school, will speak to the parents about the new concept of teaching mathematics which was introduced in the elementary schools this year.

For the January meeting of the association it has been planned to hold a panel discussion on "Disciplining the Child at Home and at School." It is hoped to have as panel members a teacher, a child social worker or psychologist, and two parents. Dr. Clare Corcoran, principal of Vinson-Owen, will be moderator.

St. Mary's Mothers' Club

On Wednesday evening, September 18th, the St. Mary's Mothers' Club held their first meeting of the season. Monsignor Manion, spiritual director of the club, said the opening prayer, and the president, Mrs. George A. Demars then proceeded with the business of the evening. The mothers were welcomed back to the club, and asked to be sure to sign in as being present at the meeting. This is important to our children also, because the class having the most mothers in attendance are free of homework for one evening.

There were 23 new mothers introduced at this meeting, and as each name was called, they were presented with a lovely corsage to welcome them into the Mothers' Club, by Mrs. George A. Kean, Jr.

Mrs. John O'Grady, chairman of the Country Store was called upon to tell of her plans for this years Country Store. On November 16th, Saturday afternoon at 2 p.m., there will be a special Country Store for the children, and on November 20th, after the regular meeting of the Mothers' Club, the drawings will take place for the grand prizes of which they number 28 in all. Chance books are now in circulation and very much in demand. These wonderful prizes are well worth taking a chance on. There will be more publicity regarding this in a special article to appear soon in the Winchester Star.

The president thanked Mrs. George A. Kean, Jr., for her wonderful spirit and co-operation when called upon to take the responsibility of the first meeting, which involved the making of the lovely corsages for the new mothers, and in decorating the hall most attractively. Mrs. William P. Farnham and her committee did an excellent job on the refreshments, which everyone thoroughly enjoyed. Mrs. DeMars wishes again to thank Mrs. Farnham, and her committee, Mrs. Ralph Wilhelm, Mrs. Louis J. Covino, Mrs. John Connaughton, Mrs. Francis X. Hurley, Mrs. John W. Campbell, Mrs. John Buttimer, Mrs. Allen Rogers, and Mrs. Norman Doucette.

Monsignor Manion was the guest speaker for the evening, and his program was both enlightening and entertaining, and thoroughly enjoyed by all.

The meeting was a most successful one, and the new president, Mrs. DeMars and her fellow officers are to be congratulated. Every member of the club is anxiously awaiting the next meeting, which will be October 16th.

HARMONY

A man who'd have a happy life should show affection to his wife. Pay her a compliment each day — a few kind words go a long way. Avoid long drawn-out arguments — they rarely do make any sense. And wives, if you'd be happy, too, the same advice applies to you.

Avoid the unpleasantness of running out of fuel oil. Enjoy the convenience of automatic fuel deliveries with B. T. Conlon Fuel Service, 27 Lake Avenue, Woburn. Phone WE 3-1720 for prompt service.

Democratic Panel Is Postponed

The Winchester Democratic Town Committee regretfully announces that the legislative panel scheduled for Wednesday evening, October 9th, will be postponed.

A strenous effort to find Democratic legislators to participate in a discussion of the legislature was fruitless with one important exception, Senator Philibert L. Pellegrini. He, as a member of the Senate from the Sixth Middlesex District of which Winchester is a part, accepted the invitation.

The committee feels, however, that a member of the General Court and a representative of the Governor's department should appear with the Senator and that the meeting should be postponed until these people can arrange to appear.

The committee will continue its efforts to organize the panel as it considers closing the gap between voter and legislator one of its prime responsibilities.

"What Shall We Do About Ethyl" Is Forum Topic

"What Shall We Do About Ethyl?" is the question that the Reverend W. Robert Mayhew will ask the Senior Forum in chapel this Sunday, October 6. Reverend Mayhew is well qualified to discuss this timely question for he has made a study of the subject and in 1945 he graduated from the the Yale School of Alcohol Studies. At present he is the executive director of the Massachusetts Temperance League.

Reverend Mayhew, a native of Walpole, is a graduate of the Bangor Theological Seminary and has served churches in Maine, Vermont and Massachusetts. He has also served as legislative agent for the Council of Churches in both the Maine legislature and the Vermont legislature.

His concern is not limited to the New England area for he is executive director for the New England Committee for Heifer Project. This past summer he spent a month in a work tour camp in Israel and Greece with seven adults and 32 high schoolers.

The chaplains for the service will be Dan Brink, the Forum treasurer, assisted by Ted Cook. The deacons will be Jeff Strout and Steve Carpenter and the ushers James Gustin and Russ Willis.

This Friday evening Forumites are looking forward to the first dance of the season to be held in Chidley Hall at 8:00 p.m. Preparations for this dance have been made by the social committee under the chairmanship of Jeff Strout and Kandy McConnell with assistance from Mr. and Mrs. Harold J. Pyne, the adult advisers.

The annual fall outing will be held October 12 at the summer home of Mr. and Mrs. David Choate in Essex. Mary Mouradian and Al Kimball, the co-chairmen of the sport's committee, are in charge of the arrangements for this with the help of Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Kimball, sports advisers, and Mr. and Mrs. Richard Keppler, the Forum superintendents.

ACROSS THE COUNTER

"Make a mental inventory of the articles in your wardrobe and your home," suggests the famed business philosopher, William Feather. "What mocks you? Usually it's the articles you bought because they seemed cheap.

"The fine hat on which you spent twice as much as you intended still looks good. You are pleased with the maker, pleased with the salesman, pleased with yourself. It has outlasted three cheap hats and still looks better than any cheap hat ever looked, even on the day of purchase.

"There's profit in selling cheap things," Mr. Feather concluded, "but no profit in buying them, if you can afford something better. When you buy the best you get the real bargains."

The "best" is the only kind of insurance protection we handle. The companies we represent are known for "high-quality" insurance coverages, backed by a long history of "fair" claims treatment, and dependability.

In insurance, as in hats, the top quality can't always be purchased at the lowest possible price. But don't forget — and this will especially prove true in the event of an insurable loss —quality is remembered long after price is forgotten. May we serve you?

Watson Captures Winchester Town Tennis Singles

In a superb exhibition of tennis, Charles Watson captured the Winchester Town singles title last Sunday at William Packer Courts, downing Henry Fitts 6-0, 6-0, 6-1. Playing virtually errorless tennis from the outset, Watson rolled up 15 straight games before yielding a game to Fitts in the third net. The latter was never able to get untracked and was unable to generate any pace or depth against Watson who ran down everything and counter-attacked with accuracy. Kept under constant pressure by Watson's topped forehand and fine backhand, Fitts could do nothing right and was helpless to turn the tide.

The court surface, made heavy by rain, had been Fitts' ally on Saturday against Art Hills in the semi-final as it muffled Hills' big serve and volley. But in the final, the ally became an enemy, as Fitts could not put the ball away and was checkmated and outmaneuvered constantly by Watson's depth and pin point control. Watson's choice of shot was excellent throughout as was his touch. It was a victory earned on merit and was without doubt the champion's best match of the tournament.

The losing semi-finalists in the men's singles were Bill Keeton and Art Hills. Keeton was overmatched against Watson and went down 6-0, 6-1. There were long rallies from the baseline in this match in which Keeton showed some excellent ground strokes, but Watson generally hit the last one and was never in trouble.

The Hills-Fitts match was a brief encounter which saw the classic Fitts ground strokes unlimbered with devastating effect, as he made a procession of the first set at 6-0. Hills rallied in the second set to lead 3-2, but got no closer as Fitts regained control and ran out the set and match 6-3.

A lively doubles semi-final saw Bill Macneil and Watson defeat Bob Horne-Josiah Bacon 7-5, 6-3. The winners were hard-pressed to take the first set being harassed by the excellent lobs and searing southpaw forehands of Bacon and Horne. However, with Macneil hitting his overhead decisively and Watson playing soundly in all departments, the eventual winners could not be denied.

The women's singles title was won by Dorothy Hills over Jan Klippel 6-2, 6-3. This was an extremely well played match pitting the youthful Miss Klippel against a player who has consistently been ranked among the top ten New England women. Miss Klippel displayed poise and a match play temperament beyond her years, as she contested every point and game, whacking her forehand lustily and covering court with grace and speed. However, Mrs. Hills had her well forged ground strokes working off both wings to good effect and was too strong in all phases of the game.

The ladies' double was won by the team of Mrs. Hills and left-handed Dorothy Wells. The champions were extended in the semis by Maury Wingate and Jan Hughes before winning 9-7, 6-4. It was nip and tuck all the way in this long match with the winners, just a shade better.

In the other semi-final bracket, teenagers Ann Walsh-Jan Klippel had too much fire power for Joan Bird and Dot Dexter. In the final, the Misses Walsh and Klippel hit out strongly off their forehands to grab an early 3-1 lead. They were unable to hold the advantage as Miss Wells and Mrs. Hills warmed to their task and pulled out the set 7-5. The final set and the match went to the Wells-Hills combine 6-2.

Bob Joslin and Art Hills won the men's doubles crown for the second time in as many attempts, besting Bill Macneil and Charles Watson 6-1, 3-6, 6-1, 6-2. The first set was played in a drizzling rain and was quickly banked by the champions. Play was suspended at this point due to the rain which made the courts unplayable. After a three hour break, play resumed. By virtue of strong returns of service, Watson and Macneil broke through Hills serve and held their own serves to run out the second set 6-3. However, Hills and Joslin came back strong, camped at the net and were never threatened thereafter, volleying skillfully and seldom relinquishing the attack.

Dorothy Hills became a triple winner as she and her son, Gerald, won the mixed doubles without loss of a set. In the final, the champions downed Bill Macneil-Ann Walsh, the top seeded team 7-5, 6-2. In the first set, Macneil was able to bring his heavy service to bear and assisted by Miss Walsh's sturdy forehand, caused discomfort in the Hills camp. After edging by the deuced set, the Hills clearly established their superiority as Mrs. Hills dominated the court with her solid all around play.

BOWLING

S.O.I. Men

Yale took six points from Georgetown to win top place in the fourteen team standing while it dropped the losers from fourth to sixth position. Hitting over the 300 mark for the victors were Capt. Richie Bucci with 130-111-102, Bill Fiore 108-135-89 and Muddy Saragosa 93-115-96. Capt. Tony Chefalo and Pucky Perritano did likewise for the losers with respective totals of 114-105-90 and 98-97-110.

Notre Dame moved down to second ranking despite the fact it defeated tenth place St. Mary's 6-2. Dan Gattineri was the sole Notre Damer over the three century mark with 100-84-123 while St. Mary's had no one reaching that mark although Capt. Johnny Mangano missed it by three big pins.

Holy Cross climbed three rungs to third after taking a 6-2 win over eighth place Harvard. The three top performers for the victors were Lefty Saraco 113-108-93, Al Repucci 101-98-112 and Capt. Musky Tofuri 112-99-94. Old reliable Hokie Procopio showed his form for Harvard with perfect strings of 121-105-98.

Army moved from seventh to fourth spot after shutting out Alabama 8-0. Doing their share for Army were Correction Fiore 103-112-106, Jack McIsaac 101-104-118 and Capt. Choppers Gangi 94-139-106. High man for the losers was Capt. Dick Tofuri with 87-114-102.

Splitting against thirteenth place Maryland moved California from third to fifth position with Nick Molea and Capt. Dick Trabucco showing good effort for Cal with 112-98-115 and 104-96-102 respectively. Gaspar Lentine was the only one of the Maryland unit to hit over the 300 mark with 89-116-99.

Carl Bertolucci and Paul Amico teamed up for Penn to take Navy 6-2, which moved Penn up to seventh while Navy remains in twelfth slot. Carl and Paul rolled respective strings of 111-94-124 and 102-100-121 while Navy's Capt. Richie Riga continued to knock them over for 117-127-128 and received little help from Frank Provinzano who finished up with 95-117-91.

The win over ninth place Bates resulted into Boston College's getting out of the cellar position to eleventh and it must be said the entire team rolled over the 300 aim for a combined team total of 1608 which is some going. In order of their spectacular performances were Max LaCarrubba 111-129-113, Capt. Tony Saraco 94-133-112, Geri Cerrulli's 96-94-118, Andy Buzzotta 97-105-102 and Mario Lentine 92-108-104. Three of Bates' rollers showed excellent effort in a losing cause and they were Roundy Fiore 116-126-93, Maxie DiMambro 98-117-101 and Capt. Bob Fiore 116-91-95.

After three weeks of bowling, the front running Rams continue to set the pace. It remains to be seen how well they will hold up when they face some real competition. The word is out that their collars get tight when the chips are down.

Patsy Tofuri threw another tantrum last Thursday. He concluded his act with a stance similar to the "Appeal to the Great Spirit" as seen in front of the Museum of Fine Arts.

Although the teams are full now, anyone wishing to bowl can leave his name at the Council Home and be registered when an opening is available.

S.O.I. Women

What a nite! The third week found the alleys buzzing with excitement. The action was tremendous! Certain keglers sure made those pins fly. Polly Giacalone's high single of 117 is evidence of this. Polly was just bubbling with pride.

Marge Gambino is back to her old form. Her 3 string total of 312 makes it certain. How gracefully those pins hit the mat for her.

Ginger Maggio's spectacular high jump from 18th to 5th place should make her a candidate for the Olympics. Keep moving that cross bar higher Ginger.

The Kools are still top team but I hear they play Cusi Fiore's team next week and Cusi has promised them a real good fight. From past experience she is the girl that can do it. A real nice girl with a lovely personality that's Cusi, our ex-chairlady.

I'd like to say Cusi you did a wonderful job as chairlady last year. Everything was done just beautifully. Thank you again from all of us.

Indoor Courses On Motor Boating State Sponsored

Free courses in motorboating will be opened this month by the Massachusetts Division of Motorboats in cooperation with school and civic authorities of 23 communities, State Director Wilton Vaugh announced.

He said that the State is inviting without charge men and women, boys and girls, teenagers and their elders. They will be welcome to learn about better boating whether or not they own their own craft.

The instructors, movies, books and writing materials will be supplied by the State Division of Motorboats. The courses will meet one night a week for two hours each night for six weeks.

The courses will consist of information that everyone should know. They will take in the elements of the new federal and state boating laws, regulations, rules of the marine road, aids to navigation and the proper use of boating equipment.

Persons completing the six-week course may take an examination to qualify for a certificate of training. The questions will be based on the simple essentials of safe boating. Upon graduation, those seeking advanced courses in piloting and navigation are urged to follow up their training by taking free courses with the United States Coast Guard Auxiliary or the U. S. Power Squadrons, nearest their homes.

The list of courses and their locations, hours of meetings, and instructors may be obtained from Wilton Vaugh, State Director, Massachusetts Division of Motorboats, 100 Nashua Street, Boston, or call CA 7-7800, Ext. 218.

Boston Pro Soccer Club Meets Newark Sunday

Stymied by the weatherman this past weekend, the Boston Professional Soccer Club, Boston's newest sports entry, will make its second home appearance of the season Sunday, October 6, at Chelsea Stadium with the formidable Newark Falcons providing the opposition. Kickoff will be at 2:30 p.m.

The Hub booters are unbeaten in two American Soccer League games since bringing pro soccer back to Boston after an absence of 35 years. They defeated the Internationals of Long Island in the opener at home, then tied them in the return game in New York.

Four international stars have been added to the Boston roster in recent weeks. They include: Manuel Lopez and George Sanchez Garcia of Argentina, Nestor Caceres of Peru, and Hector Marinaro of Mexico. Also represented on the Boston squad are Colombia, Italy, Austria, Scotland, Ireland, Greece, as well as the United States.

Navy Scholarships 1963 Exam

Applications are now available for the Navy's eighteenth annual NROTC qualification test, according to Bernard J. Silva, guidance supervisor at Winchester High School. The nationwide examination will be given December 14, 1963, and all eligible male high school seniors and graduates may apply.

On the basis of this test personal interviews, physical examinations, and other factors, Mr. Silva explained, over 2000 young men will be given college educations as midshipmen in NROTC units in 52 well-known colleges and universities throughout the country.

Registration for the test will close November 22. Informational bulletins and applications are available from Mr. Silva or the nearest U. S. Navy Recruiting Station.

A successful applicant receives financial aid for four years of college. This includes tuition, books, uniforms, miscellaneous expenses, and a $50.00 per month retainer fee. After successfully completing college degree requirements and naval science training, NROTC midshipmen become commissioned officers in the U. S. Navy or Marine Corps.

During their training, regular NROTC midshipmen enjoy three summer cruises with various naval units, including visits to foreign ports. These cruises help them learn more about the variety of interesting and challenging opportunities available to them as naval officers.

Male citizens of the United States who will be over 17 but not yet 21 on June 30, 1964, and who are now high school seniors or graduates, are eligible to apply for the December 14, 1963, NROTC qualifying test. Those who attain qualifying scores will be interviewed and given physical examinations next February.

Hunting On Sudbury Refuge

The Bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wildlife of the Department of the Interior's Fish and Wildlife Service has announced that, although it has acquired purchase options for more than 800 of the 4000 acres that will comprise the new Sudbury National Wildlife Refuge, actual title still remains in private ownership. Therefore, hunters, and other users of these lands, must continue their activities this coming season under the same conditions which have prevailed in past years. This means that state and local regulations governing hunting and trespass will continue in force, at least for the 1963 hunting season.

The new Refuge will consist mostly of marshlands, exceptionally valuable to wildlife, along the Sudbury and Concord Rivers in the towns of Concord, Lincoln, Sudbury, Wayland, Billerica, Carlisle and Bedford.

The World Series of baseball is upon us again. You can tell by the way people who normally never read a sports page are suddenly asking for inning-by-inning scores. Who seems to be the least interested? You guessed it—the players of the other non-participating eighteen major league teams. . . .Carl Yastremski is completing his studies at Merrimac College, Gene Conley (who built a backboard in his driveway and ultimately handled a basketball more than he did a baseball this summer) rejoins the New York Knicks, Dick Stuart huddles with radio station WEZE and Dick Radatz with WCOP for new sports programs, Warren Spahn climbs aboard a cowpony and surveys his cattle kingdom in Louisiana, and the fiery Alvin Dark of San Francisco's deflated Giants barnstorms through the Southwest selling oil rigging equipment . . .As for the Series itself it will be Dodger speed opposed to Yankee luck, and speed should win it in six . . . The Town Bowling League is desperately short of teams and members. Anyone interested should leave his name at the Strike Lane Alleys . . . My deepest appreciation to the sports department of the Providence Journal, Steamroller general manager Joe McGee, and his wife, Ann, George Duffy, and all the others who extended their hospitality at City Stadium last week . . . End Roger DeMinico contributed importantly to that stolid Massachusetts line that stopped Harvard cold last Saturday . . . And up at Hanover, Dana Kelly must be getting plenty of ribbing on the number of one-yard touchdowns he's made in the last two seasons . . . Those ever-increasing soccer fans will be pleased to note that WGBH-TV, Channel 2, will televise the Harvard-Tufts game tonight at 7:30 . . . If Newton's Joe DeNucci hasn't developed a punch to go along with that left jab of his, he can expect trouble tomorrow night from Florentino Fernandez at Boston Arena (Channel 7). Fernandez has kayoed opponents his last four times out . . . Wait'll you get a look at the 6ft. 7in. Hawaiian that Tom McNeeley has signed to fight October 14 . . . The Boston Celtics, with new veterans Willie Naulls and Johnny McCarthy and rookie Bill Green, have all intentions of copping their seventh championship in eight attempts. Even with Cousy gone, the depth is potent enough to form a second unit that could hold its own in the N.B.A. . . . The Patriots, without Ron Burton and Don Webb, looked like a second place team last Sunday in their 14-10 defeat to Denver. But the Pats have a strange pattern of going from mediocrity to greatness in just a week's time. Considering that, they are liable to pulverize the New York Jets this Saturday night . . . Overheard in the press box at Providence: "How would you like to see a Patriot backfield of Larry Garron, Ron Burton, and Joe Bellino, by 1965?" . . . Let's hope that more Sachem fans will support their team at Stoneham this week. The 20-6 loss to Concord is not in any way indicative of what these boys can do. Coach Knowlton told them Monday afternoon that he had not given up on them, and that he didn't expect them to give up on themselves. They need, he said, that second effort - more commonly known as the desire to win - which cannot be taught.

Bellino Captures Providence

The Navy did, reversing a similar decision they made in 1961 in the case of a Holyoke semi-pro team. With something more than normal excitement, McGee and publicist George Duffy began releasing the news. It went to the Providence Journal and charged through the city. Then they called Boston, but disbelieving editors hung up on them. Finally, UPI confirmed the reports, and newspapers across the country set up appropriate headlines for their afternoon editions.

"His enthusiasm was genuine," McGee continued, "he never once tried to give us the impression that he was doing us a favor. He simply wanted to play football again. Maybe, too, he wanted to prove to himself that after a layoff of three years he could. But whatever his reason, he's done for Providence professional football what Red Grange did for the National Football League. He's given it a spark of revitalization."

Besides having the same first names, Joe McGee and Joe Bellino have one other thing in common, they both have pretty wives named Ann. Ann McGee, who assisted with the ticket sale at the Boston game, was continually reminded of the former Navy all American's prestige. "You don't realize how popular he is," she said, "until something like this happens, and you're involved. Everybody you meet is talking about him. Our advance ticket sale was tremendous."

"Why not?" Joe McGee added. "His name's on a par with Paul Hornung, Elgin Baylor, and Bob Cousy."

Football fans began gathering at City Stadium two hours before game time last Friday. Some of them came from Pawtucket and Newport, some from Fall River and New Bedford. A great many drove down from Winchester. Sports Illustrated sent a photographer because they sensed something journalistically historic about Joe's professional debut.

City Stadium is situated about five miles north of downtown Providence. With a capacity of 14,500, its oval concrete structure stands as a kind of monument to the quiet residential area of Mt. Pleasant, which it serves. It is here that Mt. Pleasant High School plays on Saturday afternoons. Not far away is the almost seminary-like atmosphere of Rhode Island University.

By 8:15 p.m. the atmosphere at City Stadium was electric. When they announced the Providence offensive lineup, and the players trotted out to the middle of the field, healthy applause greeted the names of Fowlkes, MacDonald, Gibbons, and Hargraves. Then, wearing No.12, Joe Bellino, "all-American from the United States Naval Academy," was introduced, and the ovation was enough to warm the heart of every Winchesterite there.

It was the same during the game. Whenever Joe carried and failed to gain, you could slice the disappointment with a knife; when he displayed that free-wheeling style of his, the whole stadium seemed to gasp with excitement and expectation. Even in the press box, those writers who are gifted with being able to talk and write at the same time also got in their share of cheers. Vociferously, they let it be known what they thought of the interference that wasn't there.

On the second play from scrimmage, Joe, playing flanker right (he played at both flanks and both halfback positions before the night was over) slanted toward center and had beaten his man, but quarterback Jerry Morgan's pass was 10 yards off its mark. This was Joe's first play involvement in professional ball. The first time he carried on a running play he was nearly trapped for a loss, but managed to slice his way forward to the line of scrimmage.

Half-way through the first period, and with Providence leading 3-0, Joe put gains of 5 and 20 yards back-to-back for those who might have been harboring doubts about his ability. With his patented head and shoulder and hip fakes, he had Sweeper coach Lou Fucillo shaking his own head in dismay.

But the Sweepers rebounded at the start of the second half when former B.U. standout Jackie Farland tossed to Gary Farina for a 30 yard scoring play, and Fucillo brightened as Boston pulled ahead, 7-6.

Handling the ball only eight times in the third period, Providence's attack appeared seriously in need of a lift. It came at the beginning of the fourth period when Jim Adams returned a punt from his own 20 to the Boston 46. Two plays later, Joe burst through the middle of the Boston line on a draw play, picked up fine blocking, and scampered 34 yards into the end zone to put Providence ahead, 12-7.

On the ensuing kickoff, the Steamrollers recovered a Boston fumble on the 28 yard line. A carry by fullback Russ Warren, and two by Joe brought the ball to the nine, from where Carl Mobley hit Curt Lucas under the goalposts, and Providence went further ahead, 19-7.

With a minute and thirty seconds remaining in the game, Joe came off the field and the crowd gave him a well-deserved ovation. He had hardly sat down when linebacker Vito Pontarelli intercepted a Boston pass and went 40 yards for Providence's final touchdown, and a decisive 26-7 victory.

"Having had only two days to work out with the team," Joe said after the game, "I felt reasonably good. My legs could be a little stronger, though."

He told Joe McHenry of the Providence Journal that the game compared with his last Army-Navy encounter. Joe also had high praise for Boston's offensive right end, Charley Martin, former Tufts captain, and who happens to be Winchester High's line coach. Ironically, the two spent four days with the Sachems some three weeks ago.

"When you're running well," Joe said with a waver of excitement, "the blocking just seems to fall into place. That's the way it was tonight." Several tired and happy Providence faces agreed with him.

Joe hopes to play five or six games with Providence, commuting from Charleston, South Carolina. The next home game at City Stadium will be against the Newark Bears on Saturday night, October 12...Then, on the 19th, he will again face the Boston Sweepers at Everett, Massachusetts... By November, he'll be aboard a minesweeper stationed at Sasebo, Japan...In a year or so, he may be playing football again.

Soccer Squad Tipped 2-0

Last week the Winchester High School soccer team inaugurated its first season as a recognized varsity group. The first game opposition, Medford, had achieved soccer fame in recent years, last year winning the Massachusetts scholastic championship. The outlook was not bright for Winchester's initial encounter. But the Sachem booters did not take the press clippings seriously.

Having worked hard to get into shape and to sharpen skills, the Winchester team played a tremendous first half, holding Medford scoreless. And it should be noted that Winchester played aggressively enough to gain two very close scoring opportunities early in the game. These threats, along with others, were repelled, but with greater experience similar opportunities should be turned into scores.

The second half found the Medford team in better control. With constant pressure on the Winchester defense, Medford scored two goals making the final score 2-0. In spite of the loss, coaches Lew Knight and Gene Booley were heartened by their team's showing. They expect to see some wins registered during this first soccer season.

The JV team lost by a similar score, 2-0, to the Medford JV team. Considering the fact that Medford starts soccer as early as 7th grade, both JV and Varsity squads gave very fine accounts of themselves.

The first team for the Medford game included Walt Harwood and Peter Harvey at wings; Ernie Sackett and Ron Scherban as the inside forwards; Tibor Saddler at center forward; halfbacks Dick Penner, Bob Pierce, and Hugh Fisher; fullbacks Randy Randlett, and Barry Weeks; and Dennis O'Connell as goalie.

In all, 40 students have been playing soccer. The coaches feel that the attitude of each of the players has been excellent, this attitude aiding the players in learning the fundamentals of the game.

With the support of athletic director Henry Knowlton and the school committee, the team has acquired uniforms and other soccer equipment for their eight game schedule. The team hopes to obtain a field for home soccer matches next year, this year the team having to travel to opponents fields for the games.

Lynch Wins 22-0

Lynch Jr. High held a pep rally in the gym on last Thursday afternoon in preparation for its opening football game the next day against Muzzey Jr. High of Lexington.

Principal Gardner Handy and Coach Frank Provinzano were featured speakers at the rally with the attracting cheerleaders gaining the true spirit of the student body and members of the faculty in shouting various forms of Rah-Rahs.

Friday's game was the first athletic event played at the Lynch Field and the locals celebrated with a 22-0 victory over the visitors.

Muzzey won the toss and elected to receive with Jim Mumma doing the kicking. Muzzey went for a first down on the first series of plays but were then forced to punt.

With Lynch back on its own forty, quarterback Brian Collins called upon his backs Joe Monterisi, Bob Russo and Jim Mumma to carry the ball to Muzzey's eleven where left halfback Joe Monterisi skirted his right end to score standing up. The rush for extra points failed.

After the kickoff Muzzey showed a little life with some good runs by Paul Bellino, nephew of All-America Joe, but once in Lynch's territory they were stalled and were forced to punt. For the remainder of the first period, the ball changed hands frequently but Lynch caught fire again in the second period when the combined efforts of Mumma, Russo and Monterisi brought the ball to the eight and Collins called upon Russo to hit right tackle for the second tally. Collins then scored two on a "sneak" up the middle to put Lynch ahead 14-0 at half time.

Neither team scored in the third and with but two minutes left in the game, Collins lateralled to Monterisi who then picked right end Kevin Barry for a beautiful pass that covered 55 yards and a third score. Collins then handed off to Mumma who hit right tackle for two points.

Coach Provinzano was pleased with the performance of his squad and in particular his standouts were the backs as previously mentioned and centers Paul Ferguson and Kenneth Albertelli; ends, Kevin Sullivan, Bob Hilfinger and Kevin Barry; tackles, Bob Brunkhorst, John Martin, and John Luongo and guard Andrew Saraco.

Lynch travels to Belmont tomorrow (Friday) for its second game and hopes to return with its second victory.

McCall Jr. High Shows Promise

After an initial win over Diamond Jr. High of Lexington 8-0, Coach Jim Phillips feels his squad will fare well enough throughout the rest of the season.

For those who might be interested in watching these boys when they return home to Manchester Field on October 11 against Melrose, the following offensive unit has been made available to the Star: John Murphy, center; guards, Steve Harris and John Queen; tackles, Bob Reardon and Kenny Lavelle; ends, Ken Garvey and Mark Sullivan; quarterback, Dave DeTeso; halfbacks, John Gentile and Paul Eaton; fullback, Tony Buzzotta. Added to the defensive unit are tackle, Andy Kincaid; linebacker, Bob Blanchette; halfback, Danny McGee; and safetyman, Bob Nutile.

Badminton Starts October 10th

The Winchester Badminton Club announces that the 1963-64 season will open on Thursday, October 10. As in the past, regular sessions will be held in the high school gymnasium on Tuesday and Thursday nights from 7:30 to 10:30 p.m.

This year's Board of Governors of the club is as follows: Bob Gallant, president; Brad Hersey, treasurer; Maxine Kajander, secretary; and Aggie Bixler, Whit Gray, Dan Hritzay and Bill MacNeill.

Sachems Lose Opener At Concord, 20-6

The inspired running of junior halfback Billy Donovan, the clear-headed play calling of 6ft. 3in. quarterback Seth Aronie, and a defense that refused to yield anything inside the 10-yard line, proved too much for the Sachems last Saturday at Concord. Not even halfback Ed Cutting, who scored Winchester's lone touchdown and carried sixteen times for 96 yards, could alter the Patriots' three-pronged attack.

In reality, it was a two-quarter game, with most of the heroics occurring in the first half. On each of the first three times that Concord got possession of the ball they scored. Before the Sachems had realized what hit them, they were staring at a 20-point deficit.

Fullback Bob Hurstak and end Ken Anderson combined to put Concord ahead on just the fifth play of the game, when Hurstak, on an option, drew safetyman Jack Kimball out of position, and heaved a 23-yard pass that Anderson pulled in over his shoulder, and completed the 54-yard scoring play untouched. A two-point conversion attempt failed.

Four plays later, Concord began their second scoring drive from their own 46. They moved with almost effortless ease. Hurstak carried twice and picked up 6. Aronie then rifled a pass to Anderson who was cut down on the Winchester 41. Donovan spun for 6 more yards as though he had dieteted last summer on old Joe Bellino movies. After Aronie crossed up everybody with a keep around left end to the 27, Donovan sped to the 15 on a well executed trap play. Halfback John Boynton carried to the 5, and, finally, Donovan broke off tackle and scampered the last 10 yards into the end zone. A two-point conversion attempt failed.

The Sachems' second attempt at moving the ball was only fractionally better than their first. Two plunges by Cutting and one by Kimball barely picked up their first down on their own 44. However, signal-caller Bob Branley persisted in trying to penetrate a Concord line that gave early evidence it wasn't going to be penetrated, and after three rushes that gained only 5 yards, Jack Kimball punted from his own 36 to the Concord 30.

Hurstak wasted no time in picking up 6 yards to the 36, Donovan skirted left end for 24 more to the Winchester 40, and the Patriots were on the move again. Once, when Frank Frongillo, Vic Lawson, and a host of others, broke through and nailed Aronie back on the 46, Sachems fans had something to buzz about. But a reliable Billy Donovan burst through on a draw play to the 30, and Sachem spirits dampened again. From that point it took Concord eight more plays before Donovan carried over from the 2. The speedster accounted for two more points when second-string quarterback Ed Woodin pitched out to him on the conversion.

Now, with less than four minutes remaining in the half, dame fortune rode with a line-drive kickoff that smacked into the arms of guard Walt Mears, who ran ahead to the Concord 48. After Jack Kimball advanced to the 36 Branley passed to Vic Papadinis, who tossed off to Cutting, who sprinted all the way to the 11 before he was pulled down. From here, it took seven more plays and a first down on the one-yard line, before the over-worked Cutting plunged over just before time ran out in the first half. Branley's pass attempt for two extra points was slapped down in the end zone.

The second half saw Winchester run off 24 plays, and Concord 23, a statistic that is indicative of a much more closely contested game. The fact that no scoring was done can be attributed to both defensive teams; that the Sachems didn't at least tally once more, to a Patriot unit that, in a way, resembled the New York Giants of three years ago.

Between the end of the third period and the beginning of the fourth, Winchester started a drive from the 50-yard line. It consumed fourteen plays, and ended abortively on the one-foot line. Cutting and Steve Goldin, who had replaced Kimball at fullback, shared eleven of those plays. These two boys ran remarkably well considering that they got meager protection from both sagging ends of the offensive line.

Scouting Report

STONEHAM

Coach: Wilbur Halliday

'62 Record: 3-5-0

Stoneham has what is commonly referred to in sports circles as a mystery team. In other words, they could just as easily sit on top of the Middlesex heap as become its floor mat. Four regulars and nine lettermen are returning from last year which, at least on paper, makes this squad as formidable as Concord. Sufficient depth, however, is Stoneham's most pressing problem. A break here and there in the line could possibly spell ruin to a promising backfield. Last year, after back to back victories over Winchester (0-20) and Lexington, Stoneham's offense fell completely apart and failed to score in their next four encounters. Players to watch: Ron Romboli, Dick Morrill, and James Margarita, backs; Jim Mitchell, a tackle; and Brad Yancey, an end.

Sachem Sidelines

Don Allard got together with Sachem line coach Charley Martin before the game and hashed over the Boston Sweepers' 26-7 loss to the Providence Steamrollers and Joe Bellino. Allard & Martin played left and right offensives ends respectively. Their receptions from a nervous and occasionally erratic Jackie Farland kept Boston in contention until the final period. . . . Most disappointing of all last Saturday was to see a Winchester squad that had such exceptional spirit get defeated in their opener. Captain Buddy Rotondi phoned the players at 10:30 on Friday night and everyone was checked in . . . Jackie Kimball continues to do a first-rate job at punting. In the third period he lofted one that carried from his own 20 to the Concord 30, a total distance of 50 yards. Good punting in any league . . . The way the Concord defensive unit plugged up holes, and the way the linebackers roamed and reddogged and resolved, it's doubtful if any team in the league could have beaten them on that particular afternoon, including Wakefield . . . Bob Branley is a quarterback with a fair amount of talent. For what he lacks he has to make up for with imagination and confidence; confidence in both himself and his teammates. No quarterback, even in high school ball, is going to get by on lobbed, almost manually guided passes. The prominence of professional football, where the signal-caller has to be half machine, half mathematician, has seen to that . . . Only about 3,000 gathered at Concord's new golf course-like athletic field; about 2,000 of those paraded happily home.

Winchester

Ends: Johnson, Grant, Papadinis, Faieta, Puffer; tackles: Frongillo, A. Kimball, Tuttle; guards: Lawson, Aiello, Mears, Kelly, Gilberti; centers: Stavaridis, Stafford; backs: Branley, Cutting, J. Kimball, Stavros, Crockett, Garvey, Goldin.

Concord

Sachems Expect Rugged Game With Stoneham

Winchester's 1963 football season got away to a disappointing start last Saturday at Concord where the Concord Patriots pinned a 20-6 defeat on the Winchester Sachems. These are the sort of games you expect in first efforts and Coach Knowlton, while disappointed with his charges' showing, was not too badly upset. That quick touchdown in the early minutes of play was the difference between the two teams and the Winchester player who let the Concord boy get behind him could not tell why he did it. The Sachems had the defense for that sort of play but were fooled in its execution.

The Winchester scouts, who saw Stoneham lose by a touchdown to potent Melrose, all agreed Stoneham should have won. The equalizing pass was dropped in the end zone for a big Melrose break.

Stoneham has size and fight, and will not be easy to beat in its own backyard. The Winchester coaching staff believes the Sachems can win this one, if they will not make too many mistakes. A year ago Winchester practically handed the game to Stoneham on a platter.

Winchester has the necessary size to win and if they play ball can pull this one out. Stoneham has won two in a row from Winchester and the defeat by Concord may make the Big Blue a bit over-confident.

Time will tell. Kickoff time is 1:30 p.m.

Bob Cousy scored 16 points to lead the Boston Celtics in a losing cause against the Fort Wayne Pistons (107) in his first NBA game on November 1, 1950.

Goldwater Dinner Planners Drawing A Good Response

Ticket sales and donations for the 1963 fund raising dinner of the Republican Finance Committee are running well ahead of last year, according to an announcement made by George A. Pettersen and Mrs. James W. Blackham, Jr., local chairmen.

The $100 a plate dinner will be held October 16 at the Commonwealth Armory with Senator Barry Goldwater featured speaker. Chairman of the dinner committee Lloyd Waring, will preside and Senator Goldwater will be introduced by Senator Leverett Saltonstall.

Tickets in this area are available from Mrs. Blackham and Mr. Pettersen. Arrangements have been completed to have the roast beef dinner catered by Wilbur's restaurants, Inc., of Boston and music and entertainment will be provided by Harry Marshard and his orchestra.

As this is Senator Goldwater's only major policy speech presently scheduled for New England, the attention of the entire region will be focused upon Commonwealth Armonry that night.

King Coffin Will Teach Art Class To Adults at HS

The Adult Art Class sponsored by the Winchester Art Association begins its eleventh year under the direction of King Coffin on Monday, October 7th, at 7 p.m., in the High School art classroom.

When interviewed at the Museum School, where he also teaches, Mr. Coffin said: "It would be wonderful if all towns were as conscious of art, and as interested in it, as Winchester. I'm sure the Art Association has done much to foster this interest. Actually painting, doing the work oneself, gives anyone who tries it a much better insight into the problems all artists face, and some idea of possible solutions."

"The classes sponsored by the Art Association seem to me to do something else; they give each person a chance to lose himself completely in the work, to develop latent talent, and a chance to develop the creative ability we all have," he continued. "There are so few areas now in which it is possible to be different, and genuinely creative, and art is one of those areas. Learning to use the creative ability given us brings great satisfaction, and, of course, a knowledge of basic principles of design and composition which can be applied in other areas of life," he added.

A number of students who have studied other years will be returning for the fall term. For further information, or to enroll, telephone Mrs. Herman R. Sweet, education committee chairman, at EX 5-6062, after 6 p.m.

McCall Planning To Greet Mothers New to School

Mothers of McCall Junior High School students who are new to town and of families whose eldest child is entering the seventh grade are reminded to call Mrs. Robert Millican, president of the school's parents' board if they have not received an invitation to or need transportation to the morning coffee planned for them at 9:45 on the morning of October 8.

All new mothers are invited to come to the library of McCall Junior High on that day and join with Mr. Forte, the principal, Mr. Meurling, assistant principal, and Mrs. Kurren, guidance counselor, and the members of the McCall Board. The room mothers will also attend this year. Mr. Forte will make a brief talk of welcome and there will be a few words also from Mr. Meurling and Mrs. Kurren.

This event is simply a warm welcome for all members of the "New Mothers' Group". It is a pleasant way to meet new neighbors, the McCall board members, and most important of all Mr. Forte and his staff personally.

"Peanuts" Cortoonist At Jr. Crittenton

The Jr. Circle of the Florence Crittenton League will hold its fall meeting on Tuesday, October 8, at the home of Mrs. E. Leigh Quinn, 49 Oxford Street.

The business meeting, presided over by Mrs. Charles E. Potts, will be followed by the program. The special guest entertainer will be an outstanding pastor-cartoonist whose drawings appear in numerous church and secular publications and in a nationally syndicated comic strip.

He is the Rev. Roger W. Palmquist, who for the last 14 years was the minister of the Covenant Congregational Church in Waltham. Rev. Palmquist has now entered the field of art as it relates to the church.

Currently, Rev. Palmquist, in addition to presenting chalk drawings and songs to hundreds of different groups throughout the country, is also working with Charles Schultz, creator of the comic strip "Peanuts" as his first assistant.

The program entitled "Be It Ever So Hectic, There's No Place Like Home," will poke fun at the confusion, yet reflect upon the ultimate goodness of the home, concluding with a pictorial portrait of the familiar song "Bless This House."

Refreshments will be served by Mrs. Edgar Hammond and her tea committee. Mrs. Charles E. Potts and Mrs. Galen S. Vincent will pour.

Feeding the Ducks

My Children love to feed the ducks
Down by the Old Mill Pond
Where beauty dwells as if a fairy Queen
Had waved her Magic Wand

The town hall clock strikes out the hour
As the peaceful water flows
And everything suddenly comes alive
When the fire whistle blows

There you will find both beauty and friends
If you just look around
And I know each one feels proud to say
Winchester is My home town

Matador Ball, '63 Waltz Evening Is October 18, 19

There will be a grand aura of excitement in the air on the evenings of Friday, October 18th, and Saturday, October 19th, when the Friends of the Winchester Hospital greet you at their 12th annual Waltz Evening, at the Winchester Town Hall.

The significance of this popular affair has once again been proven by the unparalleled scurry for reservations. Saturday night is completely sold out. There are a few tickets left for Friday, so there may still be time to get a party together (Call Mrs. Richard Schroeder, PA 9-3308).

Couples will be dancing in the atmosphere of an old Spanish courtyard complete with the intricate grill work and varieties of cascading flowers so often associated with this period. Beauty to feast the eyes will be found in gaily decorated fans and mandolins. Scenes of Flamenco will delight you, as will the handsome attired Matador and his Ladies who will claim your attention on the evenings of the dance.

Music to suit all tastes and tempos will be provided by Ken Reeves and his orchestra. Doors will open at 8:30 p.m., with dancing til 1:00 a.m. on Friday, and until midnight on Saturday.

The traditional Waltz Contest will be the highlight of each ball. On Friday, Mr. Richard Champagne of the Champagne Dancing Studio will perform in a waltz exhibition with Mrs. Roger Clapp, and on Saturday, a staff member of the Curry School of Dance will have as his partner Mrs. Leslie DeGroot. Mrs. Clapp and Mrs. DeGroot, last year's winning ladies, will again delight us with their dancing.

After the exhibition waltzes, all dancers are invited to enter the waltz competition at which time winners will be awarded handsome prizes donated by civic-minded businessmen.

Judges on Friday will be Mr. Champagne, Mr. and Mrs. Roger Clapp and Dr. and Mrs. Frank Bates. Dr. and Mrs. Leslie DeGroot and Dr. and Mrs. Sanford Moses will assist representatives from the Curry School of Dance in choosing the 1963 winners on Saturday.

For couples who wish to attend without a party, the Toreador table will be available with Mr. and Mrs. H. Philip Hovnanian acting as host and hostess on Friday and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Westwater and Mr. and Mrs. Earle F. Spencer, Jr., on Saturday.

By popular demand, punch will be served this year along with other refreshments.

A telephone answering service will be maintained at the Town Hall on both nights. Dancers may be reached at PA 9-9884.

A thoroughly enjoyable evening awaits all those attending the Matador Ball. Even if you cannot be present at the dance, your encouragement would be greatly appreciated as a patron or patroness. Your contribution would benefit the Winchester Hospital as all proceeds from this affair are used toward the purchase of specialized equipment for the Hospital. We should be happy to add your name to the list of patrons and patronesses. Please make your check payable to the Friends of the Winchester Hospital and mail to: Mrs. Theodore von Rosenvinge, 3rd, at 111 Church Street.

MYF Paper Drive October 12

The Methodist Youth Fellowship of the Crawford Memorial Methodist Church will hold its annual Fall Paper Drive on Saturday, October 12. If you would like your papers picked up, please call Judy Durfee, PA 9-3960, or Barbara Monsen, PA 9-0823.

17 WHS Seniors Get Commendations For Merit Achievements

Seventeen Winchester High School seniors were honored this week with formal Letters of Commendation for their high performance on the National Merit Scholarship Qualifying Test administered last spring.

Together with the eight students announced three weeks ago as official Merit semi-finalists, they bring to 25 the number of seniors who have this year won recognition in the scholarship testing program.

The students are: Richard F. Bradley, Steve A. Brown, Robert D. Eddy, Jr., Paula D. Ellison, Carl S. Fontneau, Peter B. Fontneau, Lance R. Grenzeback, Willard R. Hatch, Gerald H. Hills, William C. Hoyt, William R. Keeton, Dottie June Keller, Thomas R. Kuhn, Caroline J. Leaf, Richard H. Penner, Geraldine Roberts and Jeffrey Russell.

John M. Stalnaker, president of the National Merit Scholarship Corporation, says of these students: "Although they did not reach the status of semi-finalists in the current Merit Program, they are so capable that we wish to call attention in this way to their achievement and academic promise. The semi-finalists and commended students together constitute about two per cent of all high school seniors."

To increase their opportunities to obtain financial assistance if they need it, the Merit Corporation sends the names, home addresses, and test scores of all commended students to the two colleges they indicated as their preferred choices at the time they took the qualifying test. Other special services are also performed by NMSC in an effort to increase the scholarship opportunities of commended student semi-finalists.

"We earnestly hope that the commended students will continue their education," Mr. Stalnaker continued. "By doing so they will benefit both themselves and the nation."

The commended students were among the high school juniors in approximately 16,500 schools who took the three-hour examination last March that covers five separate areas of educational development.

Richard Sawyer Is Appointed To Planning Board

At a joint meeting of the Board of Selectmen and the Planning Board on Monday night in the Town Hall to fill a vacancy on the Planning Board, the two boards unanimously voted to appoint Richard A. Sawyer of 182 Main Street to fill the unexpired term of Neil H. Borden of 58 Winford Way who retired from the Planning Board.

Mr. Borden was elected for a three-year term at the 1963 annual March Town Election. He plans to spend some time in Europe, however, and because he would be unable to attend many Planning Board Meetings, he decided to retire and leave the post to someone who could give close attention to the board's important work.

PARENTLESS . . . ABANDONED WAIF AT THE WINCHESTER HOSPITAL. Nameless baby lies in her crib while police search for the infant's parents who abandoned her shortly after birth on the doorstep of the hospital. Petite "Princess," so called by the hospital's nursing staff, was found late Friday night, October 4, outside the hospital wrapped merely in a pink blanket, a few towels, and inside an empty cardboard carton.

Minutes-Old Infant Is Abandoned At Hospital; Police Seeking Parents

Winchester police are still searching for the parents of an infant girl that was abandoned on the out-patient doorstep on the south side of the Winchester Hospital shortly after 11 p.m. last Friday night, October 4th.

The baby girl, named "Princess" by the Hospital's nursing staff, is doing well and is in fine health, according to Reese James, administrator of the Hospital.

The abandoned waif was discovered by an orderly in the accident room when Mrs. Mary Silva of Woburn, a telephone switchboard operator at the Hospital, notified the accident admittance desk that someone had called and said: "I just left a baby at the accident door." Robert Allen of West Medford went outside to investigate and found the newly-born child wrapped in a 6 by 7½-foot pink blanket and three towels, and placed inside an empty cardboard beer carton that was lined with a day-old newspaper, on the out-patient doorstep.

Mrs. R. Gigante, R.N., supervisor, told police that the newly-born infant's body was still attached to the placenta when it was brought into the Hospital, and that she had severed the umbilical cord.

Dr. Euan T. Blanch of 16 Alden Lane examined the abandoned child and ordered her placed in an incubator. He said the baby was cool — the body temperature had dropped to about 95 degrees—due to the slim wrapping and the time it was out in the cold. He added that the baby appeared to be in good health, but that further diagnosis was necessary at that time. On Tuesday morning the child was removed from the incubator.

At 11:15 on Friday night the police were notified of the abandoning of the child at the Hospital, and Lt. Edward Bowler sent Sgt. John J. Dolan and Patrolman James E. Flaherty to investigate. They learned from Mrs. Silva that the person who had made the call sounded like a man who was trying to disguise his identity by speaking in a high-pitched voice. They also took the blanket, towels, newspaper, and beer carton for the State Police lab in Boston to analyze to see if any traces of ownership could be found through laundry marks or store names where purchased.

On Saturday morning at 8 o'clock, Lt. John H. Elliott and Sgt. Andrew Crawford went to the Hospital to continue the investigation. One Washington Street woman who was asked by the police if she had seen anything unusual on Friday night, said she saw a young man in the parking lot near the out-patient door and had told him it was locked and to use the ambulance door. She said he was leaning into the back seat of his late model dark-colored Chevrolet when she left the area.

A nurse who went to the Hospital at 10:55 to begin duty, said she saw a young man acting very nervous near the out-patient door. She described him as being about 20-22-years-old, six feet tall, and weighing approximately 190 pounds. She told police he was wearing an imitation leather jacket and khaki trousers. She said she thought he was standing beside a dark blue or green Chevrolet car or station wagon.

Police notified other departments in New England and called via teletype, departments in Woburn, Stoneham, Medford, Reading, Lexington, Arlington, Wilmington and Burlington to ask the hospitals and physicians in their towns to be on the lookout for a woman seeking post-birth treatment. Winchester police believe the mother of the abandoned infant may have to get medical attention to prevent any chance of infection setting in.

The local police also believe, according to Sgt. Crawford, that the child was delivered to the hospital very shortly after it was born. He noted that there was a great deal of blood in the carton, and that the child was still attached to the placenta by its umbilical cord. Sgt. Crawford said that although he was not a doctor, he guessed that the child was left at the Hospital "minutes after it was born."

Mr. James, speaking for the Hospital, said they could not estimate an exact time of birth, but

Woburn Architects To Locate Firm Here

A complete renovation of the existing three-story structure at 48 Mount Vernon Street, the former Central Hardware Building, is scheduled to begin within two weeks and completed in five months in preparation for the relocation of a Woburn architectural firm's offices to that building.

Edward J. Tedesco Associates, Architects, A.I.A., of 15 Pleasant Street, Woburn, announced this week that the company is moving its offices to 48 Mount Vernon Street on or about April 15, 1964.

Th entire exterior of the building will be sheathed in an aluminum grid supporting a facing of precast units. (See artist's conception sketch below). Remodeling of the second and third floors will provide reception, secretarial and office space as well as large drafting and conference rooms and reproduction facilities for the expanding firm. The firm anticipates that the entire first floor will be available for lease as shop space. New heating facilities with year-round air-conditioning will be installed in the building.

Tedesco Associates have designed a number of educational and institutional buildings in the Greater Boston area. Educational buildings now in either design or construction phase include the addition to the Woburn Senior High School, the Hosmer Street Elementary School in Marlborough, the Treble Cove Elementary School in Billerica, a new Junior High School for the Town of Randolph, a new elementary school for St. James Parish in Haverhill, and an Archdiocesan co-educational High School in the city of Everett.

In the institutional field, current commissions include the enlargement and remodeling of the main office of the Woburn National Bank, an addition to the H. H. Richardson-designed Woburn Public Library, the Colonial Nursing Home, the Woburn Boys' Club, the Woburn Area Y.M.C.A., and a new Courthouse Building for the Fourth District Court of Middlesex County, to be located in Woburn.

PROPOSED REMODELLING OF 48 MOUNT VERNON STREET. The former Central Hardware Building will be remodelled into a modern office building when plans underfoot by Edward Tedesco Associates of Woburn, an architectural firm, are completed. Good Turnout At Middlesex Fells Reservoir Tour

Approximately 348 cars, 8 bicycles, 2 horses and 1 motor scooter, accompanied by many hiker-pedestrians, were listed by the Water Department as part of the entourage that showed up for the scenic fall foliage public tour through the Middlesex Fells reservoir area last Saturday between the hours of 10 a.m. and 5 o'clock.

Among the nearly 1000 persons who viewed the extensive reservoir and forest area were a couple from India, who said they were "most impressed" by the fall beauty of the natural water-shed.

William Conlon, water superintendent, said the tour was "highly successful", and the department plans to open up the Fells again to the public for a day next spring and fall as it did this year due to the public's enthusiastic response. Compared with last May 25th, there were 228 more cars and 750 more persons attending the fall tour of the Fells.

Mr. Conlon said the tour was so successful that many persons turned up on Sunday also to view the Fells, thinking it was a weekend event. The Water Department graciously reopened the area so residents would not miss the turning color beauty.

Assisting Mr. Conlon in conducting the tour were Anthony Carroll, forester, and Frank Diapella, Joseph Bavuso and Frank Olivadoti.

Election Voting May Be At Local Schools In 1964

Currently under study by the Board of Selectmen, the Board of Registrars of Voters, and the School Department is the advisability of changing over from having election voting in the Town Hall to the elementary schools in the six voting precincts.

The School Committee has formally notified the Selectmen that it is amenable to the proposal in principle. The School Committee said, with the exception of the High School and the two Junior High Schools, the local schools could be made available for voting purposes if a good, workable plan is fashioned to handle the large numbers of voters without disturbing the operation of the schools.

In discussing the matter with the registrars at their Monday night meeting in the Town Hall, the Selectmen said they were considering using the Washington School for Precinct One voters, Lincoln School for Precinct Two, Mystic School for Precinct Three, Vinson-Owen School for Precinct Four, Wyman School for Precinct Five, and Noonan School for Precinct Six.

The Selectmen charged the registrars with: (1) analyzing the added janitorial and police expenses (estimated at between $300 or $400 more each election) that would be incurred by the town in having voting at the schools rather than in the Town Hall; (2) to research and recommend on the advisability of rent-leasing or purchasing voting machines (estimated at about $1800 per machine for 28 to 30 machines . . . a total of nearly $60,000); (3) looking into the amount of school storage space available for keeping such machines if purchased; and (4) discussing the matter further with the School Committee.

Shailer Avery, chairman of the Board of Selectmen, said he hoped the registrars could arrive at all the necessary answers and recommendations in time to have the matter budgeted for the 1964 Town Meeting so all of next year's elections could be handled at the schools. He said the annual Town

Arlington Rejects A Proposed Land Swap

The Town of Arlington has rejected Winchester's proposed land swap in making a boundary line change that would have transferred to Arlington a small parcel of Winchester land in the Steep Rock Road area on the southwestern part of town.

In a letter to the Winchester Planning Board, which represented this town's interests in proposing the idea for mutual study between the towns with an eye to making such a change at next year's town meetings, the Arlington Planning Board said: "The Selectmen have concluded that Arlington would not benefit from the proposed change and accordingly they are not interested in a revision of the town boundary line."

A joint meeting of the Selectmen and Planning Boards of both towns and concurring agreements would have been necessary for the boundary change-land swap to have succeeded as a question for the town meetings to consider.

The boundary change that was being considered, and being considered "with favorable interest" on the part of both the Arlington and Winchester Planning Boards, involved only a small area of Winchester land, about 13 undeveloped house lot sites—or approximately three acres of land.

The matter of a boundary change between Winchester and Arlington came about when Anthony Graziano of Arlington submitted plans to develop land in the Steep Rock Road area. It was suggested that since Arlington would have to service this area's water and sewer lines, (much as Arlington now services Winchester's sewer lines in the Dunster Lane area all the way down hill to the Arlington line) and would most probably end up servicing the area with fire and police protection, that it would seem the best thing to do to transfer the land to Arlington.

The Winchester Planning Board considered the idea, and finally decided to ask the Arlington Planning Board for its opinion. The Arlington board gave initial "favorable interest," and then had that town's engineer review the plans and maps of the area for a report and recommendation to the board.

The Winchester Planning Board has pointed out the three acres of land that may be transferred is undeveloped real estate now, and rep-

LWV, Jaycees Plan Local Initiative Petition Canvass

Beginning on Monday, October 14th, members of the local League of Women Voters and the Junior Chamber of Commerce will start canvassing the registered voters of Winchester to solicit signatures for the initiative petition calling for the repeal of the statutory powers granted to the executive council, with certain exceptions.

The initiative petition does not propose abolition of the executive council, inasmuch as such a step would require a constitutional amendment. Neither would the initiative petition disturb the original constitutional powers invested in the council, such as the review of pardons and confirmation of judicial appointments. It does, however, propose to strip the council of its immense powers conferred through the past years by the Legislature.

The League of Women Voters, the Jaycees and the Massachusetts Federation of Taxpayers are sponsoring the drive to obtain the 63,000 signatures needed to bring the proposed bill to the Legislature. And, if the Legislature does not act, 11,000 more signatures will be obtained to place the question on the ballot next year.

Local voters wishing to sign the petition and who have not been contacted by the Winchester LWV or Jaycees, or who have any questions regarding the initiative petition are invited to telephone Mrs. Richard F. Brackett (PA9-2444) or Mrs. James R. Willoughby (PA 9-5137).

HOSPITAL CORNERSTONE LAYING CEREMONY. Mrs. Harold F. French, member of the hospital committee of the Visiting Nurse Association at the time of the opening of the original hospital in 1912, mortars and trowels the 1962 cornerstone for the new addition into place during ceremonies last Sunday.

The Reverend H. Newton Clay pronounced the invocation. The master of ceremonies, William J. Speers, introduced the honored guests and speakers of the afternoon.

John A. Volpe told of his long personal connection with the hospital and congratulated the build-committee for a job carefully and tastefully completed.

Dr. George A. Marks expressed the appreciation of the medical staff for the completion of a fine medical plant with a smooth transition from old to new, and thanked Reese James for handling the confusing job with little inconvenience to the doctors and patients involved.

Dr. A. Daniel Rubenstein, director of the Bureau of Hospital Facilities and deputy commissioner of the Massachusetts Department of Public Health, spoke as an old friend in reminiscing on the opening of the wing in 1950. He added that no sooner had that unit been completed than the idea of this new structure began to form. He congratulated the many workers for their devotion to the best in medical facilities and care and noted that Winchester would continue to grow with the times.

Mr. Speers then told the group about the interesting items sealed in the copper box in the cornerstone:

Marycliff Bible Series to Run Through Semester

This year Marycliff Academy is sponsoring a Bible Lecture Series. Open to interested adults, it began on September 30, when Rev. Father Frederick Moriarty, S.J., Bible scholar and professor of Sacred Scripture at Weston College, took the audience "Through Genesis." Father Moriarty gave basic concepts and new slants on the study of scripture.

At the second lecture on October 3, he discussed the findings of new biblical researchers. The audience consisted of priests, religious and lay people from the surrounding communities.

The series will be continued through the semester, with the next lecture to be held at 4 p.m. on October 24. Subsequent ones will be November 21, December 6 and 19. WHS '53 Reunion

Some while back a group of teenagers, almost 200 in number, took a long march to receive recognition for four years of hard labor. Ten years have gon by since and it was in recognition of this that the Winchester High School Class of 1953 gathered on Saturday, September 28, at the King's Grant Motor Inn and Restaurant on Route 128.

During the cocktail hours conversation was at a minimum. During the roast beef dinner the class was serenaded, not only by the music of Marblehead's Nat Green and his orchestra, but also by the promising voices of Ted Harrigan, New Yorker extraordinaire, and Bill Nash, defender of the home front. Bill Nash, by the way, is the husband of lovely classmate Beverly Murphy.

Memories of days gone by were really brought back by the presence of invited guests Mrs. Stacy, Mr. and Mrs. Morse, and Mr. and Mrs. Skerry. How could anyone ever forget those history assignments, vocal exercises in the Wadleigh basement, and, of course, those discourses of long-deceased Cicero.

Time flew by and the class found itself around Phil Ives as he read the Class Will; a reading that will go down in history, especially since Phil had such trouble pronouncing his "h's." Dancing and conversation continued until midnight. Two very special telephone calls were made during the evening to classmates Roberta Coon Struck in Richland, Washington, and Neil and Ann Hooper Muncaster in Frisco, Colorado.

It was noted in the Class Pamphlet that three members of the class are now deceased: Barbara Kaknas McDavitt, Ann M. Dowling, and most recently Richard F. Woodward. Several of Dicks close friends have initiated a fund for the purpose of acquiring a memorial memento to be presented to the Winchester High School in his honor. Those wishing to participate may do so by making out their contribution to the Richard Woodward Memorial Fund and mailing it to the Winchester Trust Co.

Credit for the successful evening should be given to all who attended and especially to the reunion committee, which included: Frederick Wheaton, class president; Paul J. Mahoney, class treasurer; Gloria Mucera Fitzgerald, class secretary; Joan McNeill Bird, Marcia Symmes Caldwell and Mabel Shoemaker Harris.

AMONG MANY VISITORS to the Middlesex Fells, which was opened to the public by the Water and Sewer Board on Saturday, October 5, were Nancy, 8, Ginger, 5, and Patty, 7, all daughters of Mr. and Mrs. John S. Eaton of 15 Fletcher Street. The fall foliage scene overlooks the Middle Reservoir.

Methodist Church To Observe Special Services

At the Crawford Memorial Methodist Church this Sunday morning at 11 o'clock the 40th anniversary of the laying of the cornerstone will be observed with special services.

The order of worship will be conducted by the pastor, the Rev. H. Newton Clay. The sermon will be delivered by the Rev. William J. Ogle, superintendent of the Lynn district of the Methodist Church. The Rev. G. Vaughn Shedd will read the scripture lesson.

The Sanctuary Choir and the Youth Choir will combine to sing Fred Waring's special arrangement of "Onward Christian Soldiers" under the direction of Mrs. Gloria Maifeld and with Mrs. Julie Collins at the organ.

The cornerstone was laid on Sunday afternoon, October 7, 1923, when the Reverend Alliston B. Gifford was pastor. It is anticipated that Rev. Mr. Gifford may be at the service this Sunday. The sermon was preached by Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes, D.D., and several other ministers took part in the exercises.

The public is cordially invited to attend this service.

Red Cross Invites Gray Ladies To Training Course

The annual Fall Red Cross Gray Lady training course is being given at the American Legion Hall in Bedford on Thursday, October 24 and 31 from 9:30 to 12:30.

If you have some hours to spare one day a week or more if you wish, and would like to take this training course, please call the Red Cross at 729-2300. Transportation will be provided.

What is a Gray Lady?

At Chelsea Naval Hospital and at the Bedford V.A. Hospital, she can be the hands and feet of the serviceman and veteran. That box of kleenex, pack of cigarettes, postage stamp, or magazine can be his if there is a Gray Lady available to procure them for him, or the lad who would like to write a letter home and is not able to do so alone, can, with the help of a Gray Lady. Her willingness and cheerfulness mean a lot to the hospitalized serviceman or veteran.

Then there is always the need for special skills such as leather work, ceramics, weaving, etc. Whatever it is that one likes to do, that task can be found. The possibilities are varied and pleasant and all are very rewarding. Gray Ladies, too, are needed at our local hospital to serve at the reception desk.

Maurice Freeman Elected President Of Loomis, Sayles

Maurice T. Freeman, of 11 Lorena Road, has just been elected the third president of Loomis, Sayles and Company, Inc., a 37 year old national investment counsel firm in Boston.

MAURICE FREEMAN

He was formerly executive vice president and director of investment research. Mr. Freeman, who joined Loomis, Sayles in 1927, continues as president of the Loomis-Sayles Mutual Fund, the country's largest no-load mutual fund. He succeeds Floyd L. McElroy who, after 10 years as president, becomes chairman of the board of directors.

Mr. Freeman received an S.B. from Massachusetts Institute of Technology in 1925 and an M.B.A. degree from the Harvard Business School in 1927. He joined the investment research department of Loomis, Sayles in 1927 and became its director in 1942. He was made president of the Mutual Fund in 1951, and executive vice president of the company in 1958.

Mr. Freeman is a trustee of Winchester Hospital and of the Winchester Savings Bank and a corporator of the Suffolk Franklin Savings Bank.

His company maintains offices in Chicago, Detroit, Los Angeles, Milwaukee, New York, Philadelphia, San Francisco, Washington, D. C. and Toronto, Canada.

Plan Family Fire Drills for Fire Prevention Week

Hold a family fire drill during Fire Prevention Week.

This is an urgent request of Fire Chief Amico—urgent because it may well save the lives of you and your family.

"Experience shows that a family which is ready for fire emergency is usually able to come through safely when fire actually strikes," the chief said. "National Fire Protection Association studies indicate that many lives taken by home fires each year have been needlessly lost because of failure to pre-plan for fire emergencies and rehearse these plans."

Planning ahead is essential, for fire may spread so rapidly there is no time to figure out what to do. Make sure each individual in the family, including the children, knows exactly what steps he is to take in your home life safety plan.

Then hold family fire drills regularly, Chief Amico advised, to be sure the family is thoroughly familiar with procedures.

Here are pointers to help you plan:

1. Carefully figure out at least two routes to the outside from every room in the house, especially bedrooms. Allow for blocking of stairways and halls by fire.

2. Particularly for nighttime fires, remember that closed bedroom doors will hold back flame and smoke and allow extra time for escape.

3. For upper floor escape, use any available porch and garage roofs, ladders, or trees as ways down to safety. Be sure that exit windows work easily, and that they are low and large enough to get through.

4. Pick an outside assembly point where the family will meet, and be sure everyone understands the rule "once out—stay out."

5. Know how to call the fire department, by street box or neighbor's phone, and do this as quickly as the house is clear of people.

Antique Study Group

The first meeting of the Winchester Antique Study Group will be held on October 15 at 8:00 p.m. at the home of Mrs. Mac Adams, 41 Mycpia Road.

Mr. Clarence Blake of Weston formerly of Winchester will be the speaker. His subject will be "Lowestoft China."

Through the years there has been much misinformation on this subject. Continued studies by dedicated researchers have sorted the errors from the truth, so it should be of great interest to the members to learn the true story of Lowestoft.

State Auto Inspections:
Mixed Results Follow Advanced Policy

The Motor Vehicle Registry's announcement in August that semi-annual inspection fees would be doubled from 50 cents to $1 was met by severe criticism from Massachusetts' car owners and auto associations who saw the increased fee as just another added expense to the cost of maintaining and operating motor vehicles in this state. At that time, the Star editorialized (August 15) on the "legalized pickpocketing" of the Commonwealth's thousands of drivers.

Recent events have dictated looking from a fresh perspective at some of the more significant aspects of the Registry's new policy, however. Notwithstanding the fact that new license plates will have to be issued because of the poor paint job on this year's plates, many of whose numberings are not even distinguishable now, and recognizing that many of the red rejection stickers for the fall inspection will not stay stuck to windshields, nevertheless these inconveniences (i.e., inefficiencies) are less important than what is happening under the Registry's new stiffer inspection policy.

The Registry's warning that the stiffer inspections (and stiffer inspections on inspection stations) that were supposed to accompany the hike in the cost of the service to automobile owners was, it must be admitted, regarded generally by most people as being an idle statement. Few paid much attention to it, and those service stations that had been doing perfunctory and negligent inspections continued on in their usual pattern for the $1 fee as they had for the 50 cent charge, just as the Star noted would happen.

On Tuesday, however, the Registry proved that its new policy in advancing more careful inspections to insure safe motor vehicles traveling on Massachusetts roads would be backed up with bold Registry action. Registrar Lawton's rescinding of 37 inspection station permits (some permanently), and even including the largest inspection station in the state, was an unusual but welcome piece of action. The Registrar is to be commended for altering what was a dormant policy under his predecessors, to a dynamic and active policy in the interests of the motoring public.

If the Registrar's tighter safety through more thorough inspection policy actually does achieve its aims (as it now looks as though it might due to the Registry's determination to suspend permits of negligent inspectors), then the doubling of the inspection fees will become a small price to pay for the return in safety to the public.

Of those inspection stations losing their permits, 25% were in the Boston area. None, we were happy to see, were in Winchester. However, according to one local resident who had his car inspected in Winchester and who also happens to be an important national safety official, at least one local inspector hasn't been raising the cars on lifts to check the suspension system as is required under the new regulations.

Local drivers who want to be sure of the safety of their vehicles should insist on a thorough inspection. The increased fee entitles drivers to a more careful inspection . . . don't leave all the checking up to the Registry's watchdog inspectors of your inspector . . . it's your life.

There is one critical loophole in the Registry's present regulations on inspection, and that is the allowable tolerances on front end suspensions, which includes kingpins and ball joints.

The largest Massachusetts Chevrolet dealer said his service department handles on the average about one front end suspension job a month, and rarely sells more than a few across the counter to other service stations each month. However, since the fall inspection began, that dealer has not been able to keep his supply up to the counter demand of several dozen a day.

One major car manufacturer has recently warned its Massachusetts dealerships that the authorized inspection stations misunderstand the workings of the front end suspension systems, and therefore recommend work that is not necessary when it gives red stickers.

Another organization has gone further. The ALA has charged that a racket is being perpetrated against car owners by many service inspection stations. The ALA claims that cars should not need front end suspension work for at least a few years of operation, and yet, it says, of the two in every ten cars getting red stickers, 80 per cent of these are for supposedly faulty front ends, worn ball joints or kingpins — and a large per cent of that number are for new cars.

The ALA gave one example of a 1963 Chevrolet with less than 1500 miles on it that was rejected for so-called needed front end work. The owner took the car back to the dealer where he bought it, had it checked, and discovered that the car was in perfect condition. Many dealers say they are receiving inspection rejected cars that are in perfect condition. The ALA has received hundreds of calls from owners who said a fraud was attempted on them. But, was it a fraud? Actually, the tolerances for front ends are left up to the inspection stations, and since one man's opinion or judgment can very well differ from another's without there being anything illegal, who is to say some inspection stations are illegally getting extra garage work through less than honest inspection opinions?

The ALA recommends that car owners who get rejection stickers for front end work should take their cars to a same-make dealer to double check the stated fault of the car before going to the expense of having work done that may not be necessary.

The Registry should, as soon as possible, close this loophole for rackets by issuing tolerance chants or meaursement standards for front end suspension. Also, additional mechanical safety devices in cars should be added to the inspection list, such things as the shock absorbers, the defrosters, etc.

The Initiative Petition:
Popular Movement For Efficient State Goverment

The state-wide initiative petition campaign to reduce the statutory powers of the Governor's executive council, leaving it with just its original Constitutionl powers, is aptly named an "initiative petition," for it is due to the initiative of three well-known organizations that are concerned with the operation of the state government that the petition is being circulated: the League of Women Voters, the Junior Chamber of Commerce, and the Massachusetts Federation of Taxpayers.

Here in Winchester, approximately 50 members of the local chapter of the League of Women Voters and 25 from the Jaycees are planning to contribute their time and effort next week to getting local signatures to have the petition brought before the Legislature next spring. If the Legislature does not consider the petition, or if enough signatures are not obtained by November 1st, then those organizations will strive to get more signatures to have the question placed on a ballot referendum for next fall's popular election.

There is a very definite mood among Massachusetts citizens that can only be described as a yearning for better state government: this includes both more efficient government machinery, and capable leaders to run that machinery honestly and in the interests of the people of the Commonwealth.

Voters are sick of learning continuall of more and more inefficiency in the state's operation of itself, and of repeated corruption scandals. Hopefully the best investment in thinking and appropriations to curb the latter was undertaken by the Legislature in creating the Mass. Crime Commission. The best investment in thinking and voting to reduce the power of a debilitating influence on Beacon Hill administrative and executive machinery the Governor's Council, will be for the people to get entirely behind this initiative petition.

Actually, the state would be better off without the executive council at all. It should be totally abolished. However, the Legislature has twice met in joint session to consider this move, and it failed to act for many political reasons. So, the best move is to limit its power as much as possible, and the initiative petition—if successful—will do this by calling for the repeal of its extra statutory powers.

Among the executive council's statutory powers that should be eliminated because of that council's ability to completely shackle the governor include: approval of nearly all appointments made by the governor (about 900), approval of regulations by governor for continued operations of an industry during an industrial dispute endangering public health or safety, approval of state highway and waterways contracts, approval of leases of premises for state offices, approval of sales or purchases of land by certain agencies, general supervision of numerous state agencies not located within one of the 20 departments specified within the constitution, settlement of cases of conflicting jurisdiction between departments, approval of numerous appointments made by appointees of the governor (such as deputy commissioners), establishment of certain administrative units (such as employment offices), approval of state funds by the treasurer. And these are just a few of a long list of powers which the executive council either holds unto itself, or shares jointly with the governor, but which requires the approval of both.

The main constitutional powers which would remain with the executive council if just its statutory powers are eliminated include: approval of governor's appointments to judicial posts, approval of warrants of governor authorizing payments from the state treasury, consent to pardons granted by the governor, approval of governor's appointments to fill vacancy in office of any constitutional officer when the General Court is not in session, approval of convening or adjournment of General Court by the governor, approval of removal or retirement of judicial officers by the governor, and approval of removal or notaries public and justices of the peace.

Massachusetts is one of three states still having an executive council; the other two being Maine and New Hampshire. Of the seven other states which originally had an executive council when organized, all seven abolished theirs between the years 1790 and 1850 as being useless and even harmful ingredients to a smooth running machinery for state government.

Massachusetts should follow suit and eventually abolish this council which prevents any governor from administrating the executive branch of our state government efficiently. Even John Adams saw that after he witnessed the first council's ability to shackle the governor, and recommended its quick demise. However, it looks as though the first step will be merely to eliminate its extra-constitutional powers; and this minimal step should be achieved by the initiative petition—a petition orginating from knowledgeable voters who know what this state needs is more efficient machinery in its governmental structure.

Of Writers And Writing

By Frank Procopio

A Marine's Philosophy Of War

The island was called Peleliu. It lay east of Mindanao and the main Philippine island. Except for GHQ, tacticians, and recon men—who had fretted over it for months—nobody had ever heard of it before. But on a hot morning in September of 1944, the First Marine Division divided it into two white beaches and three orange beaches—and attacked it.

Storming ashore with the first wave of the invasion force was a young private named Robert Leckie. Leckie was a machine-gunner, and already a veteran of Guadalcanal and New Britain. Back home he had written a sports column for a small New Jersey daily. Throughout the war he found it easy to maintain an interest in writing. He kept a journal of his experiences, and someday he hoped to write a book about them. But on Peleliu he had no time to think about writing. He had no time for anything except trying to stay alive.

For more than five hours the Marines fought their way across the scarred, lime-like beaches, and at the end of that time they had advanced only seventy-five yards. From their squatty, venomous pillboxes, the Japanese defenders poured a murderous fire. Above, a glistening sun hung ominous and immovable, rocketing the temperature on those baked, exposed sands to an unmerciful 125 degrees. It was about that time, when men were confused and afraid and angry, and were falling more from heat exhaustion than from enemy fire, that a mortar shell—sounding like someone blowing through a plastic bean blower as it came in—exploded near Leckie and his machine-gun crew.

The war ended for Robert Leckie then; shrapnel smacked into his body, shredding his uniform in a dozen different places, and the clapping blast knocked him unconscious. He awoke aboard an evacuation vessel bound for Australia. His unit, he was told, had finally secured Peleliu, and was driving north. Because of his wounds he would miss its final action at a place called Okinawa.

War, and especially those men who came closest to it, became Leckie's primary concern when he returned home. He wrote several short stories, somewhat too inept, but still reflective of Leckie's basic desire to portray the stark realism of war for those who knew little or nothing about war. His personal experiences—some of them collected in his journal, some stored away in his accurate memory—were drawn upon to compile his first book, HELMET FOR MY PILLOW. Reviewers of it declared that Leckie's involvement contained a sensitivity and meaning that went far beyond the usual superfluous efforts of post-war authors.

Leckie wanted to relate what he had seen and felt, what war precisely is, so that those who fortunately might never know of war might nevertheless come to hold those veterans of war in reverence. War, then, wasn't to be all glory; nor all melancholy and dismal. It was to be a narration of the age-old life and death struggle—biblically simple, biblically honest—impregnated with all the ancient verities and truths.

When Leckie writes he leaves out the blase, and those incidents embroidered with typical cliches of leatherneck jargon. One of his most recent efforts, and perhaps his best is STRONG MEN ARMED.

In this narrative chronicle of the Marine Corps against Japan so many men gave their lives trying to accomplish what they felt compelled to do, that I don't wonder anymore if war is truly the scared and honorable things it has been made out to be. I need only remember that men have unhesitatingly fallen on grenades to save the lives of their friends, fought valiant individual actions to give their company precious time, or attacked impossible odds simply because it was something that had to be done.

STRONG MEN ARMED, is primarily a story of courage, and thereby a study in humanism. Throughout its length there is not only the sadness and sorrow you would expect to find, but also the humor that comes sometimes with irony, sometimes with relief. Like the account of the solitary Japanese soldier who came walking out of the holocaust that was Guam and claimed he wanted to surrender when all around him his shamed comrades were preferring hari-kari.

"My commanding officer told us to fight to the last man," he explained.

"Well?" his Marine interrogator asked, aware that such demands were usually solemnly fulfilled.

"I am the last man," the Japanese replied innocently.

In time of war, courage is quiet and dignified and lonely. Often it seems altogether insignificant and futile, and like dying it cannot be shared. Perhaps a young British soldier contemplated it best on Gibraltar during World War II when he carved this inscription in a stone sentry box:

God and the soldier
All men adore.
In time of trouble
And no more;
For when war is over
And all things righted
God is neglected
The old soldier slighted.

BOOK REVIEWS

by Leila-Jane Roberts

Winchester Public Library

"Dudley, there is no tomorrow!" "Then how about this afternoon?"

by Shepherd Mead

This week we should be reviewing The Group by Mary McCarthy but reactions have been so varied and so much has already appeared analyzing, dissecting, praising and condemning the book that we shall offer for your inspection a much less ambitious but nonetheless significant sociological commentary in the form of a novel. Whereas the former dealt with a close group of Vassar classmates who set out to conquer New York in the 1930's and found themselves part of a society rapidly changing from what they had been brought up to expect, the latter deals with the '50's and '60's studied so closely by Vance Packard with traits that we all are prepared to recognize.

There's something here for everyone—except those who fail to appreciate satire. Take two widowed aunts living together in happy disharmony, a divorced wife whose second husband has either been killed or driven to suicide, several improbable but believable characters, a Long Island community full of suburban types and throw in Dudley as a catalyst. WHAM! Anything can happen and does before the week covered in this opus comes to an end.

Dudley, you see, has the soul (and impracticality) of the artist. He has tried composing, wood carving, painting, writing and even toyed with the idea of producing a musical based on Moby Dick. His chief worldly possession (borrowed at that) is a "good, solid '35 Ford station wagon" fitted with large wheels to serve as a beach buggy—a character in itself. With the good intentions of Don Quixote, Dudley heads from the Cape to Queensport to help his former wife. Interestingly, the sanest member of this zany cast is his 17-year-old son, Bart. Glory, the wife to be saved from disaster, views Dudley's efforts and plans with a mixture of qualms bred by her previous long experience with his nature and relief that perhaps someone is available to give assistance in her precarious predicament. We are told the story through Dudley's eyes but there are hints throughout of the difference of their viewpoints. He reminisces about an incident in 1948.

> "That year I'd brought Glory and Bart down to New York from the Cape, before Christmas, to keep us from getting cabin fever. Got her foot on the pavement, bought her shoes. Biggest mistake of my life. Always a mistake to let a woman get out of the woods. Hard to get her back. A man can have long thoughts in the tall trees, but a woman's shorten down to the size of a tumble washer, a deep freeze and a boutique. Enemies of promise. You know how long a woman would have stayed with old Henry Thoreau at Walden, or what she'd have said to him if she'd caught him lying on his belly, looking through a hole in the ice? 'Henry, for heaven's sake, if you won't buy me a decent pump, at least haul me a bucket of water for these dishes.' No sense of philosophy at all."

Despite her impressive, large waterfront home, a tumbledown railroad station is the only property Glory owns and no one can find the option for that although everyone is trying for a multitude of conflicting interests. To a lesser or more humble man the problems might seem unsurmountable, but not to Dudley.

Shepherd Mead, the author, also produced How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying. One suspects that some of Dudley's hatred of the orgmen derives from his creator's own experience with the business world of Madison Avenue.

Writer Comments On Editorial On Nuclear Test Ban

Editor of the Star:

Thank you for your splendid editorial, "A Sickness Called Fear", in which you ask for continued efforts by the peacemakers. If these efforts are to succeed, all must lend a hand. The first job is to clear away our unexamined opinions concerning disarmament and to replace them by a knowledge of the facts.

Prominent among these unexamined opinions is the idea that disarmament is impossible because "we can't trust the Russians." A more realistic view, for which recent history provides innumerable examples, is that no nation can be trusted to honor its agreement if it believes that these agreements have become contrary to its interests. This is why inspection is the necessary foundation on which multilateral disarmament agreements must rest; this is why studies of feasible techniques of inspection and verification occupy a notable proportion of many research programs devoted to arms control and disarmament.

Another unexamined opinion holds that the Soviet Union has such an unreasonable fixation upon secrecy that negotiation on inspection is impossible. It is true that the Russians place a higher value on secrecy than do the western powers. This fact, however, does not preclude negotiation. It merely requires us to make an effort to understand the Russian position on inspection. This effort is no more and no less than that made by any careful negotiator or any competent military commander before engaging his forces with those of his opponent.

If we consider for a moment the nature of nuclear strategy, and compare U.S. nuclear capability with that of the Soviet Union, we come at once to the explanation of the Soviet view of secrecy. Nuclear war, like a parachute jump, must succeed on the first try; that is, the first strike must knock out all of the opponent's nuclear weapons, because retaliation would be severe and horrible if even a few nuclear weapons remained. Hence no country can consider a first strike unless it has great superiority in nuclear weapons as well as exact information concerning the location of the opponent's bases. The first prerequisite we have. The second prerequisite, the Russians believe, we could get if inspectors were allowed to roam at will throughout their territory. As Americans, we know that it is unthinkable that we should take advantage of information we might acquire. But the Soviet Union cannot realistically be expected to accept our own estimate of our intentions as a basis for negotiation. Hence they are likely to reject inspection of their entire territory as long as we retain our immense nuclear superiority.

It would be foolish optimism to believe that a way out of the inspection impasse can be found overnight, but it would be cowardly pessimism to abandon the attempt. Serious efforts to find alternatives have only begun. If these efforts are based on a correct appraisal of the causes of Soviet anxiety, there is at least a good chance that an acceptable plan can be found. But we cannot expect success if we continue to insist on schemes which, in the Soviet view, would lay their country open to a repetition of past invasions, including that by Germany during World War I, by the United States following the Bolshevik revolution, and again by Germany during World War II.

Sincerely yours,
Ruth D. Terzaghi

Former Resident Remembers Fells As It Used to Be

Editor of the Star:

Your informative article in the October third issue on the Middlesex Fells Reservation Visitor's Day recalls many pleasant memories of that delightful area.

I was a member of a boys' group from the "Plains" section of the town. When we needed recreation we were not able to touch Dad for twenty-five cents as dear old Dad did not have the money, consequentlq, our leisure hours were often spent in fishing, hiking, blueberry picking and late in the fall the accumulation of enough barberries to enable the family to make that superb barberry jelly. The Middlesex Fells afforded all this. Fishing was forbidden in the reservoir system, but, poaching was not unheard of and the fish were very tasty, especially for growing boys.

In 1918, a first World War year, the town allotted to its citizens, about 50 feet of land bordering on the middle reservoir. They were permitted to cut down the standing timber and convert it into five or six foot lengths, half of which the town retained. It was the responsibility of the participants to remove their share, usually accomplished by hauling it by sleigh over the ice to the causeway road on spring mornings about 5:00 a.m. when the ice was more firm than later in the day. This was a task in which I participated in at the age of fifteen, principally in cutting down the trees. In those days the Winchester natives often hired a horse and buggy from Kelly & Hawes, dealing with the well-known hostler Barney Callahan, at rates as high as $1.00 an hour in order to view the Fells on a Sunday afternoon.

Spot Pond was a favorite goal for a hike. Immediately after an early Sunday dinner our group set out through the Fells winding up at the Spot Pond menagerie, often returning to the Plains via the Medford tower in order to lengthen and fully enjoy the day. Obviously us lads had no problem about "spare" time - we were too busy enjoying ourselves to philosophize about life at a time when Freudian thoughts were not fashionable.

Very truly yours,
J. A. Sullivan

Reader Dissents With Wheat Sale Oct. 3 Editorial

Editor of the Star:

The Star's recent comments on international politics will I hope permit a dissent, albeit, "asinine," to the October 3 editorial on wheat sales to the Communists.

The World Series and the test-ban treaty euphoria have obscured an important change in America's global policy. Wheat is just the opening gambit.

Prospective wheat sales, first estimated at more than half a billion dollars, were reported by the New York Times on October 5 to consist of formal applications from Czechoslovakia, Hungary and Bulgaria totalling $60,000,000 and an expected Kremlin bid worth about $200,000,000. Such deals will not permanently improve the U. S. internatoinal balance of payments, but we can at least expect Congress to demand hard currency remittances. The U. S. taxpayers must, of course, absorb the subsidy if our price is to be competitive. The Administration shows no inclination to restrict foreign brokers or extract political concessions from Russia.

In the U. S. wheat farmers are in trouble.

In Russia's case the President prefers to strengthen Khrushchev's hand, lest failure of a farm program he sponsored cause unrest and contribute to a Kremlin coup. Breach of the status quo might cause war. Furthermore, the White House is eager to promote more peaceful exchanges before the election. Some mouthpieces have foolishly argued that U. S. entry into East European markets can effect Titoism.

The significance of this change of policy is President Kennedy's decision to aid Communist tyrants sometimes, and hereafter to emphasize problems of world population and poverty over Red ideology and subversion. Star readers should understand that the reasons for such a decision extend logically into every nation and political crisis where man's basic necessities may be a factor.

A scholarly and controversial literature already exists on the proposition that the seven or eight "advanced" national economies support, modernize and direct earth's exploding population. Predictions of potential production are mixed. Opinion on distribution and motivation problems ranges from bleak to hopeless. (Recently Latin American governments have shown their separate inability to cope with "the farm problem.")

Regardless of risks we ought to debate the consequences of doing more business with the Reds. Would the Star encourage a benign despotism of the Big 2 to enforce the status quo? Would it work? If we share the sophisticated research of space and food relief with Russia, should not all trade barriers with Russia be dropped to improve general economic health? Can we unload our farm surpluses in no other way? The proposed wheat deal strikes me as ominous and the Star's endorsement of it shortsighted. Opposition is academic, of course, since firm orders would not have been placed without Washington's prior assurance.

Sincerely,
D. E. Rush

I Met a Monster

Editor of the Star:
I met a monster in my dream
A very deadly Creature
I guess I should not have stayed awake
And watched the second feature.

I ran so fast in my dream
I woke up tired and exhausted
And broke out in a dripping sweat
As if I were defrosted.

Now, the only way to remedy this
Is to stick to my decision
And when it gets to be seven at night
Just turn off the television.

Those horror pictures like "Outer Limits"
Are enough to make you moan
They're neither educational nor humorous
Unless you live in the "Twilight Zone."

Which movies are fit for our children to see?
Ask any of our teachers
I'm sure the first one they will rule out
Is the spooky one called, "Fantastic Features."

Sincerely,
Willma Tofuri

Canvass

Mr. Average Voter might well ask: "Why pick on the Governor's Council?" or, "What's wrong with the Governor's Council? It has been functioning for hundreds of years; let's not disturb the status quo."

One quick answer to these inquiries is that there are certain intrinsic flaws in the concept of having such a council, flaws that were recognized long ago in seven other states which had Executive Councils. John Adams, who drafted the Massachusetts Constitution, only a generation later, said that Massachusetts governors were "shackled with a council, which I now wish were annihilated." Mr. Adams realized shortly after he had authored the Constitution that stronger governors were needed, and that need persists to the present day—even more so.

The Executive Council had its birth in a board of seven assistants, which was chosen by the Plymouth Colony in 1620 at the same time a governor was chosen. Inasmuch as Massachusetts governors were appointed by the British Monarch, the colonists felt strongly that a check on the Governor was necessary. Obviously, today the council is an archaic body which is out of place in a form of government where the Governor (elected for a relatively short term, not for life) is responsible to the people.

At present, under the 1780 Constitution, the council consists of the Lieutenant-Governor and eight councilors. Councilors are elected biennially, one councilor from each of eight councilor districts, which in turn, consist of five state senatorial districts. Mr. Voter, therefore, votes only for one of the eight councilors and has nothing to do with the selection of seven others. He is seldom able to judge the individual qualifications of candidates for council, perhaps because candidates for council do so little campaigning. In many cases voters do not even know the name of the councilor from their own district. Can the average voter, therefore, feel that each councilor is responsible to him?

Council power, like Topsy, has grown and grown over the years, and "has traditionally been a center of political trading, which occasionally has degenerated into something worse." Twenty-two years ago a councilor was removed by impeachment for improperly influencing pardons. James M. Curley once called the council "a glorified pawn shop".

The Governor desperately needs to have his authority strengthened to administer properly the executive branch of our state government. Clear lines of responsibility must be established—the buck must stop at the Governor's desk, so that the voters will know to whom to look for a strict accounting.

Warning

have been distributed to Massachusetts and that possibly as many as 1000 cases have reached this state.

Mr. Saraco immediately began searching through Winchester's 16 grocery and delicatessen stores to get any of the product off the shelves that might have been distributed here for consumer sales. "One local store had six packages, but they were taken right off the shelf," said Mr. Saraco. "However," he warned, "if anyone has purchased these smoked whitefish or whitefish chubs, they should be returned to the store for credit and destroyed, or taken to the Board of Health's offices in the Town Hall basement."

The lethal fish product is smoked and packed in vacuum-sealed plastic bags bearing red and white labels and marked "ready to eat . . . keep under refrigeration."

The fact that the plastic bags are sealed makes this product hazardous since the botulism organism will grow only in the absense of air.

Botulism, more commonly known as food poisoning, is the poisoning caused by the toxin of a bacillus which sometimes infects preserved foods. Unless caught early after consumption, there is no medical cure that can prevent a rapid and violent death.

Voting

Election could even be voted at the schools if the expenses do not get prohibitive by having the Board of Registrars budget March "In anticipation of revenue" if the Selectmen judge that the plan is feasible.

The Selectmen and registrars were all in agreement that there was a very great likelihood that more voters in Winchester would turn out to the polls if they didn't all have to congregate at the crowded Town Hall in one day, but rather, could go to less crowded schools in their precinct, where there would also be more space for parking cars available, to cast their ballots.

* * * *

The Selectmen announced this week that all petitions for the acceptance of streets for 1964 Town Meeting action must be presented at the Selectmen's Office prior to Sunday, December 1, 1963.

Infant

that it was certainly born "less than an hour or two before it was left on the doorstep." Dr. Blanch said he could not predict an accurate determination on the question, but corroborated Mr. James' statement that "it certainly wasn't more than an hour or so."

At 11:05 p.m. on Sunday, October 6, police received an anonymous call from a man speaking in a high-pitched voice who said: "If you want the mother of that kid check at . . . (a Somerville address). She's moving out in the morning, so you'd better check." Not knowing whether the call was straight or a crank playing a prank, Sgt. Dolan and Patrolman Daniel C. Pearson, Jr., went in Patrol Car 51 first to the Somerville Police and then to the address, but nothing substantial was turned up. And on Monday morning the police received a call from a Reading couple offering to adopt the child.

Police were continuing their search this week for the parents of the abandoned waif. They believe the child's birth took place within a ten mile radius of the Hospital, and have not ruled out the possibility of the child's parents living in Winchester due to the fact that the young man appeared not only to know where the Winchester Hospital was, but also something about its layout. Also, according to police officers, if the child would have been born in a neighboring town the likelihood would be greater that the child would have been taken to another hospital.

"Princess," weighing about six pounds when delivered to the hospital, has already become a state ward. Mr. James said that when the child is ready to leave the Hospital it will be turned over to a state agency to be either put in a foster home or put up for adoption. "That is," he added, "unless the parents step forward and claim the child as their own."

Sgt. Crawford said that as far as the police are concerned, the case is in the misdemeanor stage now. That is, the parents would not be prosecuted for child abandonment if they claimed it right away. If the parents do not claim the baby within four weeks of the date of abandonment, then it becomes a violation of section 39 of Chapter 119 of the General Laws, and is punishable by a sentence of up to two years in a jail or house of correction. If the baby should die for any reason, the parents would be liable for a charge of murder, and might receive from two to five years in jail.

Boundary

sents inconsequential tax revenue so far as the town is concerned.

The board affirmed that no existing homes or otherwise developed land was being considered in the transfer. This question has been raised several times in the past by residents in the Dunster Lane area, who wish to remain a part of Winchester, even though sewer and in some cases water is serviced by Arlington.

The Planning Board noted that it would be far more expensive for the town to attempt to service the Steep Rock Road area, which would involve pumping water and sewerage and having fire, police, and snow removal vehicles cross Arlington land to get to the Winchester streets and homes, than it would be to keep the land and only have a portion of the service costs paid for with the tax revenues from the area.

Unlike the Winchester-Lexington transfer, in which both towns gave and received land (with Winchester receiving the lions share), this transfer would have been a straight gift from the town of Winchester to the town of Arlington.

SOI Is All Set For Festivities To Honor Columbus

Christopher Columbus will be present in spirit through the day-long festivities which have been much planned and much publicized by the local Sons of Italy Lodges.

Saturday is the day: 8:15 flag raising; 9:30 Mass for deceased members, followed by breakfast at the hall; 11 a.m. motorcade for beauty contestants; 1:30 beauty contest and 7:00 p.m. dinner and crowning ceremonies.

Five prominent judges will have the task of choosing "Miss Winchester" WEEI's Tom Russell, photographer Benrimo, a town representative, Brother Frank Provinzano and beauty consultant, Miss Cerena.

At 1:30 the girls will appear first in dressy dresses and then in swim suits.

After choosing three girls to appear at the banquet, the Home will then close to get ready for the gala evening festivities.

A marvelous Italian meal has been planned for dinner. After the after-dinner speeches the first and second runners-up will be awarded trophies and then the 1963-64 "Miss Winchester" will be crowned by Miss Joanne Addario. There will be dancing to the strains of Mike Belson's music.

Last Sunday evening the Methodist Youth Fellowship had a program on the "meaning of MYF." A membership service and Methodist Youth Fund pledges were included in this meeting.

This Sunday's program is concerned with the Black Muslims. It should be quite interesting to learn about these people and to try to answer puzzling questions about their way of life. You are invited.

He also told of several apprehensive months at Guantanamo during the time of the Cuban crises, followed by a week at the scene of the tragic Thresher disaster.

His answer was very definite and left no question in the minds of any of the senators present. Joe warmly stated that he would certainly do it all over again, Navy et al. Accompanying Lt. Bellino to the State House were Dr. and Mrs. William D. Barone and Fred Murray of the School Department.

Efficiency and Friendliness
AS THE MANY residents of this community who attended our recent "Open House" already know, what we have striven to achieve in the remodeling and expansion of our premises is efficiency without the sacrifice of traditional friendliness and warmth. Our equipment is now the most modern that can be obtained. Our rooms and corridors have been arranged to expedite traffic flow and give privacy. But we are happy that we have received so many compliments on the tastefulness of our new furnishings and decor, which apparently have succeeded beyound our hopes in recreating our home-like atmosphere of quiet comfort.

TV Weatherman Comes Next Week To Fortnightly

The first fall meeting of The Fortnightly will meet on Monday October 14, in the Social Hall of the Crawford Memorial Methodist Church with refreshments served by our social hostess, Miss Ruth Albee at one o'clock. Business meeting will be at two o'clock with the president, Mrs. Herbert D. Thompson, presiding.

For the interest of all Mrs. Warren C. Whitman will introduce the afternoon speaker, Don Kent, with his subject "Weather."

Don Kent, WBZ Radio and TV weatherman, has been talking about our New England weather for more than a score of years and, while he makes no claim to be able to control weather, he has done something about it in his colored film—"An Afternoon with Don Kent."

Rather than coming to the meeting with a scientific lecture on weather, Don has found that taking pictures of interesting outdoor things and experiences during the past year best illustrates how our changing seasons of weather bring enjoyment to our lives. This all new color film with sound and narration begins with a trip up the chair lift on Mt. Mansfield the last day of summer, 1962 (in a summer snowstorm) and continues on through the 4 seasons, ending up with a closeup of the speeding hydro-foil at 60 knots in Boston Harbor on September 11, 1963. We think you'll enjoy the color films of Indian summer, smog, iceboat racing, deep snow, spring flowers, summer cruising, golf-ball size hail and other outdoor scenes common to New England throughout the 4 seasons.

Members and their guests will not want to miss this very entertaining afternoon.

Two To Speak At Fair Housing Meeting Tuesday

The Winchester Fair Housing Association will launch its program for the coming year with a meeting on Tuesday evening, October 15th at eight o'clock in Hadley Hall at the Church of the Epiphany. Mrs. Muriel Snowden, co-founder and associate director of Freedom dom House, Incorporated, Roxbury's well-known civic and cultural center, and Mrs. Frances Perkins, director of the Experimental Nursery School at Brandeis University, will share the platform in a dialogue on the subject of "Better Relations Between the Races."

It is the purpose of the dialogue to illustrate some of the subtle but unfortunate everyday occurrences which help to maintain a barrier between Negro and white Americans. Both speakers have long been leaders in the field of inter-group relations and their dialogue was developed after years of observation and personal experience.

Mrs. Snowden is one of Boston's outstanding citizens. It was she who, in 1962, was chosen to accompany Mayor Collins to New York where they represented the citizens of Boston in Look Magazine's "All America Cities Contest." The success of their mission has been widely publicized and must be a familiar fact to most of the population of Greater Boston.

A graduate of Radcliffe College, Mrs. Snowden took additional courses at the New York School of Social Work where she majored in Community Organizations. In 1949, she and her husband, Otto, founded Freedom House.

Today Mrs. Snowden not only shares with her husband the directorship of Freedom House, but is a part time instructor at Simmons College as well as being actively associated with more than a dozen organizations, both national and local.

The League of Women Voters, the American Red Cross, the Campfire Girls, the National Conference of Christians and Jews, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, the Boston Mayor's Committee on Civic Unity, and the Massachusetts Commission Against Discrimination all claim her as a member.

At present, she is devoting much time to the Professional Advisory Committee of the Roxbury-North Dorchester Urban Renewal Program (Washington Park). It was her work on this committee which led to her selection as representative to the "All America" Cities Contest."

Emmons Ellis, chairman of the Winchester Fair Housing Association, said he believed this year was the time for a concrete demonstration of Winchester's responsibility in the field of race relations. He explained that the association is now making plans to obtain signatures to its fair housing pledge. The pledge, which was adopted by the membership at the spring meeting reads as follows:

"One of the basic ideals of our American democracy is that people of different races and religions be guaranteed equal rights including equal opportunities for housing. Our nation has been greatly enriched by the presence of a variety of backgrounds and cultures.

"Subscribing to these principles, I welcome newcomers to my neighborhood on their individual merits whatever their race, religion, or national origin."

Mr. Ellis said that the association plans to give every resident of Winchester an opportunity to sign the pledge.

Diamond Club Trip Highlighted By Diamond Find

The finding of a rare double-terminated Herkimer diamond by one of the Children's Mineral Club members sparked a highly successful weekend club trip to the Herkimer mines in Herkimer, New York.

At the regular meeting of the club last evening in the Rich Room at the Library, the club members heard the report of the excitement when Shane McDonald opened a boulder and discovered the beautiful stone—the fifth one to have been found in the mines in the last ten years.

It was, in fact, only one of many satisfying events which highlighted the trip taken by five adults and eleven club members.

Club advisor, Miss Eleanor Banks, led the trip. Other adults who went in the three-station-wagon caravan across the state were Mrs. Richard Carr, Mrs. Thornton Stearns, George Wendell II, and Dr. John McDonald.

Mineral Club members on the trip were Nicky Casagrande, Richard Carr, Mark DesMeule, Shane McDonald, Lawrence Dalton, Douglas Dalton, George Wendell III, Paul Vince, Marty Stearns, Mark Strumburger, Jed Chase.

Inquiries relative to joining this group should be addressed to Miss Banks at Box 329, Winchester.

The group is today announcing two very special events for the Club. Professor William H. Pinson, Jr. of M.I.T. will speak to the club on "Pectites, Gems from Outer Space", on Wednesday evening, November 13, at 7 p.m. Pectites are as rare as diamonds and have fallen in only a few parts of the world. There will be a door prize.

Professor James W. Skehan, S.J., of the Department of Geology at Boston College, will speak to the Winchester club in January. Father Skehan was commissioned to go with Admiral Byrd on his last trip to the South Pole to make films and to do research in geology and ice formation. It is hoped that Father Skehan will show pictures.

Dartmouth Women Sponsor a Fall Fashion Show

The Dartmouth Women's Club opens their 1963-64 season with a luncheon and fashion show by Ruth's of Medford and Norwood on October 16th at 12 o'clock at the Bear Hill Golf Club in Stoneham. Mr. Charles Frost, associated with the Melody Ranch Inc. of Wakefield, will provide background music on a Lowrey organ. Winchester members of the club are Mrs. Clifford England, Mrs. Lester Godwin, Mrs. Gerald Y. Hills, and Mrs. Michael J. Macdonald.

Volpe Tells About Russian Building Industry, Tour

Former Massachusetts Governor John A. Volpe was the guest speaker at the Winchester Rotary Club's weekly luncheon and business meeting on Thursday, October 3rd.

EX-GOV. JOHN A. VOLPE

Mr. Volpe showed color slides and described interesting details about his recent trip through the Soviet Union. Mr. Volpe's trip, covering 11,000 miles through both the European and Central Asian parts of Russia, was part of a U.S.-U.S.S.R. mutual exchange program which emphasized touring and observing the various aspects of the construction industry.

Mr. Volpe noted in his talk that housing construction in Russia was mostly prefabricated concrete, small, and generally poor—although the further away from Moscow, the seat of government where the state kept a closer eye on its activities—the better construction tended to be. For example, most of the housing in and around Moscow was of the dull grey concrete, he said, whereas a development he showed in Central Asia had used some color, and appeared to be a little better constructed.

Some things were done extremely well, however. The Moscow subway stations, according to Mr. Volpe, far surpassed any MTA Boston station—both in attractive appearances and in apparent construction.

Mr. Volpe concluded his talk by saying that he was very happy when he returned to the U.S.; while the Soviets were greatly improving their country beyond anything that the people were used to having, it certainly wasn't all that the propaganda was making the worker's paradise out to be.

He added that the Soviet people were very friendly to Americans, notwithstanding the constant state-owned newspaper accounts of U.S. war-mongers and selfish capitalists. He said they were very anxious to meet and talk with Americans and learn about the United States.

The Rotarians warmly applauded the former governor for his entertaining and enlightening talk, and welcomed him to return in the future.

Dessert Bridge To Be Fortnightly Highlight

Mrs. Paul W. Atwood, chairman of the Veterans Service Committee has launched her project to prepare Christmas bags for hospitalized veterans to be distributed at holiday time.

Mrs. Francis C. Bowes as chairman of Education Scholarship Committee is equally busy in her interest to provide a scholarship for a worthy Winchester student.

The two chairmen with their combined interests have arranged for a Dessert Bridge to be held Monday, November 4 at one o'clock in the Social Hall of the Crawford Memorial Methodist Church. The proceeds from this social function will benefit the two undertakings which are of importance to all Fortnightly members and each will want to participate. Members will be admitted on presentation of membership card and guest tickets may be secured from Mrs. Atwood, PA 9-3775, Mrs. Bowes, PA 9-2521 and Mrs. Potts, Jr., PA 9-5224 or anl club member.

The attractions will be prizes and delicious homemade desserts. Miss Ruth Albee, chairman of the Social Committee, will be in charge of the dessert table and assisted by her committee.

Troop 524 Gets Outdoor Program Under Way

On Saturday, October 5, Troop 524 under the leadership of Scoutmaster William Krupsky began their outdoor activities with a 5 mile hike through the Middlesex Fells. During this period, Mr. Krupsky was able to familiarize 10 new scouts in the art of survival in the woods. They found many plants that could be used as food and learned how to prepare them. They also worked on their advancement as Tenderfoot Scouts. The Scoutmaster was assisted by the following scouts:

David Cincotta, Wayne Krupsky, John Lima, Scott Moulton, Albert Thayer.

The ten new scouts were:

Leonard Cancelliere, Peter Dale, Michael Hallet, Alan Leland, Danny Meyer, Bobby Pettersen, James Piazza, Richard Piazza, Peter Simmons, Jon Suneson.

In conjunction with passing the Tenderfoot requirements, these scouts had an opportunity to be credited for some of their Second Class requirements.

Next Saturday, October 12, the Troop will have their first overnite.

Fall Garden Maintenance

Evergreen shrubs, while not usually thought of as "tender" plants, often need some sort of protection during the winter.

The most common cause of damage to evergreens is excessive evaporation. When the ground is frozen and little or no water is available to the plants, the strong dry winds, in addition to the bright sunlight, dry out the leaves at an astounding rate.

Such happenings result in browning of the leaves. Whole branches may be lost in this way.

The aim of a shelter is not to prevent freezing but rather to shield the plant from cold drying winds and bright sun. Burlap, while widely used is acceptable but quite unsightly.

The ideal barrier is a frame made from planking with slats attached, one inch apart. A sturdy five sided shelter can be made from these panels and placed over the plant. When painted green, it will be hardly noticed.

One must remember to never sacrifice good looks for serviceability; an unpainted barrier keeps out just as much wind as a painted one, but people still look at your garden during the winter, too.

This lath-work panel shelter is ideal for Mountain Laurels, Rhododendrons, Azaleas, and other relatively small plants.

Evergreen trees, such as Spruces and Firs need another kind of winter protection.

Their graceful boughs make ideal snow-catchers, and are often oroken as a result of this.

An operation which ameliorates this situation is also one which requires great care. Winding strong twine around the tree, starting at the bottom, so as the branches are drawn upwards and toward the center keeps the boughs from spreading under the weight of snow and ice. One should space the turns about six inches apart; the boughs should be held firmly yet not tightly.

Peach baskets make ideal barriers for small plants. Be sure, however, to anchor them securely so they won't tip over and break the plant's stem.

Probably the most discouraging thing which can happen during the winter is to find a new tree's trunk girdled by animals who have been feeding on the tender bark.

A cylinder of chicken-wire erected around the trunk of a small tree will prevent this. Don't forget, though, that at times we have two to two and one-half feet of snow on the ground, so be sure to make the cylinder tall enough.

The best time to prune trees which bleed excessively, such as Maples and Birches is right now. Remember always to cut as close to the tree as possible—an egg-shaped area should remain after pruning, not a round one. All wounds greater than two inches in diameter must be covered with a good commercial tree-paint.

If the frost hasn't already claimed your favorite tender perennial bedding plants, why not take some cuttings from them, (if you haven't done so already), to root and save over the winter and set out next spring?

The process is really quite simple. Geraniums, Impatience, Fibrous Begonias, etc. are very easy to do.

Take tip cuttings of the strongbe three to four inches long, and have all but three or four leaves removed. Roots form quickest just around the area where a leaf was attached, so make your slanted cut about an eighth of an inch below where the leaf was attached beginning on the opposite side of the stem.

Any of the rooting hormones on the market speed up the root forming process and most prevent disease since the majority of them contain a fungicide.

Don't be over-anxious about cleaning up your garden in the fall—most perennials should have their tops killed by frost before the stems are cut and the bulbs are lifted. This is especially important as far as Tuberous Begonias are concerned.

Astronauts were filled with awe at all the wonders that they saw, and now it's said that some year soon we'll have a man land on the moon. A half a century ago, few people dreamed it could be so. Columbus too, had to persuade, but that's the way that history's made.

"MEMOS" FROM YOUR Stylist

By: "Woody"

If you have fine hair it is very likely soft-sheened and sleek, but it poses a number of problems of its own. Cold weather loads it with static electricity, heat leaves it limp and you are probably in a never-ending search for props to give it body.

We might suggest frequent washing and cream rinses to provide more body, but we caution against vigorus yanking on shampoo snarls as fine hair is even more fragile when wet. Also, be careful of too-energetic brushing and combing which only adds to friction troubles.

Fine hair responds nicely to a permanent which is soft and loose and free of frizzing tendencies. This type permanent—as is true of any permanent—is properly and expertly given at WOODY'S HAIR STYLES, 573 Main St. Try us. Phone PA 9-3065.

THIS WEEK'S HELPFUL HINT: A small dose of fabric softener or liquid detergent added to the final rinse water, lessens the static electricity and clinging tendencies of nylon slips in cold weather.

Now...false starts have happy endings...

Living With Your Heart

Twin techniques which simultaneously measure total and "nutritional" blood-flow to a specific area are yielding new knowledge in widely divergent fields at Massachusetts Memorial Hospitals.

Drs. Jay D. Coffman and Stanley L. Javett, have found, in a study supported by the Massachusetts Heart Association's Greater Boston Chapter, that bradykinin—a protein which is one of our most potent dilators of blood vessels—is extremely active not only in skin but in muscle tissue.

Increased knowledge in this area may ultimately have value in treatment or prevention of cardiovascular disease, which is intimately associated with the condition of blood vessels.

In a second study for the Tobacco Council, results of which were revealed before scientific sessions of the American Heart Association, the investigators found that cigarette smoking increases rather than cuts the flow of blood to muscles.

This, however, brings no new comfort to smokers, for the researches also found that at the same time skin blood flow decreases, and "morbidity and mortality result from decreased skin blood flow leading to rest pain and gangrene."

They advised heart patients not to smoke, despite the unexpected increase of blood flow to the muscle during smoking. The mechanism accomplishing this remains unknown and the lessened blood flow to the skin is of considerably more importance, they stressed.

In the Massachusetts Heart Association study involving bradykinin, Drs. Coffman and Javett determined after research on 22 persons that bradykinin is a powerful stimulus to increase muscle blood flow, and being a natural product of the body, it may play a role in regulation of the flow of blood through muscle.

First isolated in 1948, it has previously been shown to be active in skin tissue, and to be triggered into vasodiltation by stimulation of the sweat glands.

Bradykinin—its effects measured by radioactive devices and a technique known as plethysmography—whipped directly into action both in skin and muscle almost instantly after infusion, it was found. Marked blood-vessel dilation occurred.

Attempts, thus far unsuccessful, have been made to block the action of bradykinin, in the hope that stopping it might give a definitive clue to its nature and function in the body.

Prior to the use of radioactive tracers, researchers could not separate blood flow in muscle from that in skin tissue.

CAPITOL COMMENT
By
YOUR CONGRESSMAN
BRAD MORSE

Two weeks ago I returned from a two week inspection tour of our NATO bases in Europe. Along with other members of the House Foreign Affairs Committee and members of the Parliaments of 12 NATO countries, I had an opportunity to get a first-hand view of NATO military strength.

I was tremendously heartened by what I saw. Europe has made extraordinary economic strides and is now bearing a greater share of the defense burden of the Atlantic Alliance.

The mission began in Paris where we were briefed by the Secretary-General of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. Our next stop was Naples where we conferred with the Commander in Chief of the Allied Forces of Southern Europe.

We were extremely impressed with the contribution being made by Greece and Turkey. These nations now provide thirty per cent of NATO's land forces, although they represent only seven per cent of the population. We observed Turkish troops in training exercises and came away with the feeling that we can rely on the more than 500 thousand troops on the border of Southeastern Europe in time of crisis.

A highlight of our inspection was the opportunity to watch the Alpine Mountain Troops in Italy engaged in maneuvers under simulated combat conditions. Later we flew to the northernmost sector of the NATO command in Norway and inspected West German naval installations in Kiel as well as a British Bomber Command.

One of the most lasting contributions of the NATO Parliamentary inspection tour was the greater understanding developed in our conversations with our European counterparts. Our discussions covered a wide range of topics. Everyone we talked with was enthusiastic about expanded economic relations with the United States. Although protectionism is stronger in Western Europe than it was, the more thoughtful leaders realize that this is a shortsighted approach and they want greater trade relations with us.

Despite an occasional disruption like the cancellation of the Skybolt missiles, the European nations are united in their determination to present a strong deterrent to Soviet aggression. This is increasingly true regardless of differences between political parties on domestic issues. Should a Labor Party Government come to power in Great Britain, for example, no change would take place in British determination to contribute to the strength of the Atlantic Alliance. Our European friends also appreciate our difficult balance of payments situation and are assuming a greater portion of the foreign aid and defense costs of the Free World.

The Members of Congress who participated in the NATO mission have returned with a new awareness of our strengths and our challenges in the Atlantic Alliance. Our experiences will give us added insight and perception in evaluating legislation and in responding to future foreign policy problems.

WHAT IS MENTAL RETARDATION? Mental retardation is a condition of impaired or incomplete mental development, varying from a child whose condition is scarcely noticeable to one who requires total care for life. In Massachusetts there are 150,000 retarded children, 3 out of every 100 children born are or will be mentally retarded.

HOW WILL MY MONEY BE USED? 75% of funds collected will be used for the direct benefit of local children, 10% is used by the Massachusetts Ass'n. and 15% goes to the National Ass'n. There are no paid officers in The EMARC.

WHAT IS EMARC? The East Middlesex Association for Retarded Children, Inc., is a non-profit parent group organized to help all retarded children. The Association serves Wakefield, Melrose, Stoneham, Winchester, Woburn, Wilmington, Burlington, Reading and North Reading.

WHAT SERVICES DOES EMARC FURNISH? EMARC provides for parent counseling, pre-school training classes, adolescent and young adult vocational training summer day camp and a Boy Scout troop. EMARC helps support the research programs.

Whether you choose to believe it or not, perhaps as much as 95 percent of headaches have no source in the head at all. Tension is the most common cause, and the pain results from a release of "pain substance" in the nerve ends of the scalp at a time when arteries in the head have become dilated.

Reading, television, poor ventilation and driving can cause this, as can too-long preoccupation with one subject, missing a meal and fever.

However, if getting prescriptions filled is somewhat of a headache, may we suggest a cure? Rely on the prompt, courteous service at McCORMACK'S APOTHECARY, 568 Main St. Phone PA 9-2700. 24-hour prescription service. Free local delivery.

College Club To Present Dr. Mary Bunting

The Winchester College Club will present Dr. Mary Bunting president of Radcliffe College, as speaker at their annual fall meeting on October 14, at Crawford Memorial Methodist Church.

After dinner coffee will be served at 7:30, when members and guests are invited to meet old friends and meet new ones.

Dr. Bunting's topic will be "Structuring Education for Women in the Modern World." "Miss Winchester" Crowned Saturday

"Miss Winchester" will be crowned on Saturday of this week as part of the Columbus Day Celebration being held by the Sons of Italy Ladies' and Men's Lodges.

All girls between 16 and 21 who have not yet entered the contest are urged to call Mrs. William Maggio (PA 9-5242) for final details. Just two days left!

The program for the day will start with a flag-raising ceremony in front of the S.O.I. Hall on Swanton Street at 8:15 a.m. Following this flag-raising, members of the lodges, and all others desiring to participate will assemble for a procession to the St. Mary's Church for a 9:00 o'clock Mass in remembrance of the deceased members of the organization. The procession will be headed by the Drum and Bugle Color Guard of the Immaculate Conception Church.

After the Mass, those present will return to the Hall for a light breakfast and at 11:00 o'clock contestants of the Beauty Contest will ride through sections of town in convertibles.

Then, there will be a short recess until about 1:30 when the Beauty Contest Aspirants will be preparing for their part in the program before an anxious and enthusiastic capacity audience and five capable judges. The girls will be judged in both evening dress and swim suit categories and the winner will be announced with the runners-up at the banquet in the evening. "Miss Winchester" of 1963 will be crowned by Miss Joanne Addario, who held the title for the past year. The Queen will also be the recipient of her cape and loving cup.

To bring the day's activities to a successful closing, there will be dancing until midnight.

Chairman, Robert Maietta, and his diligent committee now anticipate good reports from the weatherman as all other aspects are in excellent control with signs of a full house being expected.

Toastmistress Club Opens Year

Winchester Toastmistress Club opened its new season with a "Read-a-Round" for practice, pleasure and information. This also tested the reading skills of its members.

Program Chairman Phyllis Pierson of Arlington discussed problems of programs, procedures and meeting dates, which are being changed from the second and fourth to the first and third Mondays of each month.

General evaluator, Pamela Papadinis of Winchester, reviewed the entire meeting with "good and bad" comments where deserved.

The next meeting is Monday, October 7, in the Common Room, Church of the Epiphany. We expect to induct two new members, welcome guests, and participate in a stimulating program.

Special guests of the society at this meeting were Col. and Mrs. Alan B. Shepard of Derry, parents of the first man in space. Mr. Welligton L. Caldwell of Main Street is president of the society.

Red Cross Invites Gray Ladies To Training Course

The annual Fall Red Cross Gray Lady training course is being given at the American Legion Hall in Bedford on Thursday, October 24 and 31 from 9:30 to 12:30.

If you have some hours to spare one day a week or more if you wish, and would like to take this training course, please call the Red Cross at 729-2300. Transportation will be provided.

What is a Gray Lady?

At Chelsea Naval Hospital and at the Bedford V.A. Hospital, she can be the hands and feet of the serviceman and veteran. That box of kleenex, pack of cigarettes, postage stamp, or magazine can be his if there is a Gray Lady available to procure them for him, or the lad who would like to write a letter home and is not able to do so alone, can, with the help of a Gray Lady. Her willingness and cheerfulness mean a lot to the hospitalized serviceman or veteran.

Then there is always the need for special skills such as leather work, ceramics, weaving, etc. Whatever it is that one likes to do, that task can be found. The possibilities are varied and pleasant and all are very rewarding. Gray Ladies, too, are needed at our local hospital to serve at the reception desk.

Democratic Town Committee

At a well-attended meeting of the local Committee on last Wednesday evening in the East Room, Town Hall, several matters of interest were discussed, some of which were voted upon.

After secretary John Hogan read his report and it was approved, John, in the absence of treasurer Bill Dailey, read the treasurer's report also. The treasury is in fine shape and growing with each meeting. As there are no dues levied on the members of the local Committee, it is to their credit that they are always enthusiastic in their support of the occasional fund-raising projects which are undertaken.

Several reports were read after chairman Elizabeth McDonald mentioned the forms and procedure necessary to change one's voter designation at Town Hall.

Mrs. Barbara Joslin gave a report on her efforts to obtain speakers for a proposed panel. For the present the panel has been postponed. Barbara also announced that she had with her a signature which would remove from the Executive Council its statutory power, leaving it enabled to use only the power given it by the Massachusetts State Constitution upon its enactment in 1780.

Following the discussion the chairman, Mrs. McDonald, announced that all members who wished to sign the initiative petition would have an opportunity to do so during the social hour.

After a discussion on having the voters of the town vote in their own precincts as provided for in the Act of 1928 under which we now operate, and after chairman McDonald reported on a previous meeting where she had taken this matter up with the Board of Selectmen, it was unanimously voted that the board be notified that the Democratic Town Committee unanimously endorsed this idea.

The final discussion of the evening concerned directions we have received from the Democratic State Committee concerning the registration of voters. Mrs. Susan Winn is this year's chairman of Democratic registration and is setting up committees in each precinct in accordance with the plan of the State Committee.

The plan is the result of research completed by an able committee headed by Professor James MacGregor Burns of Amherst College. It promises to add a great number of Democratic voters to the rolls. There will be more on this subject later.

A enjoyable social hour wound up the evening.

Paratrooper Or Sky Diver, What's The Difference?

Since announcing last week that October is "Paratrooper Month," Sergeant Fred T. Nixon, Army recruiter for Winchester, has received many inquiries about the terms "Sky-diver" and "Paratrooper."

According to Sergeant Nixon, many young men don't know the difference between the two terms, and are often confused about what they can enlist for. "The big difference," he says, "is about $55.00 a month." He went on to explain that $55.00 is the amount which paratroopers are paid as a bonus each month that they are on "jump status."

"In other words," he said, "paratroopers are paid for jumping, while most sky-divers have to pay." There are really other differences, he explained, such as the fact that sky-diving is free-fall (the jumper opens his own chute), while the Army paratroopr jumps from a "hook-up," which opens his chute automatically about 15 feet below the plane.

For young men interested in sky-diving, however, an Army Airborne Division is the place to be—both of the Army's Airborne Divisions, the 82nd in North Carolina and the 101st in Kentucky, have large sky-diving teams.

There are still openings during the month of October—"Airborne Month"—for qualified men interested in the travel, training, and excitement offered to the wearer of the Army's "jump wings." Additional information may be obtained by calling Sgt. Nixon at EX 6-5777, or by visiting his office at 49 High Street in Medford.

"Bewitched Bothered And Bewildered"

"Bewitched, Bothered and Bewildered?" is the question that the Reverend Mr. Wayne Horvath will ask the Senior Forum in Chapel this Sunday, October 13.

Mr. Horvath, an ordained Congregational minister, is the former director of the Department of Social Relations of the Massachusetts Council of Churches. He holds an A.B. in Political Science from Ohio Wesleyan University, did graduate work in theology at Oberlin College and in political science at Ohio State University. He received his S.T.B. degree from the Boston University School of Theology.

He has had a wide experience in field of government and is particularly aware of the need for the church to take an active interest in contemporary social issues. He has, for example, served two United States Senators as legislative assistant and assistant campaign manager. Mr. Horvath served as a member of the Massachusetts Advisory Committee Commission Against Discrimination, Governor Volpe's Committee on Freedom Riders, and the Governor and Mayor's Committee on the Emancipation Proclamation. Also as secretary-treasurer of the Center for Applied Studies in Citizenship and Aging, and secretary of the Massachusetts Advisory Committee for the United States Commission on Civil Rights.

He was pastor of the Highland Congregational Church in Somerville, and has been frequently heard as the moderator of the radio program, "Churchmen Weigh the News."

The chaplains for the service will be John Deans, assisted by Porter Mulford. The deacons will be Peter Harvey and Hugh Fisher and the ushers, Dan Brink and Richard Halverson.

The chairman of the Sports Committee, Eric Schaefer and Mary Mouradian are hard at work putting the finishing touches on the fall outing which will be held this Saturday, rain or shine, at the summer home of Mr. and Mrs. David Choate.

ACROSS THE COUNTER

Here's a true story to think about.

A small department store in another city carried a flat amount of $8,000 in fire insurance on its fixtures and equipment. The management reasoned that the fixtures were old, nearly depreciated out, and not worth much on the "used equipment" market.

When the policy came up for renewal, the agent urged "Full Replacement" coverage of $32,000 on the fixtures. But the store owners decided against it.

Then it happened—a hungry flame nibbled at the store. And the more it ate, the more it wanted. A passerby spotted this midnight feast too late. Only a smouldering shell greeted the morning sun. A total loss! The owners received $8,000, the full amount of their policy, for the fixtures and equipment. And they paid $24,000 MORE from their business to replace the fixtures.

This extra $24,000 value was insurable. It should have been protected.

A huge amount of extra insurance can often be bought for a comparatively modest sum. Why not take steps now—before a loss—to see that your are properly protected. Call us for more information.

Matador Ball Is Sell-Out For Friends Of Hospital

BRINGING THE AURA AND EXCITEMENT of the bullfight to the Friends of the Hospital Matador Ball here on October 18 and 19 is this creation of the decorating committee of the ball. In his company, left to right, are Jean Heileman, Barbara Bower and Jenny Lou Brackett.

Just another week to go for the Matador Ball. Ole!!

Two sell-out evenings will mark the now traditional Friends of the Winchester Hospital Waltz Evening coming next week on Friday and Saturday, October 18 and 19.

Against a background of striking Spanish decor this year's ball with a theme of "Matador," promises to be an exciting, colorful spectacle with excellent services, exceptional prizes, and extravagant beauty in the decorations. True to the traditions of Waltz Evening will be the waltz contest, the exhibition dances, winsome flower girls and helpful ushers.

Richard Champagne, of the Champagne Dancing Studio, and Harry Raymond and Ron Greenwood of the Curry School of Dance will be among the judges on Friday and Saturday night, respectively.

The Friends of the Winchester Hospital are grateful for the generous contributions which are still coming in from patrons and patronesses of Waltz Evening. In addition to the list printed last week, the following have contributed to date:

Sachems Stop Stoneham 8-0 With Rugged Defense

With just two minutes remaining in the game, Stoneham fullback Steve Freeland broke off right tackle, crossed the 50-yard line, and was hit hard at the Winchester 44. Of the 5,000 fans at Recreation Park, only a handful were aware that the play marked the first time the Spartans were able to penetrate into Winchester territory. Following it, quarterback Dick Morrill faded back to his own 45 and heaved a pass to Ron Romboli, who hauled it in and scored easily, apparently putting Stoneham on the scoreboard. But red penalty flags were littered all over the field, and the play was nullified due to illegal procedure in the Spartan backfield. After a brief exchange, Winchester finally took possession with 35 seconds left and ran out the clock. Then, tempers, which had been on edge throughour the game, erupted into a fist-swinging melee that police and team officials quickly terminated.

FAIETA RECOVERS

Defensive end Dick Faieta, with two fumble recoveries, gave Winchester an early momentum and set up the only scoring of the afternoon. He recovered the first on the opening kickoff at the Stoneham 40, but the Sachem offense bogged. Then, Romboli had the ball jarred loose on his own 21 and Faieta came up with it again. This time Bob Branley, throwing sharply and accurately, hit Vic Papadinis who carried to the 6. After Ed Cutting was stopped at the line of scrimmage, Branley again teamed with Papadinis for the score. The same two boys also accounted for the two-point conversion.

Stoneham had hardly got their hands on the ball again when Papadinis picked off a Romboli pass on his own 35 and returned to the Spartan 42. Another pass to Papadinis, and two carries by Cutting, brought the ball to the 20; but, there, the drive ended when still another Branley pass skipped by Papadinis at the 10.

GOLDIN RUN

Already sensing victory, the Sachem defense dug in, determined to make no concessions. Three downs and five yards later, Stoneham's Wayne Moores punted to the 50 to safetyman Jack Kimball who returned to the 42. Then, halfback Steve Goldin took a reverse from Branley, cut to his left, and scampered down the sideline to where the official marked him out of bounds on the one-yard line. With a first and goal, Branley, attempting to push over for the score himself, lost the ball, and the fourth Sachem threat in as many tries went by the boards.

Twice, before the first half ended, Stoneham made bids to score. Both times halfback John Foresto couldn't quite handle Romobli's passes. A Spartan running attack was halted nicely by the fine defensive work of Dick Faieta, Bill Grant, Vic Lawson, and Frank Frongillo. Still, instead of leaving the field at half time with at least a three-touchdown lead, the Sachems had to worry about protecting a slim eight-point margin in the second half.

DEFENSE EXCELS

The Sachem defensive unit rose to the occasion. In the third period they allowed Stoneham a minimum of eight running plays, and not once did the Spartans cross their own 35-yard line. At the same time, Winchester ran off tweny-one plays, but haphazard and sloppy ball handling kept them from materializing into the scoring punch they were designed to be.

Though the Sachems continued to hold the edge in all departments in the final period, it wasn't until those last few hectic seconds that they managed to breathe easily.

Sachem Sidelines

You have to credit everyone with a share in Saturday's win. Spirit was exceptionally high. It was good to see linemen hitting and carrying through. And every back ran with something extra . . . These boys had to come back for the second half as twice the team they were in the first, and they did just that . . . Those numerous fumbles weren't the result of inexperience or nervousness, they were caused by tacklers who were hitting harder than have in two years . . . Because of this aggressive brand of football, scuffles broke out several times during the game, finally getting out of control at the closing whistle. The Spartaas wanted this game badly; they, too, were high for it, and it is understandable how tempers could flare. But it should be mentioned that most of the Stoneham squad handled themselves well, and there is no reason for them to feel ashamed in any way . . . Charley Martin hauled in a TD pass from Don Allard Saturday night in the Sweepers 34-0 romp of Portland . . . This win was important to the Sachems in more than one way. Besides building confidence in themselves, they probably learned a great deal through the mistakes they made. There is no doubt that they will improve with each succeeding game. Above all, they've found out that by hitting their opponents harder than they get hit themselves, the edge and advantage is always theirs.

ANXIOUS MOMENT — Capt. Buddy Rotondi, wishing he could be in there himself, watches that Sachem defense hold tight. Kneeling behind him is quarterback Bob Branley.

JACK KIMBALL (25) isn't sitting down on the job, he's just become part of a traffic jam. Halfback Ed Cutting (26) and end Keith Puffer lend their support.

Belmont Over Lynch

The Lynch varsity football team traveled to Belmont on last Friday afternoon for its second game of the season and was defeated by a strong Belmont unit 22- 8.

After holding the host team scoreless in the opening period, the tables turned just before the half ended. The ball exchanged hands until Lynch was on its own 40 in punt formation. Jim Mumma was back to kick out of danger but the pass from center went over his head. Trying to run it back after the recovery, Mumma was dropped on the 35 with Belmont taking over. Belmont ran around right end and was able to reach pay dirt with two minutes remaining in the first half with the attempt for extra points halted.

Lynch selected to receive to op- the second half and after making two first downs finally had to punt. Belmont came back running hard and after two series of downs caught Lynch napping and quick-kicked to push Lynch back. Mumma and Bob Russo did some fine running while Brian Collins pitched beautiful passes to Kevin Barry and Bob Hilfinger but were then stalled with Belmont going on the march. Right end was a target for the quarterback, and when he got by safety man Collins, the quarterback threw nicely to him. The ball was caught on the Lynch 20 and he sped the rest of the way unmolested. The extra points were made through right tackle and Belmont went ahead 14-0.

Lynch fought back, and reaching the Belmont eight yard marker, quarterbcak Collins first called on fullback Russo to hit the middle with but two yards gained and finally gave to Mumma on a counter to the right for a touchdown with Collins rushing for two points.

The ball was punted back and forth in the last period until Belmont decided to pass. The left end crossed deep in Collins' zone and with the ball in the air, both put on extra effort to possess the pigskin, with the Belmont end finally taking hold, pivoting, and running 18 yards for the score. The rush for the extra points was successful, and Belmont ended on top by a 22-8 score.

Lynch travels to Stoneham tomorrow (Friday) and will be looking for its second win.

College Sports

Dave Kerrigan crewed on the University of Maine's sailing team against Dartmouth College in Hanover, N.H., on Saturday. The Maine team placed fourth among eight colleges in sloop eliminations at the U.S. Coast Guard Academy at New London, Conn., last week.

Eben Graves was a crewman on the Bowdoin College freshman sailing team that opened its schedule by defeating North Yarmouth 21½ to 19½ in a race on Tuesday, October 1.

Denis Golden of 10 Robinson Park is currently playing with one of the finest soccer teams in the recent history of Tufts College. Golden, a sophomore government major, was a varsity football and track standout at Gov. Dummer Academy. His entire family, including his father, Dr. J. L. Golden, his mother, two sisters and four brothers, has been outstanding in athletics. Dr. Golden was the 1930's.

Head coach of the Tufts booters is Al Malthaner of 162 High Street, a 1950 graduate of Springfield College where he was an All-American swimming star and All-East soccer player.

Last Thursday, in a game televised over Channel 2, Tufts bowed to a strong Harvard squad, 4-0. Next match in a ten-game schedule for the Jumbos will be against Amherst in Medford on October 9. Tufts will also play host to the big Atlantic Coast Regional College Division Soccer Tournament on November 22-23 in the Oval.

Quabbin Mooring Areas Closed For Season

Acting Commissioner John J. Haggerty of the MDC today announced that the three boat mooring areas at Quabbin Reservoir will be closed to fishermen at the close of day on October 15.

This will bring to an end one of Quabbin's most successful seasons, as a total of over 60,000 boating enthusiasts used the three mooring areas at the reservoir.

Haggerty said that the mooring areas will reopen, for fishing, in the spring of 1964.

Cambridge Latin Next For Sachems; Saturday 2 p.m.

Winchester High School's football Sachems, braced by their win over a pretty good Stoneham High team last Saturday, hit the road again this week, treking over to Fulton Field in Cambridge to take on the Cambridge Latin eleven.

Cambridge Latin was selected to replace Watertown on the Winchester schedule when the Watertown wanted out some years ago, and though the rivalry has not been one of the best in the Winchester list it has done fairly well.

Saturday's meeting looms as no titanic struggle. Maynard beat Cambridge 13-0, in the season's opener, and last Saturday Methuen pulled out a tie in its game with the Cantagbridgians. This would indicate that Winchester will have at least an even chance of pulling out a victory at Fulton Field.

A year ago Cambridge was the only team the Sachems were able to beat, so that unless the Cantabs have improved greatly Winchester should be favored.

The Sachems beat a pretty good Stoneham last Saturday at Homecoming Day at Stoneham, and Coach Knowlton felt his charges displayed the best all around play they have shown in several seasons. Stoneham was as big as Winchester and played aggressively.

Winchester is working hard to come up with a good team this fall. A win over Cambridge Latin will help a lot to build up the winning spirit Winchester was so shy of a year ago.

Little is known of the Cantabs individually, but ordinarily Cambridge has a good big team that ought to give the Sachems a fight. Kickoff time is 2 p.m., with plenty of accommodations for fans.

First Soccer Win As Watertown Falls, 3-2

The Winchester High School soccer team won its first game last Friday, defeating Watertown 3-2. Playing aggressively, the Sachem front line of Wakefield, Scherban, Sackett, Sadler, and Harvey kept the pressure on the Watertown defense throughout the game.

A penalty kick by Tibor Sadler started the scoring for Winchester in the first period. In the second period Dick Wakefield scored on a sure-footed corner kick to give the Sachems a 2-0 half-time lead.

The Watertown team bounced back in the final stanzas to tie the game at 2-2. The Winchester booters then pushed the play back towards the enemy goal. This pressure resulted in a goal by Ron Scherban late in the final period.

Once again the defense of Weeks, Randlett, and goalie O'Connell thwarted numerous opportunities of the visitors. Halfbacks Fisher, Pierce, and Penner set up play after play throughout the game, giving the front line more opportunity to shoot at the enemy goal.

This Thursday, the booters take on Wellesley at Wellesley. Next week the team plays at Lexington (Tuesday) and at Belmont (Friday).

John Michael Paveskovich, better known to baseball fans as Johnny Pesky, was born September 27, 1919 in Portland, Oregon.

THAT DETERMINED LOOK is on Ed Cutting's face as he scampers around right end for a short gain in third period of Saturday's game. Coming up behind him, and looking for somebody to block, is end Bill Grant (86).

McCall J. H. 32, Muzzey 0

McCall Junior High won its second game of the season on Friday, October 4 by swamping Muzzey Junior High of Lexington, 32-0.

Five touchdowns were scored by five different boys on different plays. RHB Paul Eaton scored on a buck right. LE, Ken Garvey scored on a sweep right pass. FB, Bob Nutile scored on an off tackle left. QB, Dave DeTeso scored on a QB sneak. LHB, John Gentile scored on a buck left. Oddly enough, only one successful PAT was scored by LHB, Dan McGee, to round off the score.

All 40 boys on the McCall squad were able to contribute to the victory; the third team responsible for the last two touchdowns.

FB, Bob Blanchette, on his way to a TD with but one man to beat, cut back inside and was swamped by the Lexington secondary. He was injured on this first period play and will be out of action for awhile with a pulled ligament.

Coach Jim Phillips believes the major test will come next week when McCall meets the strongest team in the league, Wakefield. This team is perennially the biggest one in the league, and will require the 100 per cent effort of the McCall squad.

The size and weight of this year's squad is not as great as last year's. However, they have shown surprising spirit and willingness to give their all. They could very well be a formidable threat to Wakefield next Friday when the two teams clash at Wakefield.

Scouting Report

CAMBRIDGE LATIN

Coach: John Noble

'62 Record: 2-6-0

No over-confidence this year. Latin is reputed to have a good offense, an aggressive defense, and a squad that is generally in good condition. They have two quarterbacks named McKinnon and Cabral who can heave passes as far as any high schoolers, and a consistent receiver named Jackson. To stop them, the Sachems will have to work on improving a pass defense that, thus far, has not been too effective. If it is improved, defenders could have a field day with interceptions. Players to watch: McKinnon (10), Cabral (12), Jackson (22), Trioli (40), backs; Gallup (72), tackle.

Note: Game time moved ahead to 2 p.m.

When writer and narrator Charlie Einstein asked Casey Stengel to contribute a few words during the TV special "A Man Called Mays" last Sunday night, ole Case rambled on for seven uninterrupted minutes. The camera study of Einstein nodding all the while in complete exasperation should become a film classic . . . NBC's program on Willie Mays, by the way, bravely competed with CBS's special on Liz Taylor. But it was really no contest. Willie could hit, run, field, steal bases, and crash into fences. Liz just stood there not doing very much at all . . . Earlier the same night, the brand new Sonny Liston made his debut on the Ed Sullivan Show . . . a graciously smiling Sonny Liston. The Champ did a masterful job of skipping rope to the rhythm of "Night Train," then, remarkably, smiled some more. Maybe there really is something to the theory of plasticized monomolecular structure . . . Halfback Dan Serieka shattered Rhode Island's homecoming day last Saturday with runs of 41 and 71 yards, as the defending Yankee Conference champs, New Hampshire, rolled 25-13 . . . And quarterback Dana Kelly pitched TD passes of 25 and 54 yards to Melrose's Scott Creelman in Dartmouth's 28-0 win over Pennsylvania . . . When Red Auerbach dropped 6ft. 6 in. rookie Bill Green this week it marked the first time in eighteen years that a Celtics No. 1 draft choice has failed to make the squad. But if you ever get the opportunity to sit in on an Auerbach-directed workout, you'll wonder how anyone made it . . . The Boston club (still unnamed as yet) of the American Soccer League remains undefeated with their 4-1 victory over a strong Newark team last Sunday . . . And last Friday Winchester High's newly conceived soccer squad defeated Watertown 3-2 for the team's first win . . . Likeable, but not too successful, Mickey Vernon has been rehired by the Pittsburgh Pirates as a batting coach. Vernon and Pirates manager Danny Murtaugh are close friends . . . QUOTE OF THE WEEK goes to Sandy Koufax after Mickey Mantle slammed a home run off him in the final game of the World Series: "I'm proud of it . . . it's the cheap home runs that make you disgusted." . . . The Boston Bruins got another season underway this week, and the only thing you can safely predict about them is that they are a cinch to finish ahead of the Red Sox and Celtics in attendance. In fact, they could finish in the cellar for the next ten years and still draw more. Nothing, but nothing, attracts fans as much as good old fashioned contact, and the expectancy of seeing blood.

Cross Country Team Wins Tri-Meet

Friday the Winchester Cross Country team defeated Belmont and Watertown in their second tri-meet of the season. Going into the meet the Reddleman had a record of 1 and 1, beating Concord, but losing to a strong Stoneham team in last weeks tri-meet. However, this week running on their own course, the Reddleman were able to keep hopes alive for a championship by beating a very strong Belmont team by one point, 28-29, and a vastly improved Watertown team 20-37.

The race was run at an exceptionally fast pace with co-captain Jon Buckley of Winchester leading the way throughout, only to be beaten right at the finish line by Bob Scarfo of Belmont. Belmont's Stokenger took third and Dickerson from Watertown got fourth. However Winchester then got three of the next four places, with Ian Jenike, Bob Lynch, and Neil Shapleigh taking 5, 7, and 8 respectively. All the times were exceptionally fast, and indeed it took a top effort from everyone on the team to win this crucial meet.

On the same day, Winchester's J.V.'s ran their record to 4 and 0 by shutting out both Belmont and Watertown, 15-50. Led by John Lynch the J.V.'s took the first nine places, with Swim, Callahan, Cussen and Swanson, all running very well.

Next week the Reddlemen have a tri-meet with Reading and Lexington, at Reading. Both schools have good teams and it should prove to be a very good race. Thanks to all, who withstood the cold, and cheered the team on to victory last week. Your support was very much appreciated by the whole team.

BOWLING

S.O.I. Men

The magic score was 6-2 in the S. O. I. bowling league the last time out because all seven matches ended up as such. The final outcomes were identical but positions in the standings made up a big change.

Notre Dame jumped back into the drivers seat after winning over Maryland who is now in last place. "Pizza" Bellino continued to hit at a big clip for the leaders with tremendous strings of 146-135-109 and also having an excellent night was Pete Lonigro who hit for 101-100-121. Pete was so happy that he offered free taxi service the rest of the night. Emile Doucette went over the 300 mark with 84-124-93. John Dattilo was the only Marylander hitting the magic number with scores of 106-100-103.

Richie Bucci and Chick Vespucci had respective scores of 113-108-106 and 90-90-124 to tak California. Nick Molea performed best for Cal with 143-103-85. Despite the victory, however, Yale moved from first to second place while the losers dropped one notch to sixth.

Moving from eighth to fifth slot was Harvard after defeating Army and yet the losers hold third place. Hokie Procopio again topped his team with 111-103-110 while Army succeeded in having one bowler hit the magic number and that was Capt. Choppers Gangi who ended up with 108-117-100.

Navy had three men hit over 300 to win over Holy Cross and the win moved Navy up one to eleventh while the losers dropped one place to fourth. Going big for the victors were Capt. Richie Riga 93-120-103, Mario Mascioli, 94-104-108 and Frank Provinzano 110,102-89. Doing best for losing Holy Cross was Capt. Muskie Tofuri who had 101-99-107.

By defeating St. Mary's, Bates climbed from ninth to seventh, while the defeated slipped down three places to thirteenth. Capt. Bob Fiore had a good night for the winners when he rolled 121-87-118 and was helped by brother Roundy who hit for 109-116-110. Capt. John Mangano was the only 300 hitter for St. Mary's with 94-100-112.

Alabama's Capt. Dick Tofuri with 94-111-104 and Al Malatesta's 97-95-110 had much to do with winning over Georgetown. Pucky Perritano topped the losers with 87-107-108 and has to be satisfied with dropping down to eighth while Alabama climbed out of the cellar position to twelfth.

Boston College's win over ninth-place Penn moved to from eleventh to tenth place. B. C. had good results from Capt. Tony Saraco 111-120-111, Giro Cerulli 105-126-96 and Max La Carrubba 117-102-102. Giving good efforts for Penn were Carl Bertolucci 114-84-116 and Capt. Babe Tofuri 89-96-123.

S.O.I. Women

One team happened to catch the attention of your reporter last week. That happened to be the Luckies, Kay Lentine's team. I find that she has one of the calmest teams in the league. She has girls on her team that get spares and strikes and they just turn around as nice and calm as can be and report to their captain.

These girls are Evelyn Gambino, Annette Michienzi, Ann Gerardi, and Virginia Gorrasi. For the calmest team in the league they are doing just fine. They happen to be in fourth place this week. That's not bad girls. Good luck!

By the way, for the girls that did not understand why Rose Fiore presented Ann Gerardi with the J.F.K. 50 mile hike sweatshirt, I have received all the dope on it. Seems as if Ann missed her ride to the alleys the wek before and had to walk all the way. She made it in good time. Tell me Ann, did the sweatshirt fit? Did it help you in your bowling?

Nice sport is our girl Ann Gerardi. As for their captain Kay Lentine, a teriffic, wonderful person, that's Kay.

Cusi Fiore had promised the Kools a real good fight and she and her team gave them one. Although they took 6 points from them the Kools still remain in top place. Better luck next time Cusi.

That's all this week girls!

The Rams successfully held off the challenge of the second place Giants last week to retain their slim hold on first place. J. Caulfield of the Rams finished very strong in the third string to insure the split. Dick Burke of the Giants went into the tank in all three strings. At what price does a man sell his integrity?

Frank Rolli seemed a bit upset when the latest averages were posted. Evidently, some people just don't understand that the breed needs improvement.

Wellesley Mornings Hears Report On Foreign Policy

Dr. Mary Agnella Gunn is no stranger to friends of the Mornings programs and the Winchester Wellesley Club is happy to present her again at Hadley Hall on Thursday, October 17, when she will speak on "Boston to Broadway."

Dr. Gunn is a graduate of the State University of Iowa where she received her M.A. and Ph.D. She has taught in public and experimental schools in Iowa, has served in Teachers College of Connecticut as professor of education, English, speech, dramatics and as director of the College Theatre in New Britain, and has been lecturer and consultant in many state universities. She is presently professor of English Education at Boston University, giving, among others, courses in "Contemporary American Theatre."

DR. MARY AGNELLA GUNN

In 1947, on leave of absence from the university, Dr. Gunn served on an educational mission to Korea under the United States Department of State and Department of Army and in 1956 served on a similar mission in the Middle and Far East. She is an expert on language, author of several books and her achievements are many, but close to her heart for many years has been the study of the American Theatre.

Dr. Gunn is a person of exceptional charm and enthusiasm and her presentation of her subject is always delightful.

On Thursday, October 3, at the close of the usual coffee hour, Mrs. Colin L. Wheeler, chairman of the Mornings program for this year, introduced Dr. Lincoln P. Bloomfield, director of the Arms Control Project at MIT's Center for International Studies, who spoke on "The Objectives of the United States Foreign Policy", a subject which, as Dr. Bloomfield said, could hardly be completely covered in one short hour!

Dr. Bloomfield spoke of the long-term concept as against short-term planning, indicating that "of prime importance are national security and national survival of American values" and pointing out that "our over-all purpose must be to create the sort of environment in which the United States can be sure to enjoy survival, both political and spiritual."

Dr. Bloomfield stated that prevention of general nuclear war does not mean that military power is out of date.

"Time is bought by nuclear weapons," he said, "and to maintain a strong military position deters the aggressor. The purpose of military power is to give time for moral ideas to take root." "Although there is at present no chance of general and complete disarmament without war," he said, "we must prevent the spread of nuclear weapons at almost any cost."

Dr. Bloomfield feels that the recent Limited Test-ban Treaty has several values and to him it is important and hopeful; it is a signal —a signal that it is possible to do something. He feels that the Communist world is changing and that the Russians, as well as we, have learned the vital importance of keeping a strategic equilibrium.

"China, however, has not yet learned this lesson he said, and has very different ideas concerning nuclear war." He regards China as an expanding force in Asia, a destabilizing force, which could bring about a fundamental conflict between the races and make a holy war possible. "The American objective must be," he said, "to contain Communist China and thus avert a world-war racial war."

In conclusion, Dr. Bloomfield stated that in his opinion our goal at the present time should not be the Utopia of a World Government but rather community building with actions which offer creative substitutes for destructive methods.

Fairbanks Tour Is Huge Success For Local MSPCA

On Monday, October 7, several hundred women enjoyed a private tour of the Fairbanks House in Dedham. This is the oldest wood frame house in the United States and was built in 1636. The Wincehster Chapter of the MSPCA, whose president is Mrs. Frederick Cardin, organized the tour.

A direct descendant of the Fairbanks family, Mrs. Gordon Sidebotham made a most enthusiastic and knowledgeable chairman. Her mother, Mrs. Freeman, who is the curator of the Fairbanks House was the guide of the tour.

In the ballroom, amidst much gaiety, brunch was served, as Mrs. Jenness Eugley, dressed in Puritan costume, furnished the background music.

The delicious home-cooked food was all made by members and served on antique pewter platters loaned by the co-chairman, Mrs. George Connors.

In the ballroom, a boutique manned by Martha Boland and Phoebe Snow was the highlight. Beautiful handmade baby things, poodle collars, aprons and dolls were purchased, undoubtedly with Christmas in mind.

Boston Museum's Many Art Services Reach Winchester

Winchester Day at the Museum of Fine Arts is scheduled for Thursday, October 24, with "Walks through the Museum" at 11 and 11:30 a.m. to acquaint residents with the Museum's renowned collections and its membership program.

There is no charge for these "walks" and refreshments will be served at the conclusion of each. For reservations, call Mrs. George A. Marks (PA 9-2249) by Wednesday, October 16.

The more than 162 Winchester residents who are already members of the Museum have long enjoyed the membership program which includes such varied activities as previews and receptions for special exhibitions; talks by the curatorial staff; behind-the-scenes tours; and concerts and art programs for members' children.

Their membership supports an extensive education program for all communities, including Winchester, that reaches far beyond the Museum's walls to thousands of schools and club groups throughout New England. Last year the 5th, 9th, and 10th grades in Winchester sent classes to the museum for gallery tours.

Home and Garden To See European Birds and Flowers

The Winchester Home and Garden Club is pleased to announce that Mrs. Donald B. Bischoff will be the first speaker of the season.

Mrs. Bischoff was born in Holland, educated in England and on the continent and worked for the Dutch, Swedish and Indonesian governments. A world traveler, a naturalist of note, Mrs. Bischoff also possesses an amusing sense of humor.

Her talk, "Birds and Wildflowers in European Nature Reserves" will be accompanied by beautiful colored slides with many unusual close-ups taken in Holland and Spain.

The meeting will be held on Wednesday, October 16th at the Methodist Church Hall at 2 p.m. Refreshments will be served beginning at 1:30 p.m.

Not present are Fred McCormack, business gifts, and Herbert Bixler, training. The residential canvass drive begins on November 1.

United Fund's '63 Local Drive Will Begin November 1

The little-known fact that 5,792 Winchester residents used various United Fund services during 1962 was stressed today by Audley Clarke, chairman of Winchester's UF drive, in urging the town's 700 volunteers to bend every effort to reach this year's goal.

"The services to Winchester residents last year cost the fund $41,722.95 while only about $30,000, exclusive of those who gave at work, was collected," Mr. Clarke noted.

The United Fund drive, which will last through the first week in November, was officially opened last week by President Kennedy who urged all Americans to participate in showing the world that Americans are also generous to their own people in time of need.

Chairman Clarke expects to confine the residential fund drive to one week, beginning on November 1st, rather than stretch it out as has been done in past years.

"The difficulties in reaching previous Winchester goals," explained Mr. Clarke, "can be attributed to the fact that few people realize how many residents require the various United Fund services during the year."

"The figures show that rather than Winchester supporting other less-fortunate towns we need every penny, and more, right here in Winchester to help our own needy." Mr. Clarke added.

Mr. Clarke also plans to stress the pledge system of giving this year, whereby residents can pledge a certain amount to be split up during the year. It is hoped that Winchester will go over the top quickly this year by concentrating the drive in one week and requesting a pledge from residents.

Abandoned Child Is Given Over To State; Police Seek Parents

The Winchester Hospital turned its 12-day temporary charge over to the Massachusetts Department of Public Welfare's Division of Child Guardianship on Tuesday afternoon. The infant girl, nicknamed "Princess" by the Hospital's nursing staff, was abandoned on the out-patient doorstep of the Hospital shortly after 11 p.m. on Friday, October 4th.

Meanwhile, police are still searching for the parents of the abandoned child. Sgt. Andrew Crawford said the force has already tracked down five major leads and several miscellaneous but erroneous tips — all of which have been unfruitful.

Dr. Euan T. Blanch of 16 Alden Lane, who attended to the waif's medical needs, indicated to the hospital administration on Monday morning that the child was doing well and was able to be discharged. The hospital contacted the Massachusetts Division of Child Guardianship and made arrangements to have the infant picked up by the State on Tuesday afternoon.

The child, a state ward since it was abandoned, will either be placed in a state institution, or "foster home," or will be put up for adoption by an agency.

Winchester police believe that the newly born child was left off at the hospital's doorstep very shortly after it was born. It was wrapped in a 72 x 84 inch pink blanket and three towels placed in an empty cardboard carton when it was discovered by an orderly after the switchboard operator had notified the accident room that someone had called and said: "I just left a baby at the accident door."

The nurse supervisor severed the umbilical cord, and Dr. Blanch was called to examine the child. He TOTALLY DEMOLISHED ACCIDENT VEHICLE. Almost miraculously two occupants of this Buick sedan escaped serious injury when the car careened off Cambridge Street early last Saturday morning. The car hit two utility poles, snapping one into three parts, and bounced off a tree. The driver and passenger were thrown clear seconds before the roof was sheared off, and were found standing beside the wreck when police arrived at the scene.

Auto Insurance Rates Drop Locally, Owners Of 10,000 Cars To Save

Winchester automobile owners will share in the new compulsory motor vehicle insurance rate reductions announced for 1964 by C. Eugene Farnam, state insurance commissioner, on Monday. The so-called "good driver" statistically classified operators, about 85 per cent of the town's motor vehicle owners, will either see a money saving in reduced compulsory insurance charges or at least will see no increase in the present rates; while the remaining 15 per cent, mostly accident-prone "poor drivers" under the age 25 (or those supporting them), will have to pay hikes of almost 10 per cent over this year's rates because that group across the state was responsible for over 30 per cent of all accidents.

The Town Assessor's office noted that in 1962 Winchester sent bills to owners of 11,500 cars for excise taxing purposes. Since this figure includes cars traded in, town-owned vehicles which are on different insurance standards, and other factors involved, there are probably slightly over 10,000 cars owned by local residents who have to pay the compulsory Massachusetts insurance rates according to whatever schedule the state insurance commissioner establishes.

One local insurance agent explained that the rate schedules are developed from three-year statistic figures. That is, the 1964 rates were set by the average number of accidents and accident claims during the years 1960, 1961, and 1962.

The most severely charged group of drivers is the under 25 male operator. His rates next year will increase by $6.50 if he has not had driver training, by $2 if he is trained, and by $7.50 if he is married with one or more children. Conversely, the under 25 female, untrained, sees no rise in her rate, which is cheaper by $41.50, and if she has had driver training her rate has dropped into a new class which is another $4 cheaper.

Another interesting fact about Winchester auto insurance rates is that regardless of where a Winchester person's owned and locally garaged car has an accident, the statistic refers back to Winchester's record. Therefore, if an out-of-town driver has an accident in Winchester, it does not appear in this town's statistics; which means that the insurance rates for local owners of motor vehicles are a true reflection of the safety of Winchester operators.

The 1963 and proposed 1964 compulsory rate schedules for the suburban Winchester territory are as follows:

Better Child Health Notable Local Record

The average child born at the present time in Winchester is more furtunate, from the standpoint of health, than if he were born in most other parts of the United States.

He has a better chance locally, based on past records, of surviving the critical first year of life and of growing up to adulthood.

The once-feared infectious diseases, such as diphtheria, whooping cough, measles and scarlet fever, have been almost entirely eliminated in the town.

Today, as a result, only one out of 25 new-born babies fails to survive the hazardous early years and to reach maturity.

The question of child health and infant mortality has been brought to the fore by the recent death of the Kennedy baby and by the birth of the Fischer quintuplets.

Latest figures on the subject, covering all parts of the country, have just been issued by the National Office of Vital Statistics.

Among children born to Winchester parents, they show, there are fewer losses in the first year of life than is the case in many localities.

Locally, there were 13.4 such deaths per 1,000 live births in 1960, compared with an infant mortality rate of 26.0 per 1,000 in the rest of the United States. The rate was 21.6 in the State of Massachusetts. their Christmas wherever it may

Largely because of the progress that has been made by medical science in the last few decades in the field of child health, the average span of life has been increased noticeably.

The latest findings are that the average boy in the United States, once he has reached the age of one, has a further life expectancy of 67.6 years. The average girl at age one may look forward to an additional 73.8 years.

Although progress continues to be made in almost every phase of child health, the gains are coming at a slower pace than formerly. There have been no dramatic breakthroughs lately.

The report shows that the current infant mortality rate in Winchester is slightly lower than it was in 1948, when it amounted to 13.7 deaths per 1,000 births.

Failure to receive adequate prenatal care is cited by the Children's Bureau as the most frequent reason for the high rates found in some areas.

Two Escape Death As Car Hits Tree, Poles, Overturns

Two young Boston men escaped almost certain death last Saturday morning on Cambridge Street when the vehicle they were travelling in careened off the road and struck a utility pole, continued on and bounced off a large tree, and skidded to a stop against another utility pole.

The operator of the demolished 1958 Buick sedan, Robert L. Cadman, 26, of 63 Templeton Street, Boston, and his passenger, Walter E. Grignon, 21, of 65 Maverick Street, Boston, received only minor facial cuts from the accident according to police. Both were taken to the Winchester Hospital in the ambulance by Patrolman Douglas Martell, treated and released.

According to police, the car was travelling south on Route 3 and had just passed the Church Street intersection at about 1:45 a.m. when the accident occurred.

Both men were thrown clear of the out-of-control car when it struck the telephone pole in front of 109 Cambridge Street, snapping the utility pole in three sections. The car then continued on, tearing up a long plot of grass between the street and sidewalk, hit a tree on the left side of the sidewalk and bounced off it, completely overturned onto its roof and skidded on to come to a collision stop against an Edison light pole.

Patrolmen William T. Haggerty and Thomas C. Parsons arrived at the scene of the accident in Patrol Car 51. Officer Haggerty said that the two men were standing dazed beside the wreck of their car. He said the car's roof was completely sheared off, and the right rear wheel housing was wrapped around the Edison pole.

New Auxiliary Fire Station Open House

Winchester townspeople will have a first hand opportunity to inspect their new Auxiliary Fire Department Headquarters at an open house this Saturday, October 19th, at the newly renovated Water Department Pumping Station at 14 Reservoir Street. Doors will be open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., with an official "ribbon cutting" ceremony at 2:30 in the afternoon.

In addition to the members of the Auxiliary Fire Department, which is a Civil Defense Agency, the opening ceremonies will be attended by representatives of the Board of Selectmen, Finance Committee, Civil Defense Unit, Water Department, Regular Fire Department, Highway Department, the Rotary Club, Town Meeting Members, and a number of individual benefactors who contributed toward the establishment of the new quarters, including W. B. Stockwood, Ernest Luongo, Ed Govostes, and Robert Raymond.

Guests will see the physical results of a cooperative effort in the new extension to the pump house, new overhead doors, wiring system, heating unit, two-way radio system, fire alarm equipment, new interior and exterior paint, plumbing and drainage systems, and firefighting equipment, including Engine No. 6 built personally by members of the Auxiliary. Of additional interest to Winchester's fire "buffs" will be a 1918 Maxim fire engine which will be on display through the courtesy of Bob Raymond.

The 1963 Town Meeting approved the Auxiliary's using the old pumping house as a headquarters for their voluntary firefighting activities, and authorized the building of a six-foot frontage addition so the fire engine could fit inside, and to make other renovations: $4500 was appropriated.

Miss Mericantante Crowned the New "Miss Winchester"

The Sons of Italy Hall at 117 Swanton Street was filled with a tense and excited crowd of about 250 persons last Saturday night when Robert Maietta, chairman of the annual Columbus Day beauty pageant, announced at the banquet that the new Miss Winchester for 1963-64 was lovely Diane Mericantante, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John J. Mericantante of 26 Lockeland Road.

The happy, black-haired, five-foot three-inch winner of the beauty contest that had lasted most of the day, received her crown, cape and trophy from last year's Miss Winchester, Joanne Addario. The new Miss Winchester, all smiles, also received a bouquet of a dozen roses.

Miss Winchester's court, Linda Gagliormella of 8 Cleveland Road, first runner-up, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Gagliormella, and Linda Cantella of 18 Taft Drive, second runner-up, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Cantella, received loving cup trophies and bouquets of a dozen carnations.

Town's Home Rule Committee Named; Organizes Plans

Rep. Harrison Chadwick recently announced the appointments of Jason W. Dade of 33 Sargent Road, Mrs. Eber T. Le Gates of 106 Church Street, and Ralph H. Bonnell of 81 Arlington Street to serve on the newly-organized Advisory Committee on Home Rule.

The advisory committee held an organizational and planning meeting Monday night, October 7th, at the Water and Sewer Board office in the Town Hall. Mr. Dade is the chairman, and Mrs. LeGates is the secretary for the group.

The Advisory Committee on Home Rule for Winchester was created at the April 4th session of the 1963 Town Meeting under Article 48, which was unanimously accepted by the representative members. The special advisory committee was established for the purpose of examining all state-local relations, including any legislation which might be passed that would affect Winchester in any way, and to report on those relations and events to the Board of Selectmen.

October 13-19, National Newspaper Week: The Free Press Helps Keep America Free

Historians may claim that the development of a nation can be outlined by tracing back through its history of wars; but a much more accurate description of a nation's development can be discovered by following the history of its press—which mirrors the nature, character, and culture of its society.

The course of this nation's historical development is one which may be described from its beginnings to the present, and hopefully to the end, as one of a people's continual pursuit of freedom. And, keeping pace with the American pioneerings in freedom, sometimes leading and sometimes following, the press of this country has written down for historical record the accounting of the American success.

The list of American pursuits of freedom is an impressive host of achievements: seeking religious freedom and founding the New World, where freedom of worship is a basic right; seeking self-governing freedom and revolting against Old World tyranny, resulting in the development of this great democratic Republic; seeking human emancipation and through a rending Civil War achieving a free and open society; seeking foreign recognition of domestic sovereign rights and achieving it on the high seas and in this hemisphere; seeking women's rights as a freedom, and allowing that; seeking to aid others in their fight for freedom, and dropping isolationism to do just that in World Wars I, II, and even now. In every instance, among many more such examples, the press followed events as they happened, and helped to influence opinion and action through the powerful instrument at its disposal: the value readers place in the printed pages of "their" newspapers.

The first American newspaper was published here in Massachusetts on September 25, 1690. It was issued in Boston, and was entitled "Publick Occurrences Both Forreign and Domestick." Interestingly, four days after its publication, "without the least . . . countenance of authority," and noted their "high resentment and disallowance of said pamphlet, and order that the same be suppressed and called in; strictly forbidding any person or persons for the future to set forth any thing in print without license first obtained."

It was 14 years later before the first continuously published newspaper appeared in the American Colonies. Significantly, it too was issued in Boston on April 24, 1704, and was entitled the "Boston News-Letter." Thereupon many newspapers of sorts began publishing in the Colonies.

But the most significant and dramatic of all events connected with early American journalism was John Peter Zenger's challenge to authority and his triumphant vindication. Indirectly, it helped to shape the course of American history in any way that the press has done subsequently, because it was as a result of this trial that the United States came to have its famous "freedom of the press."

Briefly, Zenger attacked corruption in New York with satire in his "Journal," and didn't hesitate to include the Governor, members of the court, and others. He was charged with seditious libel and thrown in jail. One of the most famous lawyers in the colonies Andrew Hamilton, went to New York to defend the printer. Hamilton, fighting against a judge who had already determined Zenger's guilt, achieved one of the most significant victories in the long struggle for the freedom of the press when the jury accepted his plea: "(Considering the nature of power), let us at least do our duty, and like wise men use our utmost care to support liberty, the only bulwark against lawless power . . . the liberty both of exposing and opposing arbitrary power by speaking and writing Truth." An account of the Zenger trial quoted one man as saying if the principle stated by Hamilton "is not law, it is better than law, it ought to be law, and will always be law wherever justice prevails."

The American press has developed to the efficient news gathering and disseminating media it is today as a result of this establishing of the basic freedom of the press. Today, American newspapers are unexcelled in fulfilling their functions as a news media, and they canvass the world, the nation, the individual states and the towns and cities with an unparalleled thoroughness and competence. In many countries, if the newspapers are not the direct instruments of the government, such as in the Soviet Union, then they are either censored or manipulated by the government, as in France. Indeed, the United States is one of a very few countries where newspapers are entirely a private enterprise for the public good.

NATIONAL NEWSPAPER WEEK LIBRARY EXHIBIT. On display at the Winchester Public Library this week are two showcases exhibiting many of the finest foreign and domestic daily newspapers, and a third case showing a number of local news stories, features, editorials, and columns that have appeared recently in this community's prize-winning Winchester Star weekly newspaper. Library officials say the display has attracted many interested viewers.

Benjamin Franklin, Thomas Paine and Alexander Hamilton were just a few of the early American journalists who forwarded American freedoms. And American history is replete with the names of many journalistic figures who have influenced the development of this society: Joseph Pulitzer, William Cullen Bryant, Herbert Bayard Swope, James Gordon Bennett, Charles Dana, Horace Greeley, William Randolph Hearst, Samuel L. Clemens and Ernest Hemingway, Walter Lippmann and Joseph Alsop, and many, many others.

With the announcement Tuesday of the sale of the New York Mirror to its competitor, the New York News, following in less than a year the demise of two major California metropolitan dailies, many persons again raised the question: are the newspapers in decline? More than 60 million copies of 1800 daily newspapers are circulated every day. With a little over 46 million households in the United States, that's substantially more copies bought than the number of families in the nation. It is the highest circulation figure in history, unmatched by any other country, because Americans are the biggest consumers of news print in the world, and represents more than a million copies over what had been circulated the year before. The total newspaper circulation far surpasses the number of loaves of bread, bottles of milk, or packs of cigarettes sold daily in the United States. If demand for the product means anything, newpapers are definitely not in decline, but are actually increasing production to meet new demands.

The fullest, most dramatic, the most conclusive evidence that newspapers are really crucial to the lives of most Americans—and, indeed, to their very way of life — is what happened in New York, Minneapolis and Cleveland when the newspaper strikes of last winter left those cities newspaper-less for months. Something very meaningful, something taken for granted when it was present but greatly prized when, abruptly, it was absent, went out of the lives of millions of people in those communities when there were no newspapers.

Newspapers today are trying to cut through 20th Century complexities to orient the reader to his world, and help him understand the bewildering array of events that pour in upon him as a result of the "information explosion." In cities and towns across the country, newspapers are also rendering a variety of public services to make their communities better, safer, healthier places to live, as well as to keep citizens informed.

Besides the news coverage and special services newspapers provide for their readers, they also represent Mr. Citizen Reader in probing for political graft, exposing chicanery, explaining legislation, preventing injustice, and, generally, performing the duties of a good citizen who has power and a sense of responsibility.

Faced with the dynamic world in which we live, the concept of the newspaper and its role in our free society cannot remain static. Used irresponsibly or unjustly, the power of the press can be a torch to raze our democratic structure and reduce to ashes our confidence in the ability of man to determine his destiny; used with responsibility and intelligence, the power of the press can remain the cornerstone of our monument to democracy.

Newspapers make a big difference in people's lives!

Although history often paints a glowing picture of Egypt's contribution to the early days of medicine, the simple truth is that the Egyptians booted a great opportunity to speed up the painfully slow process of ancient medicine.

There is no denying that the Egyptians brought embalming and mummification to a high degree of perfection. However, ceturies of mummification which saw their art practiced on untold millions of their people, gave no impetus to pathology, for the Egyptians neither observed nor dissected. Hence, an Egypt on the threshold of great medical advance stopped just short of further knowledge which would have been a notable legacy to posterity.

Roy Hilton

Roy Hilton of Pittsburgh, a former resident of Winchester, died suddenly Thursday afternoon, October 10, at a Pittsburgh hospital, following a heart attack, with which he was stricken while teaching an art class at the museum school at the University of Pittsburgh. He was rushed to the hospital where he died during the afternoon. He had been troubled with a heart ailment for some time.

Mr. Hilton was the son of Irvin, and Susie H. (Snow) Hilton. He was born February 24, 1891, in East Boston, but came to Winchester as a boy of 4 years, living first on Lagrange Street, and then in the house built by his father on Stratford Road.

Mr. Hilton attended the Winchester schools and went for two years to Winchester High School. He then entered Phillips Andover Academy, from which he was graduated in 1909.

He studied art with Woodbury in Boston and at the Eric Pape School, and for many years maintained a studio on Boylston Street, with a summer studio in Ogunquit, Maine.

For twenty years Mr. Hilton taught art at Carnegie Institute in Pittsburgh, and following his retirement from this post taught art classes at the Museum School of the University of Pittsburgh.

Mr. Hilton did murals for the post office at Westfield, N. J., and for the post office at Rocky Mount, Virginia. He was invited to show his paintings in the show at the Denver Museum and at the University of Illinois. Many times he had pictures in the International Exhibition and in the show of the Associated Artists. He was awarded the Carnegie Institute prize for the best group of oil paintings submitted in a show. He was a member of the faculty of Fine Arts at Carnegie Institute when these were shown.

His work has been shown at the Whitney Museum, the Museum of Modern Art in New York, Pennsylvania Academy, the Corcoran Museum in Washington, D.C., and the Toledo Museum.

He leaves his wife, the former Helen Dieter of Winchester; a stepson, Peter Smith; a sister, Mrs. Bernice A. Danforth of Winchester; and a brother, Kenneth Hilton of Andover.

Cremation took place in Pittsburgh, and committal services will be held Friday morning, October 18, at 11 o'clock in Wildwood Cemetery. The Rev. H. Newton Clay, pastor of the Crawford Memorial Methodist Church, will officiate.

"Romance of A Sailing Ship" Here on Oct. 25

Tom Keith, who sailed aboard the famed "Yankee" for eighteen months and 48,000 miles, will give his illustrated lecture on Friday, October 25, at 8:30 p.m. at the Mystic School auditorium to benefit the Children's Own School, at 86 Main Street.

Mr. Keith's exceptional color movies will take his audience to the Galapagos Islands, Pitcairn Island, Tahiti, New Guinea, Siam, Hong Kong, Bali, Africa and the West Indies. The carefully edited film, entitled, "Romance of a Sailing Ship" represents the most interesting and exciting excerpts from more than a mile and a half of footage.

Sailing with Captain Irving M. Johnson aboard the Brigantine "Yankee" on its seventh and final world voyage with twenty-four young men and women aboard, Tom Keith was one of those who witnessed a mass cremation in Bali Indonesia, found "H.M.S. Bounty's" anchor in the waters off Pitcairn Island, climbed Mount Kilimanjaro in Tanganyika, Africa, to its 19,000-foot peak, and rode out an 85-mile-an-hour cyclone in the Mozambique Channel between Madagascar and the East Coast of Africa.

He is a native of Brockton, attended Tabor Academy and graduated from Nichols Junior College before embarking on his round-the-world cruise.

G. Raymond Bancroft

G. Raymond Bancroft of 204 Highland Avenue, former widely known dry goods dealer in Winchester for many years, died suddenly Thursday afternoon, October 10, at the Winchester Hospital. He became critically ill during the morning and was removed to the hospital, but he had been in failing health for some time.

Mr. Bancroft was the son of Walter C., and Isola (McIntire) Bancroft. He was born October 7, 1883, in Danversport, but lived as a boy and young man in Stoneham, graduating from Stoneham High School.

While in Stoneham he became acquainted with Miss F. J. Bowser, and her brother, Richard, who operated dry goods stores in Stoneham and Winchester. Shortly after his marriage in 1911 Mr. Bancroft came to Winchester and joined Miss Bowser in a partnership, which continued until he acquired the business. He operated the business under his own name at 7 Mt. Vernon Street, and later at 15 Mt. Vernon Street. He last maintained the business on Park Street, retiring from that location.

Mr. Bancroft was very active in the Crawford Memorial Methodist Church. He served for many years as financial secretary and as head usher. Then he was elected to the Board of Trustees of the church, and at the time of his death he was trustee emeritus.

When he and Mrs. Bancroft came to Winchester in 1911 after their marriage they lived on Myrtle Terrace before their house on Highland Avenue was built for them. Mrs. Bancroft, the former Grace M. Stratton, died August 25, 1961, shortly after she and her husband observed their 50th wedding anniversary.

He is survived by a daughter, Miss Marion Bancroft of Winchester. The death of his son, Dr. G. Raymond Bancroft, Jr., in Kennebunk Port in 1953, was a blow from which Mr. Bancroft never fully recovered.

Funeral services were held Monday forenoon at 11 o'clock at the Church. The pastor, Rev. H. Newton Clay, officiated. Burial was in Lakeside Cemetery, Wakefield.

High School To Open To Parents On October 24th

Parents of 1101 high school students will fill classrooms and corridors at the high school next Thursday evening, October 24, at the annual Open House.

Parents are asked to go to their student's homeroom promptly at 7:30 p.m. instead of to the assembly hall as they have done in the past two years. Each parent will then follow the class periods of a typical Tuesday schedule using as a guide the program of his son or daughter, to be provided in the home room. Parents are requested to arrive prepared with the number and location of this room.

Members of the high school Student Council will be posted in the corridors to help bewildered parents find their way about the school.

Classes will be ten minutes in length, in which time parents will have the opportunity to associate teachers' names and faces and to learn briefly what each course is about. During study periods the cafeteria will be open and Mrs. Joseph Castignetti, social chairman of the Parent Faculty Association, and her committee will be serving refreshments throughout the evening.

Over the PA system, parents will be greeted in the home room period by Mr. Robert Williams, president of the Parent Faculty Association; Mr. Miles Weaver, chairman of the PFA Advisory Council, and Mr. Howard Niblock, principal of the high school.

Envelopes for the nominal voluntary dues for membership in the Parent Faculty Association have been mailed to all parents, and may be returned to the school by students or paid at the home rooms on the night of Open House if the family wishes to join.

ACROSS THE COUNTER

A powerful thought tickled my brain as I sat at my desk the other day. Gus Maloney had just left after buying insurance on a new truck he used in his business. The tractor unit cost $19,800, and the trailer a shade over $10,200. Gus asked for $15,000 coverage on the cargo. This made a total of $40,000 coverage for just one modern highway vehicle, fully loaded. Then a question formed in my mind: "How would you like to buy that outfit if you put it off the road in an auto accident?"

I quickly checked the property damage limits of my own auto policy, for this is not a hypothetical question, but rather a real danger we all face. We all meet many high-valued vehicles every day that we drive the highways.

Many people have seen the need for higher liability limits for bodily injury to persons. But what about the property damage portion of your policy? Chances are good it's still low. Yet some "objects" are becoming as highly valued as "persons" in auto accident settlements. The value of these objects is much easier to establish; if you cause one to crack up, the value can be quickly proved.

Watch the newspapers. You'll read before long where some giant motor vehicle crashed, and where the loss is estimated at $30,000, 40,000, even $50,000!

Then ask yourself: "How would you like to buy that truck and cargo if you put it off the road?"

If you wouldn't like it, see us. We'll supply the details on adequate property damage coverage, available with our auto insurance.

Alice A. Fitzgerald, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas H. Fitzgerald, of 250 Washington Street, will have a part in the story titled, "Cardinal Cushing's Lonely War in Peru", scheduled to begin in the Sunday Advertiser-Record American on October 20.

The story concerns the missionary work of St. James the Apostle in Peru, where Miss Fitzgerald is now assigned.

John Murphy of the Record American-Sunday Advertiser staff flew 8000 miles to get the eyewitness report from Land of the Incas where New England Pioneers are helping in the war against hunger, disease and ignorance among an almost forgotten people on the windswept, lonely, high Andes Mountains.

The Winchester Star
Established 1880 by Theodore P. Wilson, Sr.

Editorials:

National Newspaper Week: The Hometown Press

Newspapers have long been recognized as sovereign influences in their communities, even to the extent that a town without a newspaper withers on the vine.

More than 9000 weekly (and small daily) newspapers like the Winchester Star throughout the nation cater to their "Hometown America," comprising some 99 million citizens, over half the country's population. These readers of community newspapers in towns or small cities of less than 25,000 population have an annual income of well over $157 billion, or 47 per cent of the total national income, and account for more than 40 per cent of the country's total retail sales.

Hometown newspapers are staunch protectors of community rights and aggressive sponsors of civic progress. They reflect the public opinion, and expose the "other side" of important issues—providing facts, analyses, opinions and ideas for its readers to study and evaluate for making their own judgments. They also recognize the need for telling the less than earth-shaking events and place them effectively before the public eye—which is important to residents of small communities who thrive on news of a "little" club meeting, a church wedding, the activities of town merchants, and the goings-on in the local government and its departments.

So vital to everyday living are community newspapers that they have become a "part of the family." Virtually every household in America subscribes to and thoroughly digests their contents. In the past eight years alone, total circulation for hometown newspapers has increased 40.5 per cent! Here in Winchester, the Star goes to almost every house in town with its 5500 circulation.

All the phenomenal growth of hometown newspapers during the past decade is evidence of the vitality of today's community press and its universal acceptance. Because of their dedication, they earn a respected influence in grass-roots government and leadership in community affairs. They are often responsible for legislation at local, state and national levels.

People in Smalltown, U.S.A., often refer to the community newspaper as "my" newspaper. There seems to be a special affinity between newspapers — between the printed word — and people. Often, someone will hear another person say: "I read in my paper . . . ," or "My paper said . . . " This loyalty to a newspaper didn't just happen. It came about because the newspaper is localized to meet a particular want and fill a definite need.

And, because the newspaper is viewed as a necessary companion and source of information, it makes a big difference in the lives of people of all ages, of all faiths and political preferences, of all levels of income and education.

What is a newspaper? A newspaper is lumber made malleable. It is ink made into words, and pictures. It is conceived, born, grows up and dies in a short period of time. But, most of all, a newspaper is current information. It is the bridge between a home and the rest of a man's community: his town, his state and country, and the world.

No other nation in the world enjoys a press as responsive to the needs of its society as do the newspapers of our country. Newspapers, big and small, make a big difference in people's lives, and have throughout our history.

Realize the "miracle at your doorstep" when you pick up the product of a free press!

Local League Of Women Voters Ask Finance Support

Editor of the Star:

Does it matter to Winchester that there is a League of Women Voters? This the members ask themselves as they prepare to request financial support from those townspeople who have shown an interest in governmental affairs.

Many are aware of the service the league provides the voter at election time, the candidates' meeting, the questionnaires—non-partisan, factual information. The league never supports or opposes a candidate or party and tries to be scrupulously fair in presenting information pertinent to the election. This matters to the voter.

It matters that there is a league to the members who discuss and study selected local, state and national issues, and it matters to those who use the results of such study (for example, Inside Winchester, our booklet on town government) to understand these subjects.

There is also another important phase of league activity, the action which arises naturally from the study of an issue. When league members have considered a subject thoroughly and when a substantial majority agree on a stand to be taken, the league acts in Winchester, at the State House and in Washington to promote that stand.

For example, we are, at present, circulating petitions to remove the statuatory powers of the Governor's Council after two and one-half years of study of the structure of state government by leagues all over Massachusetts. Thus we not only study and learn, but we act and urge our members to act. We also urge them as individuals to choose their party and to be active in it and for it, and also to choose and support their candidates. This they do outside the league; the organization supports no party or candidate.

We welcome all women citizens of voting age to join us and are grateful to all of those who support this program to promote citizen participation in government.

Sincerely,
Harriet H. Dieterich

Press Is Saluted On October 13-19; Newspaper Week

Editor of the Star:

On the occasion of National Newspaper Week, October 13-19, I would like to make special recognition of our daily and weekly newspapers and the extremely valuable service they render in the world today.

We recognize newspaper people have a bigger job than merely reporting the news. Newspaper people hold up a mirror to their community that the community may more clearly see and understand itself. Through their service untold wrongs have been revealed and righted; unmet needs reported and resolved; unknown human suffering, aired and alleviated.

So it is that we of The Salvation Army salute you at this time.

God Bless you.

Sincerely yours,
Lt. Col. Horace E. Weatherly
Division Commander
Salvation Army

THE DAY HUEY WAS SHOT

by David Zinman

THE LONG MURDER CASE

by Hermann B. Deutsch

A young person at the library, seeing these books, asked, "Who was Huey Long, anyway?" A generation ago this question would never have come up. Huey Long was one of the best known, most colorful, most controversial figures in the political world. Known as "The Kingfish," he was virtually dictator of the State of Louisiana.

The methods this flamboyant politician used to accomplish his goals were frankly crooked. The Kingfish boasted that he bought legislators "like a sack of potatoes." He admitted that there might be smarter men than himself, "but they ain't in Loozyana." During a legislative meeting a lawmaker, fed up with Long's high-handed interference, threw a copy of the Constitution at his head, roaring, "Maybe you've heard of this before." Huey's unabashed reply was, "I am the Constitution now."

In spite of this the Kingfish had thousands of fanatically devoted followers. His career, rising meteorically to the Governor of the State, then to Senator from Louisiana, was aimed at the Presidency in 1936. In fact, so confident was he that at the time of his death his book, My First Days in the White House, was already in process.

The career of this politician was brought to a violent end on September 8th, 1935, by an assassin's bullet.

Two books have come out recently on the subject of Huey Long, The Day Huey Long Was Shot by David Zinman, and The Huey Long Murder Case by Hermann B. Deutsch. Inevitably they duplicate each other in many respects, but the conclusions drawn are not the same, and both are worth reading.

The alleged assassin was a young doctor, Carl Austin Weiss, who was gunned down immediately by Long's bodyguards. Zinman, author of the first book, after carefully going through records, checking old rumors, and interviewing the Weiss family, comes up with the startling conclusion that he was not guilty.

Weiss was young, successful, happily married. He had spent the day with his family in a perfectly normal fashion and had made plans with a colleague for an operation the next morning. True, he was anti-Long but not rabidly so. Three reasons were advanced for his action, and Zinman refutes each.

1. He wished to avenge a remark once reportedly made by Long that Weiss' father-in-law, Judge Benjamin Pavy, and hence his own wife and son, had Negro blood. An alleged remark, not even substantiated, would not cause a level-headed man to risk certain suicide by firing at Long, who was always surrounded by his own bodyguard.

2. Weiss was distressed because Long, by a gerrymandering bill, intended to deprive Pavy of his long-held judgeship. Again not a sufficient reason, especially since the maneuver did not especially trouble Pavy.

3. Weiss was chosen by lot in a secret plot to rid Louisiana of its dictator. There is not a shred of evidence to substantiate this.

Zinman concludes that the Kingfish was shot, accidentally or in cold blood, by a member of his own bodyguard who then closed ranks and put the blame on Weiss, going so far as to rifle Weiss' car and remove his small calibre revolver, placing it beside his body with one shot fired.

Deutsch, on the other hand, claims that Huey Long must have been murdered by Weiss, that every item of credible evidence—surgical,circumstantial, and the testimony of eyewitnesses - supports this. He goes through the same reasons advanced by Zinman and settles on the racial slur as the only one strong enough to incite a man of Weiss' known character to sacrifice his own life in order to take the life of another.

Both these books are the result of painstaking research. Both are documented by previously unpublished documents and undisclosed eyewitness statements. The reader is invited to take his choice. Was Huey Long assassinated by Weiss or is his murderer still at large?

Accident

Police said the car was a total wreck, and it was "miraculous how the occupants got out alive." According to police, the driver claimed the power steering failed, causing the vehicle to turn toward the left side of the street and strike the first utility pole.

The Fire Department responded to a police call and sent an engine and crew to water down the street where gasoline had leaked out of the demolished automobile. Haggerty's Garage towed the car away. And on Monday utility company crews were out repairing the damage to the light and telephone poles.

Democrats Plan Local Drive For Registration

The local Democratic Committee is about to have, for the first time in its memory, direction and programming from the State Committee in its effort to place on the Winchester voting lists the names of every potential Democratic voter.

The Town Committee will abey its having of speakers at meetings due to the urging of the State Committee because of the state-wide drive.

While the big drive on this objective will be carried on in the cities, attention will also be paid to the towns.

James MacGregor Burns, professor at Amherst College, is the chairman of the Democratic state-wide committee on registration, and he hopes to add 50,000 new Democratic voters to the present totals.

Beginning the week of October 21, Susan Winn, chairman of Democratic registration for Winchester, will announce her vice-chairmen, one from each precinct. Shortly after their appointments, these chairmen will select their workers and lay out plans with the help of the State Committee.

A second objective of the Town Committee is the completion of the work on the afghan chance books. Mrs. Bee Wilson, social chairman, is in charge of this venture.

Some money from this drive was turned into the treasury at the last meeting.

The closing date for returning the chance books is November 30. Any member who has not received a book may call Mrs. Wilson, or her assistant, Mrs. Helen Nadeau (PA 9-1893).

ordered it placed in the incubator because its temperature had dropped to 95 degrees after being out in the cold. Princess weighed about six pounds when it was delivered to the hospital. She was removed from the incubator on Tuesday, October 8, and put in the nursery.

Sgt. Crawford said that as far as the police are concerned, the case is still in the misdemeanor stage. That is, the parents would not be prosecuted for child abandonment if they claimed it right away. If the parents do not claim the baby within four weeks of the date of abandonment, then it becomes a violation of the General Laws, and is punishable by a sentence of up to two years in jail or house of correction. If the baby should die for any reason, the parents would be liable for a charge of murder, and might receive from two to five years in jail.

Miss Winchester

The ten final contestants were judged in four categories in two competitions; swim suits and dressy dresses. The five judges were: Selectman Henry Van Dyke, Norman Benrimo, Miss Serina of Woburn, Frank Provinzano, and Tom Russell of WEEI.

Mr. Maietta said the entire Columbus Day celebration was very successful, and the beauty contest judging was attended by over 300 enthusiastic members and guests. He also said he anticipates that the new Miss Winchester will be called upon from time to time during the next year to make personal appearances, and her winning of this title may even make her eligible for other beauty titles around the Commonwealth.

Home Rule

For several years local residents have voiced the need for such an advisory committee to keep the town fathers posted on any changes in the state-local relationships and on pending issues which would affect Winchester.

Early in January the Winchester Star shouldered the expense of hiring the private services of a State House news bureau to cover and report on issues and matters which would affect the community. The Star believed that the entire town should be made aware of all state-local relationships, especially on new legislation which would directly affect the town, and carried state-local stories under the column "Boston Briefs From Beacon Hill; State News Affecting Winchester." However, shortly after the Town Meeting established the Advisory Committee on Home Rule—which in many cases would investigate and report to the Town on matters similar to those which were being carried under the Boston Briefs—the Star dropped the column and "anticipated the beginning of an active and masterful advisory committee which would provide a great service not only to the town fathers, but also to the townspeople when it releases its information and opinions to the Star for dissemination to the community," said David C. McLean, editor of the Star.

Rep. Chadwick, who appointed the members to the committee, told the group at its first meeting that the research and advisory work of their committee is "of great importance to the town."

Sons Of Italy Make Huge Success Of Columbus Day

The annual Columbus Day celebration sponsored by the Ladies' and Men's Lodges of the Winchester Sons of Italy went into the record Saturday as a huge success.

At 8:00 a.m. on the beautiful morning members and non-members assembled in front of the S.O. I. Hall for the flag raising ceremony which was followed by a procession led by the smart color guard of the Immaculate Conception Church for a 9:00 o'clock Mass at St. Mary's Church in remembrance of the deceased members of the lodges.

The congregation then returned to the S.O.I. Hall for a light breakfast and social hour until the alarm sounded for the beauty contestants in convertibles to lead a motorcade through town. Tops of the convertibles remained up due to the very strong wind.

There was then a brief recess until 1:30 when a capacity enthusiastic audience seated themselves for the feature event of the afternoon, the "Miss Winchester" beauty contest.

Chairman Bob Maietta welcomed those in attendance and introduced the judges along with Mrs. Geri Maggio, past venerable of the Winchester Lodge as contest commentator.

Geri had all ten contestants make a brief simultaneous preview appearance which brought audible approbation from the audience.

The contestants then appeared just in dress attire and then swim suits after which the five judges began the extremely difficult task of elimination. It was finally announced by chairman Bob that the three finalists to appear at the banquet the same evening would be Linda Cantella, Linda Gagliornella, and Diane Mericantante.

As 6:30 approached that evening it was a most pleasing sight to see that every seat at every table was occupied for the Columbus Day banquet.

Chairman Bob Maietta opened by presenting Rev. Fr. Francis X. Turke of St. Mary's Church to give the invocation. All then sat for a fine dinner catered by Polcari's of Boston. Following the dinner co-toastmaster Frank Provinzano welcomed all three for partaking in the celebration of the discovery of this wonderful land of ours by Christopher Columbus and then introduced the head table.

M.C. Provinzano then turned the "mike" over to M.C. Maietta who thanked his committee and all connected with the planning of this memorable day.

M.C. Provinzano then took a minute to recognize the Italian Culture Committee which is newly established by the Grand Lodge. Bob Maietta has been selected a member of the committee, the prime purpose of which will be to spread, exemplify and expose to the people the culture, traditions and history of the land of all S.O.I.

He also mentioned the success of the local lodge's degree team which recently installed the supreme officers and the Grand Lodge of Ohio in Cleveland last month.

Grand Orator Joseph Furmari was then introduced to the audience and congratulated Winchester's Lodges for the fine work and charities undertaken and wished them continued success.

"Miss Winchester" of 1962, Joanne Addario next walked the aisle as the reigning queen to a standing ovation and chairman Maietta announced that the moment of suspense was closing in.

To start the nerve-wrangling phase of the final selections Mr. Maietta announced the second runner-up Miss Linda Cantella. M.C. Provinzano thein had the chore of naming the first runner-up, Miss Linda Gagliormella, and with but one finalist remaining, the entire gathering went into pandemonium when the new "Miss Winchester" of 1963 was announced as Miss Diane Mericantante.

After picture-taking and congratulatory remarks made to the three finalists, co-toastmaster Frank Provinzano and Bob Maietta invited all to remain for an evening of dancing.

Petition Campaign Still Gains Support

Each of the more than 15,000 petitions calling for a drastic cutback of Executive Council powers which is now being circulated statewide has room for 60 names; and a spot check made by the Massachusetts Jaycees, the Massachusetts League of Women Voters and the Massachusetts Federation of Taxpayers Associations showed names of 7,000 registered voters have been secured in the opening days of the drive.

Besides those three organizations, the drive is being backed by the Congregational Conference Social Action Committee; the Massachusetts Citizens Committee; COD, the Democratic reform organization; Council of Young Republicans; Massachusetts Chapter, Americans for Democratic Action; American Veterans Committee of Massachusetts; and many local Democratic and Republican groups.

Forty legislators have agreed to make speeches in favor of the initiative petition, which would largely eliminate the Executive Council's present power to throw roadblocks in the way of efficient Executive Branch operation by a governor.

Dean Erwin Griswold of Harvard Law School and Dean Robert F. Drinan, S.J., dean of Boston College Law School, have endorsed the drive. Governor Peabody has announced his support.

All sections of the State are being covered in the drive for 64,000 valid signatures to put the matter before the 1964 Legislature. If the Legislature does not approve the petition, the sponsors will seek 11,000 more signatures to put the proposal on the 1964 ballot.

The law would repeal most of the powers given to the Executive Council by the Legislature, including power over state contracts, most appointments, removals and salaries within the Executive Branch, and within county government.

Drive highlights: Petition circulators in Wellesley and other communities found the town dump a rewarding place to collect signatures on Saturdays, as residents made their weekly trip to the trash disposal areas. Boston sponsors set up tables outside polling places at a legal distance. Westfield voters signed up in a special trailer set up downtown. North Reading voters signed on their way into town meeting hall. A Cape group invited their legislators to tea and secured their endorsement. Marblehead circulators visited stores, banks and homes door-to-door—and staged a kickoff public rally. The Concord sponsors held a bi-partisan open meeting, with legislators as speakers. And Foxboro circulators plan to canvass every registered voter in town to secure 1,000 signatures. Wakefield, Stoneham and Melrose circulators are riding the commuter trains to get names.

Retiring Town Employee Is 12 Generation Descendant Of Mayflower Pilgrims

by Mrs. Lewis S. Morgan

Any New Englander would be extremely proud of having a Mayflower grandfather. Imagine having three! Such distinction falls to the lot of Mr. Frederick A. Ewell who lives at 18 Grayson Road in Winchester. He is descended from Elder William Brewster, from Stephen Hopkins, and from John Howland.

Mr. Ewell warns that the passengers on the Mayflower were humble folk who had no social standing in England. We shall see how humble they were.

WILLIAM BREWSTER

William Brewster was born in 1566 in the tiny village of Scrooby in Nottinghamshire. Through this hamlet ran the Great North Road from London to Edinburgh. On its outskirts lay Scrooby Manor which, even before the arrival of William the Conqueror, had belonged to the Archbishopric of York. In fact, the Archbishop of York was the landlord for the peasants who lived in the village of Scrooby, and tilled the small farms which surrounded it in this isolated agricultural region.

In 1576 Archbishop Sandys employed William Brewster, Senior, as the bailiff for his rental properties, and the steward of Scrooby Manor. The Brewster family moved into the Manor and became in effect country gentry. Four years later, young William departed from Scrooby to matriculate at Cambridge University. There he soon gained the reputation of being a gifted linguist, and in some way this talent of his was called to the attention of Sir William Davison, one of Queen Elizabeth's most valued diplomats. Sir William employed William Brewster as his secretary and took him to Holland for two years.

William seemed well on his way to becoming a diplomat himself when Sir William lost Queen Elizabeth's favor and retired from public life. Brewster now returned to Scrooby and two years later, upon the death of his father, succeeded him as bailiff for Scrooby and steward of the Manor.

PURITANS AND SEPARATISTS

At this period, England was in a great state of religious ferment and of rebellion against the Church of England. Two groups of Dissenters had arisen: the Puritans who wanted to reform the church from within, and the Separatists who felt that it was beyond redemption and desired to leave it entirely. Elizabeth I and James I mercilessly persecuted both groups.

William Brewster soon made friends with the only other educated men in the Scrooby area. They were Richard Clyfton and John Robinson, both Cambridge educated, both clergymen who had lost their parishes because of unorthodox religious views.

These three Cambridge men organized a Separatist group which met in the greatest secrecy at Scrooby Manor. There in 1606 a Separatist church—the Scrooby Congregational—was formed.

It was not long before London learned of this pocket of Separatists and arrests and jail sentences followed. It now became clear to the leaders of the group that they must either renounce their new faith or flee to Holland. In 1608, with the greatest secrecy, elaborate plans for escape were made. After many difficulties, the crossing of the North Sea was accomplished and the group reached Holland where they were granted permission to settle in the beautiful university city of Leyden. Here for the next twelve years, the members of the Scrooby-Leyden Congregation lived busy and serene lives with the beloved John Robinson as pastor.

By the year 1620, the Scrooby-Leyden Church had grown to 286 members, and the dream of emigrating to America had been born. Only 35 of the group wanted to make the first hazardous journey to the New World, and these embarked for Southhampton on the little ship, Speedwell, to join a much larger group of Separatists from London on a ship named the Mayflower.

On September 6, 1620, the Mayflower set sail with 102 passengers and a crew of 50, but without an ordained minister, John Robinson being too old to help discover a New World. William Brewster, the only university-bred man on the ship, was Ruling Elder and the group's spiritual leader.

An old book describes William Brewster in these terms: "Master William Brewster—teacher, printer, pioneer planter of a great state, soldier, diplomat, statesman—dyed at Plymouth in New England the 10th of April 1644."

STEPHEN HOPKINS

Frederick Ewell's grandfather, Stephen Hopkins, seems to have been the only Mayflower passenger who had previously been to America. On May 15, 1609 he had set sail for Virginia in the "Sea Adventure." Hopkins has been described as one "Who had much knowledge in the Scriptures and could reason well therein." The Chaplain chose him "to read the Psalmes and Chapters upon Sondayes." The Sea Adventure had the mischance to be wrecked upon the island of Bermuda, and its crew was forced to live there until they could build a small bark and complete the voyage to Virginia.

As soon as the Pilgrims put foot to land on Cape Cod, Hopkins became an important leader. He was selected as a member of the first exploring party sent out from the Mayflower. The members of this party came upon what was to them a strange sight—a small sapling which had been bent double over a deep pit, tied down, and covered with boughs and grasses. Hopkins was able to explain that this was an Indian deertrap, a bit of information which he certainly did not pick up in London.

It is also obvious from the old accounts that Hopkins was on hand for all encounters with the Indians. When Samoset, the Indian sachem, stalked into Plymouth Village one day in March 1621, Hopkins was able to converse with him in his own tongue.

One of the most important events in the history of the Plymouth Colony was the making of a treaty of peace with the large tribe of Wampanoags whose leader, Massasoit, was the most powerful chief in the Cape Cod-Narragansett region. After the "signing" of the treaty, Edward Winslow was selected to pay a return visit of state, and Stephen Hopkins accompanied him as interpreter.

Probably Thomas Weston, who selected the officers and crew of the Mayflower, arranged to have Stephen Hopkins a Mayflower passenger because of his previous experience with the Indians, and his at least elementary knowledge of the American coastline.

JOHN HOWLAND

John Howland is the Ewell grandfather who has the greatest contemporary interest for us. He was born in 1594, and was a boy of sixteen when he first stepped onto the page of history.

We first hear of John when he embarked upon the Mayflower as an indentured servant to John Carver, who was governor of the Plymouth Colony until his untimely death in the spring of 1621.

On the voyage to America, Howland distinguished himself by "falling overboard in mid-Atlantic during a storm, and being rescued by catching hold of a trailing halyard and being pulled aboard by a boathook." Governor Bradford, writing about the incident, refers to him as "a lustie younge man," and states that "though he was something ill with it, yet he lived many years after, and became a profitable member both in church and commonwealth."

One of the most interesting sights in present-day Plymouth is the "Howland House," the oldest house standing, and the only one whose floors have felt the tread and whose walls have resounded to the voice of a Mayflower passenger.

The Howland House was built in 1666 and bought in 1667 by Jabez Howland with the help of his parents, John and Elizabeth Tilley Howland, who are said to have lived there part of the time.

In 1912 the Pilgrim John Howland Society purchased the house and, as far as possible, restored it to its original condition. Today the Howland House is open to the public for the sum of 35c, and visitors are received by two hostesses in colonial costumes.

On the wall of the living room in the Howland House hangs a framed certificate of honorary membership in the Pilgrim John Howland Society which was conferred upon Sir Winston Churchill, whose American mother was descended from John Howland.

FREDERICK EWELL

Frederick Ewell, the possessor of these three Mayflower grandfathers, was born in Medford in 1902. He attended the elementary schools in Medford, graduated from Medford High, and then studied civil engineering at Northeastern University. Since 1927, he has been a member of the Engineering Department of the Town of Winchester.

It can be readily understood why Mr. Ewell is deeply interested in the history of his family. With the neatness and precision of an engineer, he has constructed a Fan Chart, a huge semi-circular genealogical tree on which he has recorded the names of the 500 ancestors who have accrued to him in the 12 generations since his three grandfathers stepped ashore off Plymouth Rock.

Mr. Ewell, an energetic person, says that he has always had "moonlighting" jobs as an independent surveyor. Exhibiting his handsome new blue Pontiac, he observed that he could never have bought such a car on his salary as a city engineer. He feels that his business contacts are such that he will have a source of both interest and income.

He became sixty-one on October third and retired on pension.

Ten Midwestern College Officials To Speak Oct. 23

Students in all private and public high schools in the metropolitan Boston area have been invited to meet ten college presidents on Wednesday evening, October 23, to learn about colleges in the midwest. The presidents, whose directors of admissions also will take part in the 8 o'clock meetings, will speak at Winchester High School and Newton South High School.

The conferences are part of a cooperative effort to achieve greater geographical diversity among students at the ten liberal arts colleges belonging to the council.

Special afternoon sessions of the conferences will be held for guidance counselors at the schools starting at 2:00 p.m. These will familiarize the counselors with new programs started by the colleges and to discuss current entrance requirements, costs and scholarships.

In the evening the presidents will emphasize the features of academic and social life which distinguish the typical coeducational liberal arts colleges of the midwest. Students and their parents will be able to confer with the presidents and admissions directors privately afterwards.

Also to be stressed in the talks are the advantages of attending college in a different part of the country from the one in which a student grows up.

"We feel that anyone adds to his liberal education by the simple act of living in another part of the country and learning how people there live and think," Dr. Terry Wickham, president of Heidelberg College, said.

Eastern colleges and universities have been looking actively for students throughout the midwest and elsewhere for many years, with the same objectives as those of the council colleges now actively recruiting eastern students.

The members of the Midwest College Council are: Albion College in Albion, Michigan; Alma College in Tiffin, Ohio; Hiram College in Hiram, Ohio; Kalamazoo College in Kalamazoo, Michigan; Lake Forest College in Lake Forest, Illinois; Ripon College in Ripon, Wisconsin; Rockford College in Rockford, Illinois.

Cancer Control Clinic Reports On Statistics

It is the opinion of the physicians and staff of the Massachusetts Cancer Control Clinic that the relatively simple expediency of a cancer detection examination on an annual basis will save 275 American lives each day according to Dr. Norman Lenson, medical director of the Clinic, who has just announced the partial findings of a continuing study of the first 1000 patients at the Clinic.

The study indicates that in those cases in which actual cancer was discovered, 75 per cent of the patients will enjoy recovery through control because of early detection of the disease. In the 250 subjects in whom pre-cancerous lesions were found, normal life expectancy and good health are now insured for individuals who might have otherwise developed cancer from the neglect of such lesions.

Dr. Lenson stated that "The insidious part of the pathology of cancer is that it often lurks in seemingly well persons who do not have the necessary understanding of the warning signals. In others no real warning signs manifest themselves. Thus self-examination becomes a cruel form of self-deception. There is no substitute for a complete clinical examination by competent physicians specifically trained for the task of the early detection of cancer."

To the question can most cancers be cured if detected in the primary stages, Dr. Lenson replied, "The answer is yes - the only qualification would be a matter of semantics. Medically, the proper term would be controlled. I would even add permanently controlled. At this moment there is no known cure as such for cancer other than control. And such a control-cure, if you will, is again dependent upon early detection."

Additionally, it was emphasized that in the type of comprehensive examination for cancer which is utilized at the Cancer Control Clinic, an equal number of constitutional diseases - diabetes, high blood pressure, etc. - were noted in men and women who thought themselves perfectly healthy.

The Cancer Control Clinic is a non-profit organization located at 1095 Beacon Street in Brookline. Information and/or appointments are easily available by writing directly to Dr. Norman Lenson at the Clinic or by calling BEacon 2-1917.

Market Day At Noonan School

On Tuesday, October 1st, Noonan School had a very successful money raising event. The event was a research project, which involved having women come to the school auditorium and give their opinions on dish patterns.

The patterns of the dish designs were displayed on cards, which were observed, and each person chose two patterns that they thought should be used in the future.

This also proved to be a social event as well as a money raiser. Coffee and homemade sweets were served.

The ways and means chairman, Mrs. Kenneth Donaghey thanked everyone for cooperating (the time had been changed from daytime to evening). Also thanked were those of the committee that spent so much time on the project.

Red Cross Motor Service Needs More Drivers

A splendid opportunity of "neighbor helping neigbor" is offered by the Motor Service of the Winchester Red Cross to men or women volunteer drivers.

The requirements are very simple. First, to be an experienced driver over age 18 with a driver's license. Second, to be willing to devote about four hours per month at times convenient to you.

The duties of Motor Service are to provide transportation for needy patients to various Boston hospitals and clinics; to deliver blood from the Blood Center in Boston to the Winchester Hospital; to be on duty at the occasional local Bloodmobiles; to drive veterans at the Bedford Hospital on picnics during the summer.

How it works: the chairman of Motor Service and the Red Cross office have a list of volunteer drivers. When a call is received from Winchester Hospital or from the Welfare Department requesting transportation, phone calls are made to drivers until one is found for whom the date and hour are convenient. At the agreed time, that driver picks up the new station wagon parked in the Town Hall parking area, makes the trip, and returns the wagon to the parking lot. If desired, a private car may be used if it is covered with public liability and property damage insurance. No calls are required on week-ends or in the evening.

Being a Red Cross Motor Service driver is an exceedingly worthwhile activity. It requires a minimum of time. It is a rewarding "neighbor helping neighbor" demonstration of thoughtfulness. Call Mrs. Wallis Moulding, executive secretary, 729-2300, or the Motor Service chairman, Mrs. Theodore P. Messer, 729-3214, for full details. Or, drop in at the Chapter House, 84 Washington Street.

New Adult Group At Second Church

A new group for young adults has been organized at the Second Congregational Church. These young people are 17 years old and over, most of whom are recent high school graduates.

The first meeting was held on Sunday night, October 6, at the home of Miss Bonnie Brine, at 7 Laurel Hill Lane. Here, this enthusiastic group of young men and women enjoyed a delightful pot luck supper, with several delicious hot casseroles, salads, and hot french bread served. This was followed by a grand finale of making your own sundaes.

A devotional service and meeting followed the supper, at which time many interesting activities for the year were discussed.

The second meeting of this group will be held on Sunday night, October 20, at 6:30, at which time the group plans to bowl, followed by a devotional service, meeting and refreshments at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Watson, at 5 Bellevue Avenue.

All young men and women within this age group are most cordially invited to join. Please call Mr. or Mrs. Robert Watson at PA 9-4788 if you are interested.

Ten-Year Service Reception Given For Rev. Ellison

DR. AND MRS. JOHN W. ELLISON

Dr. and Mrs. John W. Ellison were honor guests at a Sunday afternoon tea and reception in Hadley Hall celebrating the tenth anniversary of Dr. Ellison's becoming rector of the Parish of the Epiphany.

Against the background of the recently presented portrait of the former rector, the Rev. Dwight Hadley, for whom Hadley Hall is named, and the artistically decorated table, a memorial to Mrs. Hadley, the Ellisons received the congratulations of a large number of well-wishers, including present and former parishioners, fellow townsmen, and members of the clergy from Winchester and neighboring communities.

The Rev. John Hill, curate at Epiphany, officiated as master of ceremonies at a brief program during which the junior warden, J. Kenneth Colony, paid tribute to Dr. Ellison and presented a sterling silver tray inscribed:

"To the Rev. Dr. John W. Ellison and his wife, Barrie, with the affection and grateful appreciation of their parishioners upon the occasion of his tenth anniversary as Rector at the Parish of the Epiphany in Winchester 1953-1963."

Robert Nyere, senior warden, spoke of the many accomplishments of Dr. Ellison during the past ten years of guiding, inspiring and counseling his parishioners. At the conclusion, Mr. Nyere presented to Dr. and Mrs. Ellison flight bags and information suggesting trips that they might take financed by the check which represented the monetary gifts of their grateful parishioners.

At the attractively decorated tea table, the pourers were members of the Women of Epiphany, the women's organization which under the direction of its president, Mrs. Harry Benson, was responsible for the refreshments for the reception. A member of the Young Peoples' Fellowship provided pleasing background music at the piano.

Guests were invited to sit at tables for small groups placed around the hall, to visit the parish house and classrooms, to stroll through the French doors into the beautiful memorial Cloister Garden which has become a reality under Dr. Ellison's guidance, and to visit the recently dedicated Chapel of Praise with its many memorial gifts, including stained glass windows illustrating the "Benedicite, omnia opera Domini," and the altar and reredos designed and hand-carved by its donor.

Even nature added its gift of pleasing warmth with a fall afternoon of glowing colors that only an October can produce, helping to make it a memorable day for the Ellisons, their children and their friends.

Warnock Speaks To Wyman Parents

Wyman parents heard their new principal for the first time since his arrival last week Wednesday evening when he addressed the Wyman Parents Association at their first meeting of the year held in the school auditorium.

William A. Warnock told the group that team teaching and non-graded classes will have strong consideration for Wyman in the future, but that there are no immediate changes planned at the school.

Although the physical plant at Wyman is not conducive to team teaching, there may be "room exchanging" in the upper grades at some time, he said. As plans for this program develop the parents will be kept informed, according to Mr. Warnock, who added that the graded classroom should not be discarded entirely.

Mr. Warnock also noted the 50 percent turnover in teaching staff at Wyman this year. He commended the staff on its excellence and dedication to teaching and assured the parents that the high level of education will continue at the school.

In addition to Mr. Warnock, the parents heard Mrs. David Choate, president of the Community School Association, who spoke briefly on the organization and purpose of this co-ordinating group. Also, introduced by Mrs. William Platzoeder, was Otto Schaefer, representing the Winchester Scholarship Foundation, who told of that organization's history and reminded his audience that some 300 high school graduates have already been helped to get a higher education through its offices.

Mrs. Hill introduced the new Wyman teachers; and also announced the plans of the ways and means committee for the annual fall dance. This year the "Island Interlude," is to be held at the Wyman auditorium on Saturday, November 2. She emphasized that the dance is the only fund raising project of the year, and urged all parents to give it their full support.

The Wyman parents were also alerted to the fact that they have been invited to join the Vinson-Owen parents when the latter present John J. Waite, Jr., head of the math department at the High School, speaking on the new math in the Vinson-Owen auditorium tonight, October 17, at 8 p.m.

Helping The Hospital

WINTON CLUB SEWING GROUP CHAIRMEN. Six Winton Club sewing groups meet once a month, seven times a year, to make linen articles for the Winchester Hospital, saving the hospital $3 for every $1 the club spends in making all kinds of articles of linen, from half sheets to bassinet pads. Last year the club sewed 5000 articles; this year plans to make 5700 to help fulfill the needs of the hospital's addition and 60 new beds.

Winton Club Has Started Its 43rd Season's Program

The annual Winton Club Cabaret is starting to roll for the forty-third year, and this promises to be the best one yet. January 29, 30, 31, and February 1st are the performance dates this year.

Mrs. Henry K. Porter, chairman of the 1963-'64 cabaret committee has announced that Dorothy and Robert Canessa will be directing the show. As anyone who has ever worked with them will attest to, their grace, charm and love of their art come across to every group lucky enough to work with them, and the Winton Clubers look forward to this show with more than usual enthusiasm. The theme is to be "Extra!"—and it's all about newspapers and newspapering.

The individual businessmen and firms who support the Winton Club Cabaret program make a substantial contribution toward the entire effort of the Winton Club. The linen provided as a result of these efforts is essential to the Winchester Hospital.

The needs of the hospital are understandably greater each year, and with the addition of the new wing and 60 new beds this year, the resulting need is evident and immediate. Five years ago, 2,300 articles were sewn by members. Last year (('62-'63) 5,000 were sewn. This year ('63-'64) 5,700 will be completed for hospital use. These articles are sewn by six sewing groups which meet once a month, seven times a year. Complete monthly bundles of articles are torn and prepared by the "tearing" group - a mammoth job.

Among the linen articles purchased by the Winton Club for the hospital are sheets, pillow cases, scrub suits and towels. Articles sewn by club members include pinning blankets, half sheets, table covers, bassinet pads, binders and compress squares. For every dollar spent on the preparation and sewing of an article by the Winton Club, the hospital is saved three dollars which it otherwise would have had to expend to purchase a similar article.

The commitment for 1963-1964 has already been made: now it is up to the members to produce it. The Winton Club also supports the coffee shop, the gift shop and the gift cart, which travels through the hospital for the convenience of patients and nurses.

The cabaret serves a triple purpose in our community: that of providing money for our cause, entertainment (and a really fine time for everyone involved with the show in any capacity), and that of bringing the names of our advertisers and sponsors to the public through the really professional and attractive cabaret program — that grows in size every year.

All those who have a service to sell or a business to bring to the attention of the public are invited to support this worthwhile hospital cause. When a member calls, study the program which she will have with her and join in with the many other businessmen and residents, who take active interest in this community effort which benefits both the hospital and those who use its services.

If by any chance anyone has not yet seen the program and would wish to consider the opportunity, call Mrs. Gustav G. Kaufmann (PA 9-3019) who is the cabaret program chairman for 1963-'64.

E. Robert Barlow Co-Authors Book On Management

Dr. E. Robert Barlow of 11 Arlington Street is co-author with two other persons of a book just published by McGraw-Hill Book Company of New York, "Unified Operations Management: A Practical Approach to the Total Systems Concept."

"Unified Operations Managemant," on which he collaborated with Arnold O. Putnam and Gabriel N. Stilian, is a practical, nontechnical presentation of the concepts and techniques involved in a unified approach to corporate management.

The authors have pioneered in the field of UOM. The unified approach which they set forth in the book combines the new techniques of operations, research, information flow, and direct cost accounting to optimize operations and profit planning across functional lines under the guidance of a top-level administrative group.

The book begins with a discussion of UOM's emphasis on greater centralization of information and policy making and the objectives and underlying elements of UOM, e.g., direct costing and operations research techniques. There follow chapters on the profit picture, the interrelationships of the important elements of UOM, the advent of computers, and the need for an administrative services group as a staff department.

While the development of computers and integrated data processing has acted as a catalyst in applying the unified operations approach to large, complex businesses, the authors point out that the unified operations approach may also be adopted, without the use of computers, to smaller operations.

"Unified Operations Management" is amply illustrated with case examples and covers the most recent advances in such techniques as linear programming, statistical forecasting, and the development of management information systems. A panoramic chart is included, giving the reader an over-all graphic view of the organization and concepts discussed throughout the book.

E. Robert Barlow is a vice president and director of marketing with Rath and Strong, management consultants. In addition to his consulting activities, Dr. Barlow has served on the faculty of Harvard Business School, from which he received his M.B.A. and doctorate and is the author of numerous articles and books in his field.

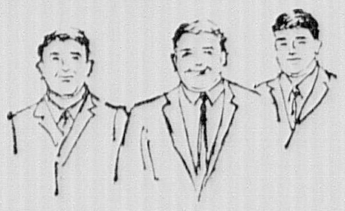
LOCAL RUG BEATERS AWAIT VERDICT

For more than twenty-five years a family of professional carpet beaters has been going about knocking the dusting, or is it dust, out of your rugs and mine. Yours truly and other civic minded citizens decided to take some action. We finally managed to catch these fellows red handed, but not without considerable trouble including some sharp undercover work at their showrooms, located at 1026 Main Street, Winchester, and their big beautiful TOP SECRET process cleaning plant at 14 Lochwan Street also in Winchester. Caught with the goods, (rugs and carpets) by the hundreds, what could they do but confess.

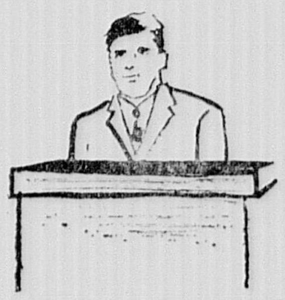


Came the day of the big public trial, it sort of dampened their plans for A 25th ANNIVERSARY CELEBRATION, everyone, for miles around, turned out to see that these rug merchants got what was coming to them. And . . . it can be said with certainty that John Q. Public had been awaiting just such a development. The defendants identified themselves to the court as Harry, Leo, and Mike BOODAKIAN. A fourth member of the group, KOKO Boodakian, and head of the clan, managed to elude the dragnet. He was resting at the hideout after having spent some 25 years beating to death several thousands of rugs. Well Sir, it was quite a story they, the Boodakian brothers had to tell.

Oriental Harry and Broadloom Leo had appointed the third active member of the carpet banging trio as defense counsel. What were the charges against them? Dipping rugs and carpets in special solutions until they had really dyed, all differently; stretching and sizing the poor things; using scissors, cutting blades, and needle and thread on beautiful ORIENTAL, BROADLOOM and other fine carpets and rugs. The indictment even had a count of selling the poor things into domestic household slavery hundreds and thousands of times over.

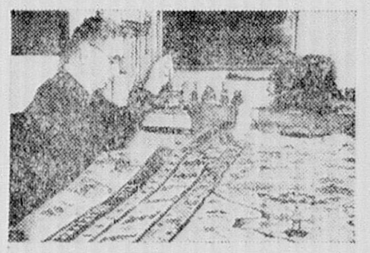
Mike, alias HOOKED BRAID, and as we mentioned earlier, group defendant spokesman, admitted to the charges as they were read by the court stenographer one by one. It gave us even greater satisfaction to hear him further implicate himself and his brothers, telling the court quite brazenly that they had made plenty of loot by cleaning up carpets and rugs of all shapes and sizes.

Furthermore, Mike admitted openly that the trio had been involved for 25 years in developing uncanny skill at reweaving, overcasting, edging, binding, serging, and reberling. But in the same breath, the defendant promised to offer a stout defense.



Mike stood in the prisoner's dock and this was the story he told. The whole idea had been his father KOKO's to begin with: that Koko formed the gang and the rug beating business back in 1938 in the Boodakian back yard. Mike told the court that the back yard dirty work was accomplished with the following weapons:— Scrub brushes, a garden hose, and a hoe for scraping. All this was noted in the RECORD!

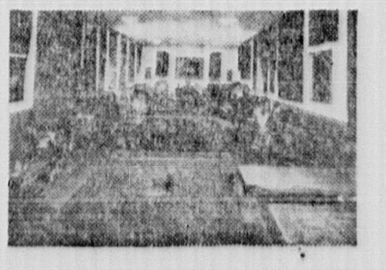
According to the defendant, rug beating became so profitable that the Boodakian rug beaters decided to expand operations. By hand, they put up a 25 x 50 foot cement block plant with a pot bellied stove for heating purposes. A little later on they added (this in 1941) a 12 x 25 foot extension consisting of ten drying poles where they fiendishly baked out ten 9 x 12 rugs at a time.



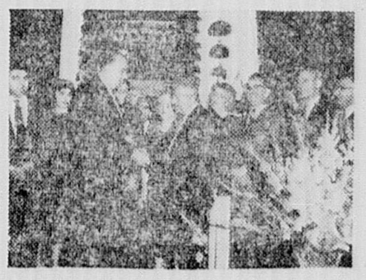
When World War Two came home to Americans with the bombing of Pearl Harbor, the morning of December 7th, 1941, the gang further disguised its operations by turning the plant area into an air raid warden's headquarters post. Admittedly it was a clever bit of strategy which further solidified the BOODAKIAN gang's hold on the community. Going a step further, two members of the fearsome four, ORIENTAL Harry and BROADLOOM Leo joined the armed forces. Papa, alias SIZAL and son Hooked braid Mike, meanwhile continued to whale the tar out of carpets and rugs.

Things were pretty rough for the homeguard gang members during the war years 1941 through 1945. There were still plenty of people who wanted to collaborate with the rug beaters, but help was scarce. So was rug material and rug supplies in general. Rugs and carpets, which everyone knows love to gather dust and dirt, really got a break during this period. The BOODAKIAN gang still managed to survive thanks to the cunning and know how of KOKO and Mike.

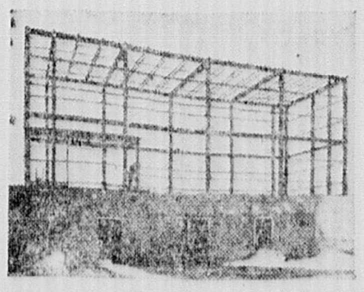
But all good things must end, and so it was with the reprieve enjoyed so long by RUGS IN GENERAL. When BROADLOOM Leo and ORIENTAL Harry got back from the war things quickly returned to normal. The rugs found themselves taking a fearful beating once again. And . . . as if things weren't bad enough the BOODAKIAN gang decided to expand once again.



Becoming even bolder, the BOODAKIANs decided that business was so good by 1954 that they could afford even greater expansion. This resulted in another addition to the sales facility where captive rugs and carpets were tagged and sold at REASONABLE prices to anyone.



This showroom was a work of art because people came from far and near to admire the unusual features of a sunken display area. Using every enterprising idea at its command, the BOODAKIAN rug gang had plenty of MOXIE, it filled the walls with beautiful murals, pictures, and other treasure. Even the late GEORGE FINGOLD, the Republican candidate for governor that year was dazzled by such regal splendor. So impressed was he that the gang talked him into cutting the ribbon to mark the opening of the lavish new SHOWROOM.



Much to the chagrin of rugs everywhere, none was safe, word was smuggled out of the BOODAKIAN rug torture chamber that big plans were underway to go after rugs that until now had blissfully enjoyed a dirty life. The HARD WORKING gang broke out a back wall of the current plant facilities to enlarge the dry room, washing and workroom facilities. When completed at considerable labor and expense to thousands of WELL BEATEN, washed, and stitched rugs and carpets, the operation had a showroom 25 x 27 feet, a washroom 23 x 30 feet, a workroom 25 x 40. In addition, there was a dryroom 20 x 30 feet where the gang could now hang more than twice as many rugs and carpets to bake in that blistering oven.

At this point, the gang found its gold coffers brimming over. In order to allay suspicions about what went on in the dingy workrooms to the showroom rear, they were out of bounds. KOKO decided to throw a big party on the premises for about 200 persons. Imagine the delight of the BOODAKIAN CLAN when at least 600 persons showed up! It was eat, drink, and be merry until the wee hours of the morning.

Well, at this point in the court proceedings the magistrate decided that he had heard enough for one day. He wanted to digest the testimony as did the prosecution and the spectators. He called a recess, and just in the nick of time to get the crafty Hooked Braid Mike off the witness stand. The prosecution was a little uneasy over the way things seemed to be going, but we citizens who had worked so hard to see justice done in this case still felt confident. This, in spite of an obvious attempt by the culprits to cut up our rug case.

The case resumes next week and I know you will want to hear further testimony from the witness who undoubtedly has a few more TRICKS up his sleeve. Won't you JOIN US same time and same place.

THANK YOU!

Obedience to God's will is the theme this Sunday in all Christian Science churches. The Bible Lesson is on the subject: "Doctrine of Atonement."
Scriptural references will include this verse: "And be not conformed to this world: but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect, will of God" (Romans 12:2).
Also to be read are these lines from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy (p. 202): "The scientific unity which exists between God and man must be wrought out in life-practice, and God's will must be universally done."

De Cordova "Silent Auction"

Art lovers, collectors, home decorators and Christmas shoppers are promised a bonanza at the De Cordova Museum's "Silent Auction" on November 15,16 and 17 in Lincoln. Up for bids will be paintings, drawings, prints, sculpture, wood carving, weaving, mosaics, jewelry, pottery and silver. Most of the hundreds of works to be auctioned off will be created and donated by students of the museum. Sponsored by the associate council of the museum, the Auction will benefit the Museum's Fund for new classrooms.

The public is invited to come to the Grand Opening on Friday evening, November 15, from 9 to 11. p.m. Bidding will start Friday and continue through Saturday and Sunday. Tickets will be sold at the door; children under 16 will be admitted free. One ticket will be good for all three days of the auction and each ticket will entitle the buyer to bid as many times as he wishes and to have a chance on a valuable door prize.

Two original works of art, a painting by famed Boston artist Albert Alcalay, and a silk-screen print by California printmaker Dorothy Bowman, will be given away as door prizes at the Grand Drawing on Sunday evening.

Additional attractions during the Auction will be demonstrations by professional artists on Saturday afternoon. From 2 to 3 p.m., Benjamin Kupferman of the Museum's teaching staff will present a demonstration of jewelry-making and silver-smithing. From 3 to 4, Foster H. Nystrom, assistant director of the museum and painting instructor, will demonstrate the techniques of watercolor painting.

Everyone who places a bid during the three-day Silent Auction is eligible to attend the gala closing party on Sunday evening. Bidding will close at 7 p.m. when the gavel goes down and the names of the successful bidders are announced.

All students and friends of the museum are invited to donate original works of art for the auction. For rules governing donations, contact members of the auction committee or the museum.

Auxiliary Firemen To Hold Open House at Reservoir

An Open House on Saturday, October 19, will put before the Town the newly refurbished quarters of the Auxiliary Fire Department on Reservoir Street.

Proud of what has been accomplished in a short time in their new home, members will be at home to the public from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. on that day.

On October 8th, all members pitched in with paint brushes and cleaning materials in an endeavor to speed up the rehabilitation of the quarters in the water department building. The members of the Auxiliary have put in between 1000 and 1500 hours of labor since the summer refurbishing their quarters.

The town meeting last spring appropriated money to cover the cost of new doors, approach apron and other heavy work, while a gift from the Winchester Rotary and individual contributions from the Auxiliary members themselves paid for wiring, paint, etc.

Regularly scheduled meetings of the Winchester Auxiliary Fire Department were held on Tuesday, October 1 and 8. Due to the illness of Capt. Peter Galuffo, drillmaster, the planned program was omitted. The newer members were given instructions by their more experienced colleagues in the proper method of making a hydrant, and laying a line from the hyrant to the fire.

For the uninitiated "making a hydrant" does not mean building one, but rather it outlines the correct procedure for removing hose from the apparatus, connecting it to the hydrant and to the pump, when indicated, and getting water to the fire in the shortest possible time.

How Does It Look

Chadwick Speaks To Jaycees About Local Petitions

Rep. Harrison Chadwick discussed the merits of the Initiative Petition drive at the Winchester chapter of the Junior Chamber of Commerce's Tuesday night meeting on October 8th.

Rep. Chadwick emphasized that the chief executive of the Commonwealth must have broad powers if he is to run the state economically and efficiently. He noted that the present Governor, and Governors before him, have experienced great difficulties because of the restraints imposed upon them by the powers of the executive council.

Rep. Chadwick cited several examples of the statutory powers of the council which hamper the effectiveness of the Governor's office. The hiring and firing of nearly all key state employees must be approved by the council. These appointments cannot be approved or terminated by the Governor alone. The leasing of premises for state offices must also be approved by the council.

Speaking from personal experience as a member of the State Legislature, Rep. Chadwick cited an occasion when even his personal expense account had to be approved by the council. These and other statutory powers give too much authority to the council and not enough to the Governor, in the opinion of Rep. Chadwick.

He concluded his remarks with a hearty endorsement of the Petition and a conviction that it will receive favorable support from the general public.

Speaking at the same meeting, Dick Brackett, director of community development for the Jaycees, outlined the details of how the Initiative Petition Drive would be conducted. Working in conjunction with the League of Women Voters, the Winchester Jaycees hope to solicit three to four thousand signatures from the town's registered voters. The local drive, which started last week, is being conducted on a house-to-house basis as part of a state-wide drive to collect 100,000 signatures by November 15th.

New guests at the meeting included Rudy Pines and Bill Schromm, introduced by president Joe Saylor. Bob Gonsalves and Joe Conley were also introduced as guests of Bob Adams and John Kavanaugh.

Bob MacNamara announced that the annual Jaycee Jazz Night will be held on Friday, December 6th.

Bill Haynesworth outlined plans for a Jaycee sponsored State Tennis Tournament, which may be held here in Winchester next spring.

UF Agencies Face Gov't Control If Drives Don't Net

Volunteers in Winchester's 1963 United Fund campaign were told this week that governmental control of various UF agencies would eventually be the only alternative to a successful campaign.

"The 200 agencies sharing in the United Fund cannot possibly support themselves through individual campaigns because only the strongest would survive. However, as they are all vital human services they could not be eliminated. This would result in turning their functions, and financing, over to the government," said Audley Clarke, Winchester's general UF chairman.

"Needless to say," Mr. Clarke continued, "the result would be increases in taxation to cover the increased costs due to governmental operation.

"A United Fund campaign is a lot of work and does demand sacrifice, Mr. Clarke said, "but the reward is the healing of the sick, the repair of shattered homes, the salvage of youth, the enrichment of old age, the pursuit of medical research and the fulfillment of the spirit of compassion."

Four Local Tufts Men Receive U.S. Research Grants

Four faculty members at Tufts University, all residents of Winchester, have received recent grants for research from the U.S. government and national foundations.

Three of them are members of the chemistry department at Tufts: Dr. Thomas R. Gibb of 27 Sargent Road, who with a colleague, has been granted $41,929 by the Atomic Energy Commission for their work on the properties of metallic hydrides; Dr. George S. Handler of 37 Kenwin Road, $6,100 from the A.E.C. for research on Thomas-Fermi model for graphite, and Dr. Robert D. Stolow of 8 North Gateway, who is concerned with research on the reactivity and conformation of 1, 4-cyclo-hexane derivatives, $14,400 from the U. S. Public Health Service.

Dr. Kenneth A. Van Wormer of 24 Fells Road, an associate professor of chemical engineering at Tufts, has been given a grant of $5,000 by the National Science Foundation for his research on the effect of solid particle beds on boiling, the familiar heat transfer phenomena. The role of laboratory boiling chips in promoting improved boiling may lead to new applications. A possible area may be the recovery of fresh water from the sea.

CAPITOL COMMENT

By
YOUR CONGRESSMAN
BRAD MORSE

Much has been said about the problems faced by young men and women who leave school before graduation from high school. Jobs are much more difficult to locate for people without adequate training and skills; idleness breeds juvenile delinquency and despair. One approach to this serious national problem is that of manpower training and development to prepare out of work, out of school youths for employment.

Less attention has been given to programs designed to help young people to stay in school. Many students leave school for financial or family reasons; others leave because they do not think that high school is preparing them for anything "practical"; others lack motivation because they feel that even education will not help them to find employment in an economy with almost five million people jobless.

We are, however, beginning to attack these problems. The Department of Health, Education and Welfare, for example, provides grants to local and State public and private organizations for the prevention and control of juvenile delinquency. Occupational counseling centers have also been established to help workers prepare for interviews with employers and provide some instruction in basic work skills and attitudes.

Funds were made available to the Office of Education for distribution in a "back-to-school" campaign. So far 62 communities in 23 states and the District of Columbia have participated in this program.

Under the Public Welfare Amendments to the Social Security Act, a number of demonstration projects have been developed to test the effectiveness of various methods of encouraging children to stay in school. These projects involve visits to pupils' homes, talks with their parents, and the awarding of small "scholarships" to needy students to help them meet basic expenses for school supplies, clothing and medical services.

Vocational education is still another approach to the problem of high-school dropouts. If school is made more meaningful and relevant to a student's job future, more of our young people will pursue their education to graduation.

Even a quick review of these various programs indicates that efforts are scattered among a number of departments and agencies. Little effort seems to have been made to coordinate these programs and attack the dropout problem coherently and effectively.

Job potential, future earnings, family security and self-respect are in many instances dependent on adequate education. I am currently exploring possibilities of legislation to unify and coordinate our activities in this field.

Ernest Siegfriedt, of 80 Woodside Road will speak at the annual Career Day program next Thursday, at Wentworth Institute in Boston. Mr. Siegfriedt is chief Manufacturing Engineer for United Carr Fastener in Cambridge. His topic will be "Opportunities for Production Engineering Technology Graduates in Metal Stamping Industries."

Orchids In Your Home

When someone mentions Orchids to you, chances are you think of fragile plants bearing delicate flowers which grow only in the steaming jungles of Africa, in Hawaii, or in stuffy greenhouses.

True, the flowers are delicate, but the plants are not; no Orchids except one ortwo inferior miniatures are indigenous to Hawaii. Any Orchids which are there have been imported.

The Orchid flower which is used in corsages is the bloom from the Cattleya plant. (Cattleya is a species name, which includes many varieties.)

It is also this species which makes the ideal house plant. When the plant's few needs are met, you will have the perfect plant to grow in your home. Cattleyas are happy at normal room temperature during the day, but a temperature of 55 to 60 degrees at night is a must. If this low nocturnal temperature is not provided, your plant will not bloom.

Humidity of 40 to 60 per cent is best, so usually during the winter you'll have to set the plant on a tray filled with pebbles and water, or some such contrivance. Cattleya Orchids need all the light they can get, when indoors.

All Orchids benefit from good ventilation. In their natural state, Orchids cling to tree trunks and therefor are always exposed to moving air.

Taking all the requisites into consideration, the best plan of attack for growing cattleyas is to have them in a sunny window in the living quarters during the day and then to take the plants into the basement for the night. That 55 to 60 degree temperature is a must.

Cattleya Orchids are not grown in soil but rather in a special kind of tree bark, in coke, (the coal kind), or in unmilled spagnum moss. The plants need repotting only every seven or eight years, so it's best to take the plant back to the nurseryman from whom you bought it to have this operation done right.

The plants are usually divided when repotted, so chances are that even though you brought him one, you'll take home two.

The magnificient Cattleya flower is of definite composition. It has three sepals, three petals, (one is modified to form the characteristic lip), one stamen and one pistil. Most flowers last (on the plant) for from three to four weeks.

Orchids are not usually propagated from seed by the home gardener for one universal reason. The germinating medium has to be made up of nine chemicals ranging from monobasic potassium phosphate , magnesium sulphate, a dash sugar and distilled water. The actual germinating takes place in a sterilized flask.

If your lucky, and the seeds do sprout, seven or eight years later your new plant will bloom. A blooming size Orchid plant costs from $15.00 up—way up.

For your first Orchid you ought to get a C. mossiae. The flowers, which are five to eight inches across, open around Easter. They are light pink in color, and the plant is one of the easiest to grow.

Any good house plant fertilizer is good for Cattleyas. Since the medium in which Cattleyas grow is usually foreign to the home gardener, when to water always poses a problem. The best way to determine this is by the weight of the plant. There is a marked difference in weight between a newly watered plant and a dry one.

Are you, like most of us, trying to find a good place to keep that garden hose this winter?

Why not try this: Lay it out on the lawn in the sun for a while, to soften it, then coil it inside a bushel basket. If you do this carefully, keeping the turns tight against the sides of the basket, two or three hoses can be kept out of the way in the same container.

Crawford Church Officially Names Gifford Hall

The social hall in the new educational wing of the Crawford Memorial Methodist Church has been officially named "Gifford Hall." The action was taken at the recent meeting of the official board of the church and was announced at the anniversary service last Sunday.

The hall has been thus named to honor the Rev. Allison B. Gifford who was minister of the Winchester Methodist Church from November 1918 to April 1925.

It was during the pastorate of the Rev. Mr. Gifford that the present church was built, the cornerstone being laid just forty years ago on October 7, 1923.

When the Rev. Mr. Gifford came to the Winchester church the congregation was worshipping in a small church on Mt. Vernon Street. By the end of his pastorate here they were in the present beautiful colonial structure, dedicated on October 10, 1926.

The Rev. and Mrs. Gifford were at church last Sunday when the fortieth anniversary of the laying of the cornerstone was observed. They were introduced to the congregation and the Rev. Mr. Gifford pronounced the Benediction at the close of the service. The present minister, the Rev. H. Newton Clay conducted the service and was assisted by the Rev. G. Vaughn Shedd. The Rev. William J. Ogle, superintendent of the Lynn District of the Methodist Church, preached the anniversary sermon on the subject, "The Commuter's Sermon."

Living With Your Heart

A promising technique for rebuilding the coronary arteries with tissue patches from nearby blood vessels has been developed in animals at the West Roxbury Veterans Administration Hospital.

Doctors there, supported in part by the Heart Association, have performed experiments that may help overcome some of the technical difficulties connected with surgery to remove local blockage in the coronary arteries, which nourish the heart.

The project was instituted because, in the 75 percent of patients who survive coronary heart attacks, many continue to have partially disabling symptoms. In these persons, it is believed by the investigators that long-term improvement can be achieved by surgical removal of the block in the artery.

Many technical difficulties are encountered in this type of operation, among them the narrowing of the artery after it is sewn, during the healing process. Along with obstructing the blood flow, the suture-line (sewn edge) may become the site of new bloodclot formation.

For these and other reasons, direct surgery to unclog coronary arteries has been tried only rarely in humans.

Working toward reduction of these hazards, researchers devised a procedure in which a piece of tissue from the nearby artery is grafted over the cut in the coronary artery.

The Doctors reported to the American Heart Association that the tissue patch actually widens the coronary channel through which blood flows, an aid in avoiding the formation of clots.

A second advantage was that the technique does not require the use of a heart-lung machine to take over the pumping of blood to the body during surgery. Instead, to let the heart to maintain its normal work, the surgeons piped the blood through a catheter from an artery close by into the coronary artery at a point beyond where the patch is to be grafted.

The patch is then slipped down over the catheter and stitched in place with no interruption in circulation.

After the technique had been worked out in preliminary experiments, it was tested in 12 dogs, with satisfactory results in two-thirds of the cases.

The rate of technical success was reported to indicate a promising future for clinical application since coronary arteries in humans are much larger than those of dogs, and would be more amenable to surgery.

The project is one of many made possible by the Heart Fund in Massachusetts and other major U. S. medical and research centers.

About Your Social Security

Do you employ household help—a maid, cleaning woman, gardener, handyman, babysitter? If you do and pay any one of these persons a total of $50 in cash in a calendar quarter, you should be reporting their wages and paying social security tax on them.

How is this figured? Imagine the year divided into four equal parts, each of the parts comprising three months, is a calendar quarter.

For instance, July, August and September make up the third calendar quarter. If you paid your babysitter or cleaning woman a total of at least $50 cash by the end of September, you owe social security tax on her wages. You must deduct three and five-eighths percent of her wages and add three and five-eighths percent from your own pocket. The amount of earnings is reported and the tax is paid to Internal Revenue Service.

If the employer does not report these wages, he is liable for penalties and interest for late filing as well as the tax.

The social security office at 625 Mt. Auburn Street, Cambridge, telephone 491-0700 will be glad to send you an instruction folder containing a pre-addressed post card for use in sending for the proper forms.

Sachems Roll Easily Over Cambridge Latin, 28-0

Starting right where they left off last week, Winchester's rejuvenated Sachems had no trouble at all in downing a Cambridge Latin eleven 28-0 before only 1500 fans at wind-swept Russell Field, Cambridge, last Saturday. Once again it was an aggressive, hard-hitting defensive unit that sparked the Sachem's initial momentum; a unit that caused four Latin fumbles, and kept such constant pressure on Latin quarterback Bob McKinnon that he was able to get only six passes away. Of these, two were incomplete and one intercepted. Five times McKinnon was dropped behind the line of scrimmage by blitzing linebackers.

NOT THE BERLIN WALL, but still a formidable-looking barrier are Sachems (l. to r.) Bill Grant, Walt Mears, Dave Rowe, and Ed Cutting, who pour through and nab Latin's Tom Jackson for a loss. This is the kind of defensive work that makes this year's squad one to watch.

KIMBALL RECOVERY

On just the second play of the game, Latin halfback Henry Turner had the ball jarred loose on his own 18-yard line, and the Sachem's Jack Kimball came up with it. Quickly, halfback Ed Cutting broke off right tackle for 6 yards, quarterback Bob Branley rifled a pass to end Vic Papadinis for 6 more, halfback Steve Goldin hit the middle for another 5 and, finally, Cutting capped it with a score from one yard out. A Branley pass for the conversion skipped just over the hands of Papadinis.

LATIN THREAT

When Frank Frongillo's ensuing kickoff sailed into the end zone, and the ball was brought out to the 20, Latin began its first and last sustained drive of the afternoon. On a pitchout from McKinnon, fullback George Trioli picked up 13; a quick-pass over the middle to end George Gurry snared 6 more. Turner, who was probably the Cantabs best running back, carried twice for 12 yards, and, suddenly, the Sachems found themselves on their own 49. Three plays and 9 yards later, McKinnon, with a first and ten, sent Gurry straight up the unprotected center of the Sachem defense on a pass pattern that apparently worked to perfection, but the lanky end had been over-anxious, had broken too soon, and the play was nulliifed. Grateful for a second chance, the Sachem defense dug in. Goldin reddogged and caught Trioli on the 40; then McKinnon, stormed by end Barry Johnson and half the Winchester line, lost the ball, and Frongillo recovered.

CUTTING SCORES

For the next ten minutes, the ball changed hands six times. But it was already obvious that the Sachems were dominating the play and it didn't seem likely that they would suffer a let-down. Once, on a 25-yard punt return by Cutting and a 30-yard sprint by Goldin, they penetrated to the Latin 10. But the Cantab defense stiffened, and four attempts to score ended back on the 14.

With less than a minute remaining in the half, Jack Kimball intercepted a McKinnon pass on his own 45 and returned to the Latin 32. Hurrying to get in under the wire, Branley missed Papadinis twice before he lobbed a perfect strike to Cutting on the 25, who shook off two would-be tacklers and raced into the end zone. Branley teamed with Papadinis for the conversion, and the Sachems led 14-0.

Then, just before time ran out at the half, Bill Grant recovered a free ball in a kickoff scramble on the Latin 38. It seemed to augment the developments of the first two quarters, and to forecast things to come.

RETURN OF 23 YARDS is made by Jack Kimball on intercepted pass late in second period that eventually led to TD.

OFFENSE EXPLODES

With a Winchester defense living up their press clippings and yielding nothing, the offense decided to assert themselves and promptly scored the first two times they got possession of the ball in the second half. Sophomore Dave Rowe, following his interference like an accomplished veteran and slipping out of the grasp of at least four defenders, collected one on an 18-yard run off left tackle; four plays later, an already established veteran named Cutting scampered 29 yards for the other. Icing it, Branley rolled out prettily to his right for a two-pointer, and Winchester led 26-0 with a little more than a quarter to go.

Players of the second and third units now entered the game, and though they showed inexperience offensively, they held defensively with the same determined effort the first unit displayed.

With two minutes remaining in the game, Latin, with the help of two consecutive 15-yard penalties, pushed the Sachems back to their own 25-yard line, and forced Coach Henry Knowlton to again insert his first eleven. After a Jack Kimball punt was deflected and went out of bounds on the 20, a personal foul took the ball to the 10. But Latin could go no further. With seconds remaining, the Sachems took over and ran out the clock.

Sachem Sidelines

Spectators at Russell Field were allowed to sit on only one side of the field, and were fenced off the playing area entirely. Every now and and then, the wind would shift and the Sachems, situated on the far and lonely side, could hear someone cheering them on . . . The game itself lacked the usual inter-school feeling of mutual competitiveness. You couldn't help thinking that it would be better to re-establish relations with Watertown, or some other school of equal caliber . . . Don Allard, who seems to pop up on a lot of football fields, changed his Boston Sweepers blue and white for the stripes of an official's uniform at the game. The personable Allard, who has played in both the Canadian and American football leagues, expressed his hope that plenty of Winchester fans will turn out for Joe Bellino's debut at Everett this Saturday night . . . Two of the Sachems' most pleasant surprises were senior Barry Johnson and sophomore Dave Rowe. Johnson was so outstanding on defense that he appeared to be involved in at least 95 per cent of the tackles. And young Rowe showed enough running talent to ensure at least two more years of a formidable Sachem attack.

Gymnastic Clinic Planned

On November 29, 30, and December 1, at the University of Massachusetts, there is going to be a clinic featuring the sport quoted by the January issue of Pageant Magazine as "The Most Beautiful Sport in the World," Gymnastics.

At the 1960 Olympic games, there was much controversy over why our United States Gymnastic Team did not fare so well in this sport.

In all probability, the cause lies in the fact that in our grammar, junior, and high schools where the more popular sports are football, basketball, and baseball, relatively little emphasis is put on gymnastics.

Although recently through the efforts of the newly formed New England gymnastic Federation being able to train and supply good gymnastic judges, the sport is definitely on its way to becoming much more popular.

This Gymnastic Clinic to be held at the University of Massachusetts is the largest single gymnastic event ever held in New England. The clinic will feature instruction and competition for boys and girls of all age groups. Instruction will be given by top United States coaches and instructors.

All gymnasts and gymnastic coaches are urged to attend this three day clinic.

Locally, you may contact Coach Isidore Battino at Winchester High School for further information and details.

No Badminton October 24th

There will be no badminton at the high school gymnasium next Thursday, October 24, because of the open house scheduled on that date. However, there will be badminton sessions on each Tuesday and Thursday evening as usual before and after that date.

Quarterback Y. A. Tittle of the New York Giants is the only active player presently in the Pro Football Hall of Fame.

Winchester Expects Hard Battle With Lexington

Winchester plays its first home game of the 1963 season Saturday afternoon at Manchester Field and the Sachems do not look to have picked up anything especially soft for the home opener. Lexington does not look too easy, at all!

Lexington beat Stoneham, 18-0, last Saturday, while Winchester, in its second game of the 1963 season, was hard pressed to eke out an 8-0 victory over the Big Blue.

The Blue and Gold always gives Winchester plenty of rugged going, win, lose or draw, and there seems to be no reason for making Saturday's game an exception to this rule.

Lexington is big and runs the ball well, also passing pretty well on occasion. Coach Knowlton felt his boys played a good game against a fair Cambridge Latin team last Saturday and believes they can beat Lexington with the breaks fairly even.

Lexington lost to Melrose, 22-0; and was beaten by Belmont, 12-2. While comparative scores mean little or nothing in the Middlesex League, they are always interesting as a basis for some sort of comparison.

On the basis of what Lexington has shown, Winchester should have a real chance against the Minuteboys. The Sachems, however, will have to play ball all the way to scalp the Minuteboys come Saturday.

With two wins in three games, and the first game of the season at home there ought to be a good crowd on hand for the festivities on Saturday. There are plenty of seats available, but if you have a preference why not get around early. Kickoff at 1:30 p.m.

JACK KIMBALL, Sachem at left, seems concerned about Latin's Jim Legier, who apparently warrants concern as he makes a two-point landing.

ED CUTTING races 29 yards for Sachem's final touchdown in third period. Latin player nearest to him, with gestures of resignation, appears about ready to end pursuit.

Scouting Report

LEXINGTON
Coach: John Janusas
'62 Record: 3-6-0

An important one for the Sachems; a must win if Melrose is to be met with the right attitude the following week. Lexington features a sound and quick offense, with good running backs in Dick Arbeene and Tom Soderstrom, and exceptional quarterbacking in Buddy Yeomans. Pass receivers are also above par as both Jack Glennon and Bill Spinelli can haul them in long and short. Defense has its weaknesses with the exception of the ends; a rough and tough team to run outside on. Unusual line formations should not disturb a heads-up Sachem defense. Players to watch: Arbeene (25), Soderstrom (49), Yeomans (11), backs: Glennon (83), Spinelli (87), ends.

BY FRANK PROCOPIO

What was the greatest football team of all time? Red Blaik and the late Grantland Rice both agree that it was the cadet team that romped across the plains of West Point in the fall of 1944. And "romped" is precisely the word for it. Power-and-talent-laden with the likes of Glen Davis, Doc Blanchard, Tom Lombardo, Barney Poole, Tex Coulter, Jack Green, Joe Stanowicz, Doug Kenna, and Bob St. Onge, this squad broke more modern records than any team in history. Its offense averaged a phenomenal 7.74 yards per play that included 74 touchdowns and 56 conversions. Mr. Outside, Davis, averaged 11.5 yards per carry, and scored 20 touchdowns. Mr. Inside, Blanchard, averaged 56.1 yards on 45 kickoff returns. Opponents scored a mere five times against them, while the Black Knights themselves retaliated with a particular vengeance. Here's what that schedule looked like when the final whistle had blown and after the last cadet cap had been tossed ecstatically into the blue:

Army 59	Notre Dame 0
Army 62	Pennsylvania 7
Army 27	Duke 7
Army 46	No. Carolina 0
Army 59	Brown 7
Army 69	Pittsburgh 7
Army 76	Coast Guard 0
Army 83	Villanova 0
Army 23	Navy 7

Davis, at 5 ft. 9 in., 170 lbs., and Blanchard, at 6 ft., 208 lbs., together made an impression that will last as long as football lasts. During their three-year tenure, Army remained unbeaten. In 625 rushes they gained 5,169 yards and scored 89 touchdowns, for an average of 8.3 yards every time one of them carried the ball . . . Also on that formidable Army team was former Winchesterite Bill West. Bill, a transfer from Dartmouth, had the misfortune of playing behind Blanchard, a transfer from North Carolina. But there were many who felt that West was at least equal, if not superior, to Blanchard. Under Blaik he never quite got the opportunity to prove it. In a post-season contest against the New York Giants, Bill started at fullback, showed his versatility, and was chosen the game's outstanding player . . . Because former New York Titan Bill Shockley kicked an 18-yard field goal with 31 seconds left in the game, two Joe Bellino touchdowns on passes from Carl Mobley went for naught as the Newark Bears defeated Providence last Saturday night, 17-14 . . . For those who want to see Joe in action this coming Saturday night in Everett, 1,000 tickets are presently on sale at McCormack's Apothecary . . . Another 1,000 at the S. O. I. Hall and Bellino's Pizza . . . The most thought-provoking challenge of the week comes from a Woburn-Winchester girls' football team called "The Patches," who claim to have already scrimmaged boys' (that's right) teams from Revere, Medford and Malden, and are seeking more opponents, Ellen and Suzanne Hardy, Pauline Caruso, Jean and Judy Higgins, Carol Spinazola, and Judy Mantere, are some who make up the fearsome array of young-ladyhood . . . Legend has it that when Dr. Clarence Spears, who assumed head coaching chores at Minnesota in 1925, began combing the back country in search of husky farm boys he would approach a likely-looking prospect and inquire the way to town. If the lad pointed with his hand, Spears drove on, but if he picked up the plow and pointed with it, Spears brightened and outlined the advantages of a college education . . . This Saturday's game with Lexington could well be the most important of the season for the Sachems. A loss to the Minutemen would have a morale-shattering effect. On the other hand, a win would supply that essential momentum they need to meet upcoming Melrose . . . At Stoneham and again at Cambridge Latin the Sachems showed steady improvement, and if the defense holds up as well as it has, it is reasonably safe to assume that Lexington will lose their third Middlesex contest while Winchester wins their second.

Joe Bellino Faces Sweepers Sat. Night In Home Debut

Joe Bellino, who launched his fabulous football career in this area, will be back on the scene on Saturday night as he leads the Providence Steamrollers against the Boston Nu-Way Sweepers in an Atlantic Coast pro-football league battle at Everett Memorial stadium starting at 8:15 p.m.

Bellino, who jumped from schoolboy fame at Winchester High to national stature as the Heisman Trophy winner and All-America back at Navy, will be running from his old halfback slot for the Steamrollers and a capacity crowd is expected to be on hand for his "home-coming."

The former All-American will be flown into Boston from his duty post with the U. S. Navy at South Carolina.

Bellino will be greeted by a sweeper team which will be at full strength for the first time this year. Rick Sapienza is back in harness for the first time since opening day, big Frank Williams is again ready to go and Jackie Farland is set to trigger the local offense.

"We'll need every possible player in order to cope with Bellino," coach Chuck Fucillo of ,the Sweeper's declared.

Bellino was a key factor in the Steamroller's win over Boston back on September 27th, when he made his debut in the Atlantic Coast pro-league. The Sweepers are looking for a "get even" night at Everett on Saturday.

Some 15,000 are expected to be on hand for Bellino's expected explosion. Local fans may purchase tickets at McCormack's Apothecary, from Richard Penta at the Sons of Italy club hall, or from Tony Bellino at Bellino's Pizza on Swanton Street.

Soccer Game To Aid Italian Flood Victims

The undefeated Boston Professional Soccer Club will play the American All-Stars of Hartford, Sunday afternoon, October 20, at Chelsea Stadium in a benefit game. Proceeds will be used to help in the restoration of the Italian villages and people devastated by the recent tragic flood.

The Hub booters are riding merrily along at a tie for the American Soccer League lead with the Ukranian Club of Philadelphia. Boston gained the top spot by its 1-0 victory over the Falcons at Newark last Sunday, thanks to a sensational 20-yarder by Sanchez Garcia of Argentina.

Coach Umberto Atria's booters have three wins and a tie in four outings. One of the highlights of their splendid play has been their stout defense, spearheaded by the talented Hank Noga of Fall River, the only American on the team.

Ten countries are represented on the colorful Boston Club. Besides the United States' lone entry, there are players from Colombia, Italy, Austria, Scotland, Ireland, Greece, Argentina, Peru and Mexico.

The next league encounter for Boston is Sunday, October 27, at Chelsea Stadium with New Brunswick, N. J., furnishing the opposition.

Kick-off is 2:30 for all home games. High school students will be admitted at half price at all home games.

Stoneham Edges Lynch 12-6

The Lynch football team is now focusing its attention to Concord who visits our home grounds tomorrow (Friday) after losing a close one to Stoneham 12-6 a week ago.

Stoneham won the toss to get the game under way and after Jim Mumma kicked off the Lynch line held its own until two minutes before the end of the first half. Lynch contained Stoneham's "inside" plays along with the passing game but found a week point in Lynch's defense when Stoneham found it paying off to run their sweeps. Having success in this phase of the game Stoneham finally found an opening two minutes before the end of the first half when it swept their left end with the runner going 30 yards for the first tally. The rush for points after failed.

Lynch threatened after the kickoff but time ran out in the first half when it had the ball on the Stoneham 35 and a pass failed.

Stoneham kicked to Lynch to start the third period when Lynch found themselves on a march that ended on Stoneham's 12 yard line as a result of a Monterisi fumble. Holding Stoneham in the next series, the home team punted and Lynch started on another march until a pass interception turned the tables. With the ball on Lynch's 40 yard line, Stoneham duplicated its first touchdown when it swept left end for its second T.D. to go ahead 12-0.

Lynch got the kickoff and after a reverse from Collins to Mumma to return to the Stoneham 35, Collins called upon Russo, Bennett, and Mumma to carry to the Stoneham 8 when Collins carried on a "sneak" to reach pay dirt. Russo rushed for the extra point which failed and Lynch trails 12-6.

The final period saw an exchange of punts when both units seemed to be stalled although Lynch's passing offense usually fell short by inches.

Wtih one win and two losses in the records, Lynch is now aiming and preparing to get back on the victory trail against Concord who usually puts together a strong unit. Hope to see you at the game at the Lynch School field on Friday afternoon (tomorrow).

Public skating sessions will be scheduled between 9 a.m. and 12 noon, 2 p.m. to 5 p.m., and 7 p.m. to 10 p.m. On Saturdays, Sundays, holidays and during school vacation periods, the rinks will be open from 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., with other afternoon and evening hours unaffected.

There will be a fifty cent admission charge for those over 18 years of age at all skating sessions; a ten cent admission charge for those 18 and under at the following skating sessions.

A. Morning and afternoon sessions Monday through Friday.

B. Morning sessions on Saturdays, Sundays and holidays.

There will be a twenty-five cent admission charge for those 18 and younger at all evening sessions and Saturday, Sunday and holiday afternoon sessions.

James Whalen, supervisor of recreation for the MDC, is anticipating the rinks' most successful season.

Between 1903 and 1918, the Boston Red Sox finished first six times, second three times, and third twice.

1963 Hunting Seasons Reminder

With the hunting season just around the corner, it seems a good idea to check the regulations again to avoid confusion as to what may be hunted and when.

The grouse and woodcock seasons opened on Thursday, October 10. Grouse may be hunted one-half hour before sunrise, but woodcock are not legal game until sunrise. In all cases where sunrise is the legal shooting hour each day, as with ducks at the Wildlife Management areas during the upland game season, consult your local newspaper for the actual time of sunrise.

The waterfowl season is scheduled to open tomorrow, October 18, at 1:00 p.m. Daylight Savings Time. This year the law allows a daily bag limit of three ducks. Of these, no more than two may be a mallard or black ducks in any combination, nor may more than one be a wood duck. A hunter could take two black ducks and a teal, for example, and be legal, or he might take a mallard, a black, and one wood duck. But, if he were to take two black ducks and one mallard, or vice versa, then he'd be breaking the law.

With the upland game season slated to open on Monday, October 21 (October is the actual date, but no Sunday hunting is allowed in Massachusetts), gunners are looking forward to some fine hunting. Grouse are in good numbers and condition, and prospects for pheasant hunting are promising. The Division of Fisheries and Games' pheasant stocking program is slated to shift into high gear on October 15, so your favorite covers will be hosting birds by the time the season opens.

NCAA Soccer Tournament

Tufts College will play host to the third annual NCAA Regional Soccer Tournament on Friday and Saturday, November 22-23.

Outstanding teams in the Small College Division of the NCAA's along with an at-large club, will be invited to participate. The tournament was held the last two years at Adelphi College, Garden City, New York.

Harry Arlanson, Tufts athletic director and head of the Regional Sports Committee, will serve as tournament chairman, while Tufts' head soccer coach, Al Malthaner, has been appointed director. Other committee members include Larry Briggs, University of Massachusetts, and Dana Getchell, Harvard University.

The tournament will get under way with semi-final rounds the morning and afternoon of November 22 and conclude Saturday afternoon, November 23. All games will be held in the Tufts Oval, which has a seating capacity of 6,000.

Arrangements will be made to enable high school and prep school teams in the area to attend the tournament at special rates on advance sale of tickets.

WHSR-FM Carries Game Saturday

WHSR-FM, the high school radio station at 91.9 megacycles in the FM band will feature an addition to regular programming this week, a broadcast of the football game between Winchester and Lexington. Mr. Thomas Morse, vice principal of Winchester High and veteran radio announcer, will furnish the main commentary for the game. Chuck Quinn and Mike Runci, two WHS students, will assist Mr. Morse. WHSR-FM will go on the air at 1:00 p.m. on Saturday with music and will switch to commentary at the commencement of the game.

S.O.I. Men

With five weeks already gone by Notre Dame still leads the pack after blanking Harvard 8-0 the last time out. The defeat moved Harvard from fifth to ninth and having a big share for the victors were Moose Bellino who is still carrying on at a fast clip with strings of 115-104,106, Dan Gattineri had 101-117-95 and Angie Amico finished up with 114-83-111 while the only 300 bowler for Harvard was Hokie Procopio who had 100-97-113.

Yale took Penn 6-2 to remain in second spot while the losers dropped one place to tenth. Hitting over the 300 mark for Yale were Capt. Richie Bucci 101-115-104 and Bill Fiore 92-112-103. No Penn bowler reached the magic figure although Paul Amico failed by a mere pin.

Third place is still held by Army after shutting out St. Mary's 8-0 who has moved to last place. Up to this match Moose Bellino (N.D.) held high single of 146 and in the match between Army and St. Mary's the record was broken twice. Army't Capt. Choppers Gangi hit for 137-149-96 while Capt. John Mangano ended with strings of 148-94-92. The 146 mark was tied in another game during the night and the two new marks were still bettered as told below in this column. Army had two others hitting over 300, Jack McIsaac hit 119-84-106 and Americo Fiore 88-97-117.

The 6-2 win over Holy Cross moved the winners to twelfth place while dropping the losers two notches to sixth. Maryland's Woozy Giacalone was the lone 300 hitter with 104-99-107 while Capt. Muskie Tofuri of H. C. did likewise with 91-146-87 and note that Muskie tied the previous high single in his second string.

Navy finally found its potential and took seven points from California. Navy climbed from eleventh to seventh while California dropped two notches to eighth. Navy's Capt. Richie Riga continued to zero in with comfortable strings of 126-117-112 but his teammate Frank Provinzano came through in fine fashion in his final string to hit the jackpot with "bonus money" with three successive strikes ending up with 154 to hold the record for a high single. However, Frank feels that with the form displayed by various bowlers in the league this 154 mark will definitely be broken. To try to keep face with Riga and Frank, California's Charlie Gangi and Nick Molea had good nights knocking them over for respective strings of 121-103-93 and 100-103-104.

A 6-2 win over Alabama jumped Bates from seventh to fifth spot while the defeated dropped to thirteenth. In this match Arka Amico was the only 300 roller with 85-127-98.

In the last match of the evening Georgetown won over Boston College by a 6-2 score. The winners leaped four places to fourth while the losers dropped one to eleventh. Four of Georgetown's bowlers went over the 300 figure and they were Joe Marrone 128-110-97, Joe Ciarcia 117-97-120, Tony Chefalo 112-109-102 and Pucky Perritano 92-111-107 while B. C. had Capt. Tony Saraco continue with good strings of 96-119-116 and Max LaCarubba 98-102-111.

S.O.I. Women

The fifth week of bowling at Strike Lanes started at 7 p.m. There was a great deal of noise, but somehow I could not make out what was causing it. Could it have been our replacement bowler Cynthia Esposito performing acrobatics while bowling. That sure was a neat fall Cynthia.

Not too much action score wise: Kools still top team. Nice going Kools! But watch out for next week and Ginger Maggio's team, Winstons. They have promised us a real good fight. Next week's score will tell. One more thing, Viceroys jumped from 7th place to 3rd place. Nice going to Cusi and her team.

K. of C.

Last Thursday at the Strike Lanes one of the most inept exhibitions of candlepin bowling ever seen was displayed by Charlie Allen. How any man as big as he is could throw 30 balls down the alley and succeed in knocking over only 53 pins is beyond anybody's understanding.

The total futility of his efforts reminded observers of his W. H. S. football days when he managed to play a whole season without making a tackle.

The Rams continue to surprise and have managed to open a good lead over their closest rivals. Bob Fiore maintains his league-leading average, but Joe Lynch is having real trouble keeping his name on the bottom of the list, too much competition.

DUPLICATE BRIDGE CLUB AWARD. David C. McLean, editor of the Winchester Star, presents a silver bowl award donated by the Star to duplicate bridge competition winners, Mrs. Donald Redpath of 27 Squire Road and Mrs. Walker Stewart of 10 Thornberry Road. Col. and Mrs. Harold Wolf of 5 Carriage Lane were not present during the award presentation at the Knights of Columbus Hall on Wednesday, October 9th.

Winchester Star editor David McLean and photographer Bill Ryerson dropped in at our October 9th session to participate in the presentation ceremonies of the Winchester Star Challenge Bowl to Alta Stewart, Donna Redpath, and Col. and Mrs. Harold Wolf, winners of the annual WDBC team of Four Championship held the week before.

With play commencing amid flashing bulbs, Section A settled down to an 11 table Mitchell with an average of 110. Mr. and Mrs. Charles Watson showed that they liked the limelight as they surged ahead to lead both fields with a score of 133. The order of finish of the leading pairs was:

North - South
Mr. and Mrs. Charles Watson	133
Roger Locke and Thomas Wilder	122
Mr. and Mrs. Paul Lorris	120
Mr. and Mrs. Chandler Symmes	115½
Peg Sullivan and Fran Kachemov	112½
East - West
Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Johnson	131½
Dr. and Mrs. Robert Blackler	130
Mr. and Mrs. Phillip Cade	118
Fred Gove and Henry Morgan	117½
Kay McConnell and Jo Dingwell	115½
Miggs Root and Greta Hawley	112

Section B played 21 boards for an average of 63, with the Smith's splitting up for the evening and sharing top honors in both directions.

North - South
Lolly Smith and Alta Stewart	69½
Mr. and Mrs. William Wheelock	66½
Ann Dean and Ed Sullivan	65
Blair Hawley and Darrell Root	64½
Steve Haseltine and Alan Friot	64½
Mr. and Mrs. Chetseer Davis, Jr.	63½
East - West
Richard Smith and Clarence Woodward	78½
James Bradley and Alvin Swonger	76
Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Bell	74
Barbara Shea and Margaret Jackson	67½

A meeting of the board of advisors of the club was held recently at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Chandler Symmes to assist Chairman Rae Grove and her committee make final preparations for the big ACBL nal arrangements for the big AS nal preparations for the big ACBL-sponsored charity tournament which our club will conduct here on Friday, November 22, for the benefit of the American Cancer Society and the United Cerebral Palsy Associations.

Couples in attendance at the meeting included Symmes, Root, Atkinson, Hawley and Watson, as well as Rae Grove, Lolly Smith, Gerry Lawrence, Fredna Perkins, Ralph Gartner and James Bradley. In an informal Howell played afterwards, the two Ralphs—Ralph Gartner and Ralph Atkinson—finished 1-2 in the "small but powerful" field.

Forthcoming dates to mark on your "bridge and social" calendar include Wednesday, October 30 (WDBC Halloween Party), and Wednesday, November 6 (WDBC Men's Pairs Championship for 1963). Long-range planners will of course also be looking ahead to the Open Pairs Championship scheduled for Wednesday, December 4th. All these are evening events held at the Knights of Columbus Hall and are open to Winchester residents and their guests.

Bidding

W	N	E	S
Pass	Pass	Pass	1 C
Pass	3 C	Pass	6 C
Pass	Pass	Pass

East leads the DA.

The skip bid by north indicating a maximum pass of a hand worth 11, 12 or 13 points added to south's revalued count of 23 totaled at least 33 points with a good shot at the small slam. Cue bidding aces or Blackwood might tip the enemy which suit to lead - a direct jump would put them to the guess - worth a try.

The lead of the DA, hardly the best lead, made the rest easy. Actually east continued with a low diamond when the DK dropped on the DA. North's J was covered by the DQ and ruffed by south. This set-up north's D10 for the discard of south's losing spade. One round drew the adverse trumps. A low heart was ruffed by north and the D10 was cashed as south discarded a spade and the SA got rid of south's last spade. A spade ruff by south and a heart ruff by dummy made the rest of south's hand good for the slam.

The slam was bid and made by two souths for 920 scores, 5C doubled and 6 made scored 650, 3NT bid making 4 scored 430, 5C bid making 6 scored 420, 5C bid and made and 3NT bid and made scored 400 to share the bottom.

Actually, any lead except a diamond, puts south to the guess on getting rid of the DQ to set up his D10 for the spade discard. The lead of the HQ by east wouldn't do any harm and might let west get a ruff.

Editor's Note: We can't resist giving the bidding on this one at our table. After three passes, it went 1D, by S, 1S by N, 3NT by S, making four but losing to the slam bidders whose defense failed to find the killer spade opening.

Selectmen Pass New Rules & Regulations For Fire Department

The Board of Selectmen at its Monday night meeting in the Town Hall unanimously voted to approve the newly revised manual of rules and regulations for the government of the Winchester Fire Department. The local firefighters' manual had not been revised for 18 years, and was necessitated by the many changes in working conditions and operating procedures since 1945.

The Selectmen had recognized the need for revising the Fire Department's rules and regulations manual for some time, and had directed the late Chief James Callahan to begin the revision just before his sudden death last April. When Chief Frank Amico was appointed by the board in May, the Selectmen directed him to completely revise the manual.

Chief Amico worked on the rules and regulations throughout the summer, and gave copies of the old manual to his captains, Peter L. Galuffo and Michael M. Connolly, for additional recommendations on changes.

After meeting with the Selectmen on two occasions to go over some of the changes, Chief Amico turned the manual over to Vincent Clarke, town counsel, for legal review. The few alterations were made at Monday night's meeting, and the new book aproved.

Although many of the changes in the operating rules and regulations handbook were of minor significance or dealt with small items or issues, there nevertheless were several major reasons why the manual needed updating.

When the March 14 session of the 1963 Town Meeting unanimously voted to reduce the length of the firefighters' work week from 56 to 48 hours as of October 6th, many new scheduling, sick leave, and vacation leave procedures had to be prepared and set down in clear terms...for the old manual's coverage on these matters not only became out of date, but also would confuse members of the department when conflict in procedure might arise as to which rules may be in effect.

The preamble to the new set of governing principles explicitly repeals all the rules and regulations established in 1945, and all amendments to them since that time, so there will be no confusion as to exactly what governing procedures are in effect.

WHS BAND MARCHES IN NEW UNIFORMS. The high school band's heavy, faded, and old-fashioned military-type uniforms were replaced this year with light, colorful, and modern sporty-type uniforms. The Friends of the WHS Band and Orchestra, which runs athletic game concessions to support the school group, along with the Rotary Club, En Ka Society, and Nickerson Fund of the School Committee, raised the $3000 for the attractive and impressive new uniforms.

Off-Duty Police Officer Arrests Youth Suspect In Automobile Larceny

A Winchester Police Department patrolman who had finished his day's tour of duty and was relaxing at his home late last Saturday evening was suddenly called into action when he was alerted that four youths were attempting to steal an automobile near his home on Sylvester Avenue. Officer Donald E. Pigott raced from his home and chased and arrested one of the suspects, a 17-year-old Woburn youth.

The youth appeared in Woburn District Court, Criminal Sessions, before Judge Alfred W. Sartorelli on Monday morning, and the case was continued for two weeks. The judge offered the youth a choice of entering the armed services or being sentenced for the attempted larceny of an automobile, an occasional court disposition in first offenses of this nature.

The incident occurred at about 10:30 on Saturday night. Mrs. Pigott informed her husband that several youths were loitering near their car parked in front of their home at 44 Sylvester Avenue. Officer Pigott observed the youths for a short time, and saw them open the door of a car parked behind his and belonging to a neighbor, Elmer Fuller of 46 Sylvester Avenue.

As the car door was opened the inside light flashed on, and Officer Pigott heard his neighbor yell as he was dashing from his house toward the youths. Three of the youths scattered and ran, but the one that had entered the car and was lying across the front seat and trying to start the automobile got a late start. Officer Pigott chased him about 100 yards before catching and arresting him in front of 111 Middlesex Street.

Officer Pigott took the youth back to his house and had his wife call Sgt. Daniel Reardon, who was on desk duty at the station. Sgt. Andrew Crawford and Officer John Frongillo went to the Pigott home to pick up the arrested youth.

Meanwhile, William Nash, juvenile officer, has been following up on the case to see who the other juveniles involved in the attempted larceny were. Police believe that two of the juveniles may have been from Winchester, and the other from Woburn.

J. H. Winn Company Builds New Addition

J. H. Winn, Inc., at 620 Washington Street, manufacturers of dial hands and precision stampings and assemblies, announced this week that it is currently expanding its physical plant facilities by about 40 per cent in order to keep pace with its increased production requirements.

Construction of a new two-story addition, which will extend 40 feet on the Washington Street frontage in a northerly direction (toward the Woburn line), and which will be built back the entire 125-foot depth of the present building, was begun last Friday with the digging of the foundation by Walter Ritchie Construction Company of Malden, the general contractor.

The company also plans to add a second-story to the rear of the existing building, and expects to have the construction completed on or about April 30th, 1964. Jerome Bailey Foster of 9 Ainsworth Road is the architect for the additions.

One company official stated that possibly as many as 30 or 40 more employees may be hired upon completion of the additions if business conditions at that time warrant. The Winn Company is at present the largest industrial employer in Winchester, employing approximately 200 persons from the immediate area.

The Winn Company was founded in 1868 in Waltham by James H. Winn and Bardwell A. Goodell, and moved to its present site about 1870, where there have been many successive additions to the plant facilities. This particular site was chosen for the water power avail-

NET&T Company Celebrates 80th Year, 71 Locally

The New England Telephone and Telegraph Company celebrated its 80th year of operation on Saturday, October 19. Its Winchester office, with the old magneto crank phones, was opened on Main Street 71 years ago on September 30, 1892.

The 14,400 telephones that the company served in its first year has grown to more than 3.7 million for 2.4 million customers, including the present 11,413 telephones that serve 6,431 Winchester subscribers.

The telephone company has also grown to be one of the largest of New England taxpayers as well as one of the largest employers in each of the five states it serves. There are 29 regular employees in Winchester among the statistical 35,300 that the company employs

Negro Viewpoint Is Fair Housing Discussion Topic

"There is no definite 'Negro' point of view on a given subject any more than there is a definite 'Winchester' point of view on a given subject. Negroes are individuals with individual points of view, and this is true of all Americans," according to Mrs. Muriel Snowden, associate director of Freedom House, Roxbury's civic and cultural center.

In an informal conversation with her friend and colleague, Mrs. Frances Perkins, director of the Experimental Nursery School at Brandeis University, the conversation constituted the program of the Winchester Fair Housing Association on the evening of October 15, in Hadley Hall at the Church of the Epiphany. At the invitation of the two participants, members of the association joined in the conversation and it soon developed into a general discussion with Mrs. Snowden and Mrs. Perkins acting as leaders.

Mrs. Snowden complimented the Winchester group on its existence, saying that the mere fact that there is a Winchester Fair Housing Association means that the town is welcoming. She said that suburban towns, all too often, are made up of people of like backgrounds. The children in such towns grow up having almost no contact with children whose culture or religion is different from their own. This has a narrowing effect, and, in Mrs. Snowden's words: "Frankly, it's a bore."

"Matador Ball" Waltz Evenings Scintillate

Two evenings of scintillating splendor were the talk of the town last weekend as the Friends of the Winchester Hospital presented the Matador Ball at the Winchester Town Hall on Friday and Saturday, October 18th and 19th.

The proceeds from Waltz Evening dances are always used as gifts toward the purchase of specialized equipment for the Hospital.

The exquisite beauty of an old Spanish courtyard completely enveloped the Town Hall. The authenticity of the decorations was remarkable, from the grill work balconies showering cascades of colorful blossoms to the charming fountain garden arranged so artistically with flowering plants. Beautiful fans and gay mandolins graced the walls and pillars. From the ceiling hung true replicas of Spanish lanterns constructed with meticulous detail. But the magnificence of the victorious Matador took precedence over all, commanding attention from every corner of the hall and electrifying the atmosphere with his presence.

The tables were covered with silver and placed on each was a printed placard with the names of hosts and hostesses, delightfully decorated with fans and roses. Each of the many services was handled with expert competence which blended perfectly to give the guests an evening of joy and pleasure.

Unusually good weather added another note of contentment. As guests entered the hall they were greeted by young flower girls

Local Petitions To Cut Council's Power Circulate

"Operation Doorbell" is in its second week in Winchester, and the initiative petition to reduce the statutory powers of the Governor's Executive Council and leave it with only its constitutional powers gains momentum daily.

Approximately 80 interested Winchester citizens are carrying petitions to the homes of registered voters to secure three or four thousand signatures. Canvassing the town on a house-to-house basis are 57 members of the local chapter of the League of Women Voters, 21 members of the Junior Chamber of Commerce, and several non-affiliated independent petitioners.

The initiative petition, upon the securing of 63,000 signatures, will introduce into the Legislature a bill repealing most of the statutory powers of the Executive Council.

Growth Gains In Public Usage Of MTC Experiment

The public, by its high usage of the vastly improved B. and M. service, has continued to confound the experts. The September results substantiate what August showed, namely that the new commuter fares which became effective August 1st, have not been accompanied with a decline in patronage, rather some new highs have been registered on particular lines.

Simultaneously, the new and lower off peak fares which went into effect August 1st, have also attracted many new riders and produced the most dramatic growth figures since the experiment began in January 1963. The off peak percentage gain in August was 65.1 percent over August 1962. This is 6 percent higher than in any of eight months since the experiment began.

Based on September results, better than 2000 automobiles were taken off the road during the peak period each day. Dr. Maloney, executive director of the Massachusetts Transportation Commission, stated, "Our aim with this phase of the experiment is to test the practicability of putting more of the cost of the superior service on the primary user; namely, the rush hour patron and less on the off peak train user. As demand is greatest during the rush hours so are the costs—while during non-rush hours demand is light as is the cost.

"The September figures, high as they are, would have set even new records but there were two and one-half fewer working days during

Tremors in Earth Shake Winchester; No Damage Noted

The Winchester Police Department was deluged with telephone calls shortly after 11:30 on Wednesday morning, October 16th, reporting a series of sharp earth tremors in northern parts of town.

Many residents passed the earth tremors off as being a sonic boom from a plane breaking the sound barrier. Others thought it may have been some heavy blasting by the Monsanto Research Corporation at the Winchester Crushed Stone property off Garfield Avenue, just across the Winchester line in Woburn, which had been the cause of many complaints in June when experiments there caused some houses in town to shake.

However, officials at the Weston Observatory and the M.I.T. seismograph station stated that the tremor was definitely a slight earthquake.

The tremors were felt throughout eastern Massachusetts and southern New Hampshire, although first reports indicated that the locus of the center of the earth movement which created the disturbance was in the Woburn, Lexington and Reading areas.

Furry Fells Dinner Guests Entertain Human Hosts

Who says you can't invite absolutely wild guests to a dinner party at your home?

Mr. and Mrs. George French of 236 Mystic Valley Parkway do just that, and not just occasionally, but every night of the week; and what's more, they enjoy their wild friends!

The wild guests—a bunch of raccoons—not only enjoy the free dinner, they also put on practically a circus over the feeding.

A little after six o'clock, Mr. French gets dressed to meet his dinner guests: he puts on an old pair of trousers, an old sweater and a hat. As dusk approaches, he snaps on the spotlight from the back door, and sits down to await his wild friends.

Shortly, one lone raccoon comes out of the Fells, reconnoiters, and goes back into the woods. Then in a little while, about a dozen or more raccoons edge out of the foliage into the French's back yard, and meander up to the back porch where some bread crumbs have been thrown by the French's.

Mr. French, sitting on a chair in the pantry, prepares some more goodies: bread, buns, cereal, and marshmallows for dessert.

One raccoon, named "The Preacher" by the French's because he always gets up on his hind legs as though he is delivering a grace before entering the pantry to begin his meal, goes through his usual bit as the raccoons all line up (en masse as a group) for some chow at Mr. French's feet.

"Nosey" then gets up on Mr. French's lap and pokes his nose around in Mr. French's pockets looking for any food that might be playfully hidden. And "Susie" will take a piece of food, go out and down the stairs, and wash the food in a bowl of water near the porch before eating it; then repeats herself over and over again with each new tidbit.

The whole dinner lasts from first to last course about one-half to three-quarters of an hour. And according to Mr. French, he has never been bitten by his wild friends, not even when they scramble and fight a little over the marshmallow dessert, which they love so much and eagerly await each night.

"They've been coming every night since early July," Mr. French says, "and they even go right into the kitchen sometimes." But just how long Mr. French will be willing to put up with the wild antics of his wild dinner guests is something else again. As time goes on, more and more guests arrive—many more than were originally invited—and it may get to be an expensive social event.

75 Attend Ribbon Cutting Ceremony Of Aux. Fire Dept.

Approximately 75 local dignitaries and interested citizens attended the Auxiliary Fire Department's open house and ribbon-cutting ceremony at the volunteer unit's new headquarters in the Water Department's old pumping house station at 14 Reservoir Street last Saturday from 2:30 to 5 p.m.

At 2:30 Selectman John Lyman officially cut the ribbon which opened the new Auxiliary headquarters. Also present were Theodore Boecker, director of the local Civil Defense organization, under which the Auxiliary functions; the chief of the Lexington Auxiliary Fire Department; a representative of the Stoneham Fire Department; Robert Armstrong, chairman of the Finance Committee; Ernest L. Weil, chief of the Auxiliary Police Department; Olcott Hooper, chairman of the Water and Sewer Board; and others.

The ribbon-cutting was followed by coffee and doughnut refreshments and a tour of the new headquarters conducted by members of the Auxiliary firefighter unit.

Local Democratic Group Attend JFK $100-Plate Dinner

Quite a few Winchester residents were among the more than 7000 persons who attended the $100 a plate dinner given in honor of President F. Kennedy at the Commonwealth Armory in Boston on Saturday evening.

According to reports, those included in the Winchester contingent were Mr. and Mrs. William E. McDonald of 10 Hill Street, Mr. and Mrs. James A. Cullen of 82 Bacon Street, Thomas Gilgun of 75 Woodside Road, James Costello of 109 Wendell Street, John J. Costello of 3 Mason Street, J. Joseph Maloney of 6 Lincolnshire Way, and Harry A. McGrath of 16 Rangeley Ridge.

Harry McGrath had one of the added thrills of the evening when the President stopped by his table and they reminisced about JFK's earliest business ventures...an episode in Jack's very early youth when he aproached Mr. McGrath in the latter's downtown Boston office to sell him a magazine subscription (result: needless to say, success). Mr. McGrath also spoke with House Speaker John McCormack.

Local Republican Group Go to Sen. Goldwater Dinner

Many local residents were among the several thousand persons who attended the $100 a plate dinner sponsored by the Republican Finance Committee for aspiring presidential candidate Senator Barry M. Goldwater at the Commonwealth Armory in Boston on Wednesday, October 16th.

Among those reportedly present at the press heralded "invasion of Kennedy's backyard" dinner and speaking engagement by the conservative Arizona Republican were Rep. Harrison Chadwick, Mr. and Mrs. John A. Volpe, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Easton, Mr. and Mrs. Jack A. Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Greer, Mr. and Mrs. Hazen Ayer, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Rand, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Winship, Mr. and Mrs. James Blackham, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Greer, Mr. and Mrs. James Tumulty, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Vangell, Dr. and Mrs. William D. Old Winchester Photos Recall Local Memories

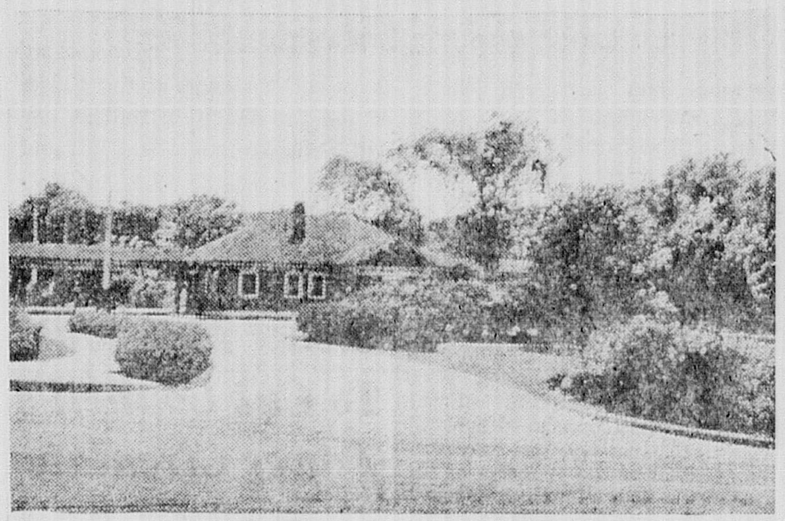
Above is a picture of the Aberjona River, not as it is now, with its reed-grown rip-rap banks, but as it was in the "good old days" when the Aberjona was a small meandering stream flowing between banks lined with willows, aldars, birch and cat-o-nine tails beside the Mystic Valley Parkway before the Parkway was moved to the westward to make room for the new Manchester Field.

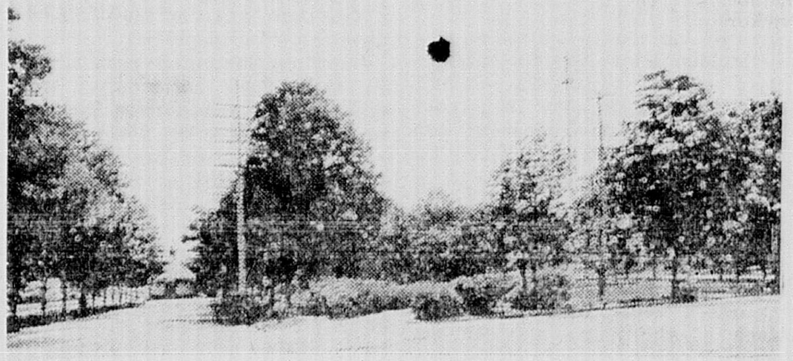
In the days when this picture was taken the Aberjona was very picturesque, and on Saturday afternoons a very busy place.

In those days there were band concerts given by the M.D.C. on Saturday afternoon, at the old bandstand on the playground and the canoe-crowd from the Winchester Boat Club used to take advantage of the opportunity to get in a spot of paddling and also listen to the music.

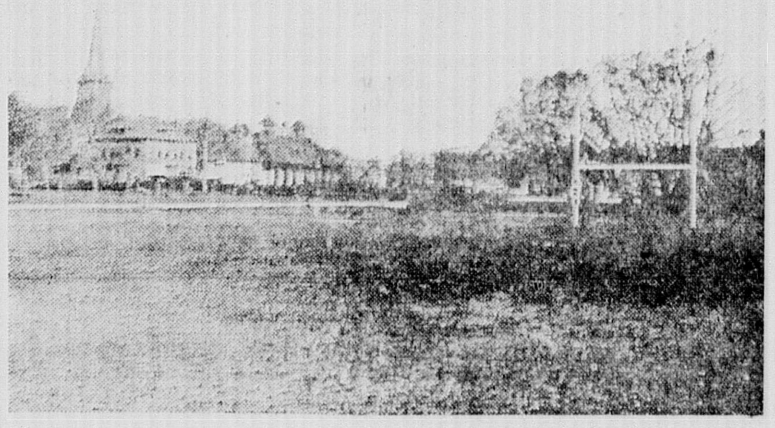
Each Saturday canoes came up the river and digging in around the old band-stand, enjoyed the music until intermission, when it was the custom to paddle further up to the level stretch of land seen in the middle background and drag their boats up on shore while the owners and their best girls went up to Eamises drugstore for an ice cream soda or to Jimmy Gray's at the railroad tracks in the center. This little chore accomplished, the canoists embarked again for the remainder of the concert, after which they paddled down river along the lower reaches at Ginn Field and under the old granite and iron bridge past the Shu Shu Gah boathouse and Wedgemere Station and into Mystic Lake at the old iron bridge. Who is there to say those were not "good old days", or that the boys did not benefit physically from their long paddle from the Boat Club up river. Course, it's much easier to drive the family car around now, but it might not be as much fun. Or might it?



Above is seen Wedgemere Station of the Boston and Maine Railroad as it was before the trains went through town overhead. So many Boston & Maine men lived in Winchester that the railroad provided them with a station, only one-third of a mile from Winchester Station. The station was attractive in design and in the days of "Dave" Coach, the B. & M. gardener, attractively landscaped. Certainly the station bore little resemblence to today's structure. The late Ralph Cardinal was Station Agent and operator at the Station for well over 50 years.

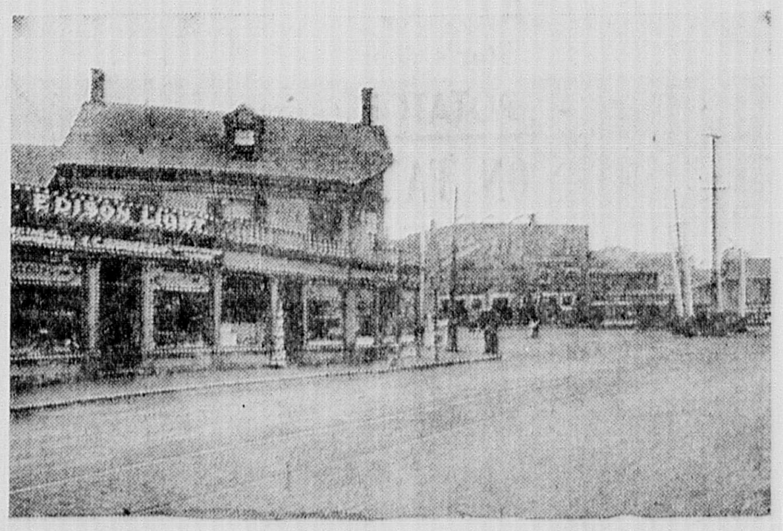


This is a shot of the maples that lined old Waterfield Road on the way to Winchester Station of the Boston and Maine Railroad. The station shows at the very end of the street. Also shown in the picture is the old Common with its wooden Flagpole. There is little resemblance between this old shot of the station and the new station and overhead tracks. Station Agent and operator was Frank McGrath.



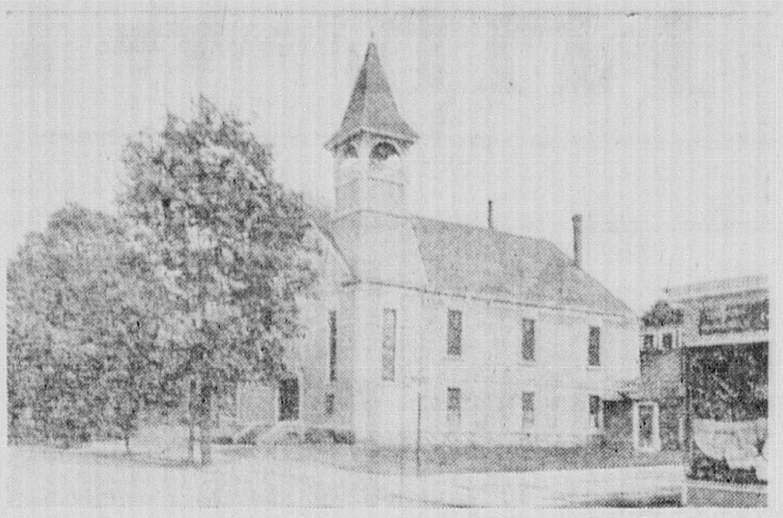
This is a picture of old Manchester Field after the place was beautified and laid out by the late Forrest C. Manchester. On the field was a one-third mile track of gravel and clay with posts set in the turf along the straight-away so that the field could be roped off on that side. It was always the custom to rope off the field for football and baseball games, and for track meets.

In the background can be seen the old wooden Winchester Station with its two cupulos, and Waterfield Building before the days of the fire that destroyed the third story. Brooding over the entire scene is the tower of the First Congregational Church, with its community clocks that have guided so many people to the trains.



This picture of the old center shows the approach to the old grade crossing in the square with the manually-operated gates. At the corner of the business block beside the tracks was the paper store of McLean and Bridges. "Billy" McLean later bought out Bridges and moved his store to Thompson Street, where it still stands! Preceding them at this location was Jimmy Gray's Candy and Ice Cream store.

Moving along there is the Edison Light store and the electrical contracting business of Mr. Edmund C. Sanderson, later for many years chairman of the Water and Sewer Board. Between the paper store and the Edison Light was Ben Mathews' barber shop, where a haircut cost you a quarter and a shave (yes, they shaved in those days), 10c. At the corner of Main Street and Thompson Street, not shown in the photograph, was Holland's Fish Market, with its sign, "If It Swims, We Have It!" In the background it the drug store of Young and Brown and the old school building about which there has been so much controversy in the Star of late. Tracks of the old Woburn-to-Medford trolleys are on Main Street, and a ride to Woburn in those days cost a nickel.



This illustration shows the old First Baptist Church when it stood at the corner of Mt. Vernon and Washington Streets on the site of the fine new church built in 1928. Across the street from the church is the old Wadleigh School building, recently torn down. "Texas Charlie" Swett, Arthur P. Briggs and Joseph Hefflon were some of the masters who held the high, low and middle justice in the school in the "good old days."

Polymnia Choral Concert Nov. 24

The Polymina Choral Society of Wakefield is well under way for this year with rehearsals every Wednesday evening at 7:45 p.m. at the Atwell Junior High, there.

The first concert will be held in the Melrose Memorial Hall on Sunday, November 24, at 4:00 p.m., when the program will consist of the music of Bach, R. Vaughan Williams, Randall Thompson, and Alex Borodin. This group of about sixty voices is under the direction of Keith Phinney.

Dr. Bunting Tells Educational Ideas

Dr. Mary I Bunting, president of Radcliffe College, presented a very thought-provoking picture of education as it is and as it could be in the future, to a large audience at the opening meeting of the College Club held October 14 at Crawford Memorial Church.

Dr. Bunting feels that as knowledge increases, it becomes necessary for our educational system not only to recognize the increase but also to make adjustments and changes which will help channel the learning of the students today.

This noted educator feels that at a very early age children should be encouraged to think in terms of the work they might follow. Records seem to indicate that students with a goal in mind do better work, and stay with it better. Parents, teachers, friends and neighbors can help in this matter. It can be helpful if it is made possible for the student to meet and talk with persons engaged in the type of work he is considering.

Preceding the lecture a business meeting under the direction of Mrs. James Hollinshead was held during which this year's program for the College Club was outlined to those present. Coffee was served to members and guests.

International Fair Coming To Town on Nov. 6

With timely and clever motifs of all countries and gay, authentic costumes as background, the United Nations' Festival will open on November 6 and 7 in the Parish House, First Congregational Church. The portals of this U.N. Festival, the annual church fair, open wide on Wednesday evening, with dessert and coffee and a concert of folk music; booths open officially at 8 o'clock.

On Thursday, all booths open at 10 in the morning until 5 p.m. A coffee bar at Chidley Fireside, delicious luncheon at noon, and an exciting tea and program of "Costumes Internationale" at 3 and at 4 o'clock will round out the unusual bazaar day. "Tea at the United Nations" and the showing of rare foreign costumes will be an event few will wish to miss, and Mrs. Jenness Eugley is chairman of the program.

For those who feel "there is nothing new in fairs," the Festival has an "Ambassador's Table," headed by Mr. Alfred Higgins, with a staff of ambassadors helping him to sell things for men by men! Copper craft, hobbies, decorations, white elephants, aprons, a fabulous grandmothers' corner, doll clothes, flowers, paper goods, jewelry, knitted goods, bakery, candy, and a pantry shelf of real delicacies—a separate Fair just for children, with luncheon and booths—the list of delights in store for the Festival visitors is endless!

Mrs. Robert F. Hudson and Mrs. Howard L. Irwin are chairmen of the Fair.

Weymouth Marine Air Reserves Will Take Enlistments

Enlistments in the Marine Air Reserve six month program have just been opened for November and December, according to the Marine Air Reserve Training Detachment at the South Weymouth Naval Air Station.

Until a recently authorized increase in strength, the Weymouth Detachment was allowed to enlist only 5 six-year obligors a month. At present it may enlist as many men in this category as are able to meet the requirements.

Eligible are single men between the ages of 17 and 26 who have not received their induction notice. Requirements for enlistment into the Marine Air Reserve are the same as for the Regualr Marine Corps.

The first six months of obligated service is spent on active duty. After completing recruit training at Parris Island, South Carolina, the reservist attends the Aviation Fundamentals School at the Jacksonville, Florida, Naval Air Station then he completes his remaining service as a member of a Marine Air Reserve Squadron at the South Weymouth Naval Station where three squadrons are presently training. They are VMA-322, a jet attack squadron, HMM-771, a helicopter transport squadron and MACS-21, a Marine Air Control Squadron. Information may be obtained by writing the Marine Air Reserve Training Detachment, U. S. Naval Air Station, South Weymouth, or by calling Edgewater 5-5600, extension 236.

Up To The Minute Reviews Close Season For 'Mornings'

Subscribers and guests who made up the capacity audience which gathered in Hadley Hall last Thursday morning to hear Dr. Mary Agnella Gunn speak on "From Boston to Broadway" were well rewarded. Dr. Gunn, professor of English education in the Graduate School of Boston University, is a person of exceptional charm who presented her subject with great enthusiasm.

Dr. Gunn commented briefly on the regrettable commercialism which is cramping creative writing and production in the theatre and pointed out the discouraging financial losses of six to eight million dollars on Broadway in the past three years. She spoke of the best plays of the season, giving more than passing attention to "A Man for All Seasons." And speaking of the comedies, Dr. Gunn felt that in some cases the actors are better than their material, as, for instance, in "Never Too Late." The same, she said, may be said for "The Way to Love," a new comedy starring Cyril Ritchard and Claudette Colbert.

Among the musicals, Dr. Gunn spoke of "Stop the World," clever with a fresh approach; "Oliver," with its delightful group of boys; "Tovarich," in which, to her mind, Vivian Leigh makes the play; and "Jennie," to which Mary Martin brings her great qualities of warmth and enthusiasm.

In answer to a question concerning the controversial play "Who's Afraid of Virginia Wolff," Dr. Gunn called it "an unpleasant, vulgar play, but one which nevertheless hold its audience. It portrays a group of people absolutely without values," she said, and perhaps by contrast demonstrates the need for a belief in something beyond itself and greater than oneself.

This "Morning" series of lectures is presented each year by the Winchester Wellesley Club and the proceeds are shared by the Winchester Scholarship Foundation, the Wellesley College Development Fund and the Students' Aid Society. This year's series has been under the chairmanship of Mrs. Colin L. Wheeler with the following committee members assisting:

Mrs. Louis A. Zehner, Jr., and Mrs. Wayne E. Davis, tickets; Mrs. George Vrotsos, hall arrangements; Mrs. Austin T. Bunker and Mrs. Thomas M. Downes, decorations; Mrs. F. Milne Blanchard, publicity; Mrs. Ellis J. Green, president of the club, Mrs. Ralph T. Jope, Mrs. Richard Lindenfelser, Mrs. Alexis O. Thielens, Mrs. Richard W. Wyman, Mrs. Richard O. Jordan and Mrs. John Lerch, advisory.

Members of the committee assisting Mrs. Sweetser at the coffee hour were: Mrs. James Dorsey, Mrs. A. Lane McGovern and Mrs. Hobart W. Kramer; and pourers for the series have been Mrs. Richard W. Swanson, Mrs. Herbert H. Howell, Mrs. Ralph T. Jope, Mrs. Paul H. Howard, Mrs. Robert M. Stone and Mrs. F. Milne Blanchard.

Police Officer

for stealing a 1962 Buick sedan from Richard H. Downes of 85 High Street. The theft occurred at about 7:30 on Sunday night from in front of his house.

William Nash, juvenile officer, went to New York on Tuesday with the parents of the juvenile and the youth involved to bring them back, and the owner of the car went to retrieve the vehicle.

Again on Tuesday, sometime between 9 a.m. and 5:30 p.m., a car belonging to Ruthelna Ward of Wilmington, an employee at Town and Country, which was parked between the Library and Main Street on Mystic Valley Parkway, had a vent window forced — indicating someone had tried to enter the vehicle but had probably been scared off when another person approached.

Local police have been trying to catch some of the vandals and car thieves at loose around town who have been particularly active in recent months. During this past week, among other things, several incidents of bicycle thefts and the taking of a motor scooter were reported. A week ago, in one day, juveniles slashed the tops of three brand new convertibles and wrecked havoc on seven other cars parked near the Winchester and Wedgemere Railroad Stations. The bending of aerials, taking of hub caps, and forced entries into vehicles to either steal things left in the car or the car itself, have all been common weekly occurrences in Winchester for some time.

The police try to trace down persons responsible for the vandalisms and thefts, but there is so little to go on in most cases that investigations prove fruitless. Police say that the best help local citizens can offer in catching criminally intending individuals is to notify the department when any unusual occurrence or behavior is observed. This way, even though five or ten occurrences may turn out to be perfectly harmless checks, one may turn up with the arrest of an offender. Police note that frequently it is through seemingly ordinary telephone notices that they are able to make important arrests.

Toastmistresses Meeting in N. H.

Quimby, treasurer, took active parts in the first fall meeting of the International Toastmistress groups held last Saturday in Hampton, New Hampshire, which attracted members from all over the New England area.

Mrs. Papadinis presided over the meeting, Mrs. Quimby welcomed each new member and guest and arranged schedules.

The business of the day was followed by an educational program relating to the indoctrination of new members, keeping of files and duties of officers.

Waltz Eve

whose beauty was crowned by lace mantillas and flowers in their hair. In keeping with the Spanish decor, the sporting caballeros who courteously escorted parties to their tables and helped serve refreshments, wore Spanish hats and gayly colored cummerbunds. The girls offered beautiful corsages of red and white roses, and the ushers contributed an outstanding service.

Music for both nights was furnished by Ken Reeves and his orchestra, and provided the final touch of listening beauty for the evening's festivities.

The enterprising chairman of this year's Waltz Evening was Mrs. Robert S. Westwater, whose dynamic leadership was evident throughout the evening.

The traditional Waltz Contest was held each night with Edwin W. Nelson, Jr., as the master of ceremonies. On Friday, Richard Champagne, of the Champagne School of Dancing, served as one of the judges along with Mr. and Mrs. Roger Clapp, last year's first place Friday winners, and Dr. Frank Bates and Mrs. Anna Harwood, who replaced Mrs. Bates due to illness.

Mr. Champagne and the very graceful Mrs. Clapp were a delight to watch in a beautifully executed waltz exhibition.

Ron Greenwood, together with Miss Ellen Desmond and Edward Richards, all from the Curry School of Dance, were the judges on Saturday night.

Mrs. Leslie DeGroot, last year's first place Saturday winner, was unable to attend the ball, and was replaced by the charming Mrs. Frank Bates, who with Ron Greenwood was enthusiastically received in an enchanting performance of the waltz.

The first place winners on Friday were Dr. and Mrs. Richard Hillger. Top honors on Saturday went to Mr. and Mrs. John Russell Smith. Mrs. Hillger and Mrs. Smith each received silver bowls, appropriately engraved, which were donated both nights by Koko Boodakian & Sons, Inc. The ladies also received a bouquet of roses given by Forester's Flower Shop. Dr. Hillger and Mr. Smith were awarded with engraved silver key chains, again from Koko Boodakian & Sons, Inc. All engraving was done through the courtesy of Macefield Jewelers.

On Friday, the second place winners were Mr. and Mrs. Leo Roche, and on Saturday, Mr. and Mrs. Paul La Joie of Arlington. Each lady was presented with a fruit basket from Renton's Market; the men received Pendleton sweaters with the compliments of the Winchester National Bank.

The third place winners on Friday were Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Pywell, who shared honors on Saturday with Mr. and Mrs. George Billman. Mr. and Mrs. Pywell won a $10.00 gift certificate from Town and Country, Inc., and cognac from Sophie Bowman Real Estate. The Billmans were awarded an electric hot tray donated through Northern Floors, Inc., and cognac from McCormack's Apothecary.

The prizes were given by the lovely Mrs. Edwin W. Nelson.

Fair Housing

Mrs. Perkins said that a function of Fair Housing Associations is to build bridges from one town to another, thus helping different people of different backgrounds to become acquainted.

Mrs. Snowden asked how many people present had Negro friends, and a fairly large number of hands went up. But when she qualified the question to be: "How many of you have Negro friends with whom you can freely discuss the fact that they are Negro and you are white?" very few hands were raised. Both Mrs. Snowden and Mrs. Perkins were emphatic in saying that this subject should not be taboo, and that frank and open discussion of it would help pave the way to understanding.

Emmons Ellis, chairman of the Winchester Fair Housing Association, announced that members of the Association believed the time had come to give all residents of the Town an opportunity to demonstrate their belief in equality and justice by signing a good neighbor pledge. He said that the campaign for signatures would begin right away, and would continue until February 16, Brotherhood Sunday, at which time a list of those signing the pledge would be made public.

The pledge reads as follows:

"One of the basic ideals of our American democracy is that people of different races and religions be guaranteed equal rights including equal opportunities for housing. Our nation has been greatly enriched by the presence of a variety of backgrounds and cultures.

"Subscribing to these principles, I welcome newcomers to my neighborhood on their individual merits whatever their race, religion, or national origin."

Mr. Ellis said he hoped every citizen of the Town would give serious thought to the matter of signing the pledge.

Elks to Hold Halloween Party For Children

On Saturday evening, November 2, from 6:30-8:30, there will be a Halloween party at the Elks Home on Elmwood Avenue for children.

There will be candy, prizes, favors, games, and fun for all the kids. Francis Curtin, chairman of the Elks Youth Activities Committee, invites members to bring not only their own children, but also those of friends. Every child who shows up will be welcomed and will have a good time.

If last year's Elks Halloween party is any criterion, the kids will enjoy a rip-snortin' affair.

Bring trick or treat bags, kids.

Its major intent is to give the Governor authority to manage the executive branch by allowing him to appoint or remove his subordinates without the consent of the Council. The proposed bill will not affect the powers given to the Council in the State Constitution, e.g., the approval of all judicial appointments and consents to pardons. If the Legislature refuses to pass on the Act by May of 1964, 11,000 additional signatures will be collected and the matter placed on the ballot next fall for a popular referendum.

John Thompson, speaker of the House, in an address to a League of Women Voters conference last month, said: "The voter gets what he deserves." The voter now is able through the initiative petition, if it is successful in its purpose, to strengthen the chief executive's office and to pinpoint his responsibility in managing and administrating the state's business without hindrance from the Council—which now has to approve almost every appointment by the Governor (nearly 900), and which passes upon many executive functions.

Registered voters who have not yet been approached to sign the initiative petition, and who believe in its significance and aims, are invited to telephone Richard Brackett (PA 9-2444), or Mrs. James R. Willoughby (PA 9-5137).

Discovery Vital To Modern Farming, Industry

Pioneers heading West in covered wagons cursed the white dust. But Geologists, who later probed the Rocky Mountains for mineral wealth, hailed it as pulverized phosphate rock, natural source of phosphorus.

Today, phosphorus is a versatile chemical vital to farm and factory, the National Geographic Society says.

Phosphorus puts life into soil. As one of the three principal fertilizers, along with nitrogen and potash, it encourages root development of plants, increases resistance to disease, and hastens crop maturity.

It also is an important element in animal nutrition, affecting tooth and bone development.

Bread and Bullets

Phosphorus, in one form or another, goes into diverse industrial products: detergents, insecticides, soda pop, baking soda, drugs, cheese, vinegar, bread, glass, paper and porcelain.

The nonmetallic element helps soften water, preserve food, polish metal, refine sugar and dye clothes.

Phosphorus goes to war in smoke screens, tracer bullets and incendiary bombs.

The powers of phosphorus are paradoxical. It is essential to life, yet in pure form is poisonous. A chief ingredient of matches, it also goes into flameproofing materials. Although some forms are highly corrosive, others are used in lubricating oils and rustproofing compounds.

An alchemist in Hamburg, Germany, first discovered phosphorus by mistake in 1669. Hennig Brand was heating distilled urine in the hope that the residue would turn out to be the so-called philosopher's stone, the catalyst sought to turn lead into gold. Instead the experiment produced a substance that glowed in the dark—pure phosphorus.

Later, match companies in Europe learned to make phosphorus by burning bones from slaughterhouses and treating them with sulfuric acid.

Mysterious Fish Ponds

Nowadays, phosphorus is obtained in enormous quantities by mining and processing phosphate rock, a sedimentary formation of marine fossils.

Florida, the world's largest phosphorus producer, supplies a third of the world's needs—30 million tons a year.

Apart from a multimillion dollar payroll, Florida's phosphorus industry has provided surprising side effects. The old phosphate rock quarries have filled with water and turned into fishermen's paradises for bass, bream and perch. No one is sure how the original fish got in.

Substantial deposits of phosphate rock also lie in the western United States, North Africa, the Soviet Union, China, Peru, Australia, and some South Pacific islands.

In the face of the world's burgeoning population and the increased use of phosphorus in agriculture and industry, some geologists are worried. They fear that known phosphorus reserves will not last more than a thousand years.

Carl Sanford Nelson

Carl Sanford Nelson, who had made his home with his daughter Mrs. William (Phyllis) Leighton, at 15 Pilgrim Drive for the past three years, died Monday October 14, at his daughter's home, at the age of 72.

Mr. Nelson was the son of Charles A., and Anna L. (Blomquist) Nelson. He was born December 9, 1891, in Boston, and grew up in that city, graduating from Boston English High School and in 1922 from Northeastern University.

Mr. Nelson was an accountant, employed at the Bowdoin Square Garage for many years. He retired at the time the garage went out of business.

He was organist and choir director for years at the Calvary Methodist Church in Arlington and also was organist at the Chelsea Naval Hospital in the chapel there. The Auxiliary Fire Department: A Tribute To The Volunteers

Most community fire department's have an adjunct auxiliary unit composed of volunteers who contribute their time and efforts when needed for assistance at little or no cost to the towns. These auxiliary fire units are in many ways similar to the old-time fire departments that towns used to have: men who, upon hearing an alarm, would leave their jobs or whatever they were doing to go and put out the fire. With the advent of mechanized fire engines and the need for permanent regular firefighters on call at all times to prevent small fires from turning into large scale holocausts, the modern fire department evolved. However, there is still a place for the volunteer firefighter in almost every community to assist and reinforce the regulars at particularly bad fires when extra manpower and skill is neded to quell infernos.

Here in Winchester, we are fortunate in having an active and dynamic Auxilary Fire Department. They are a group that the community can point to with particular pride, for they offer not only their free services in emergencies, but dedicated talent (thanks, in part, to the Fire Department drillmaster's teaching them the fundamentals and innovations in firefighting tactics) with little compensation or recognition. They serve without pay, and receive but token insurance benefits if they are injured while fighting fires . . . and then only if they are under the explicit direction of a regular Fire Department officer.

When the representative members of the Town Meeting last April voted to authorize the Auxiliary Fire Department to use the old Water Department pumping station at 14 Reservoir Street for a headquarters to house their firefighting apparatus, and also appropriated $4,500 for renovations to the building for that purpose, it was like a vote of confidence by the town in the value it places in the services rendered by the unit.

There are about a dozen active men at present serving with the local Auxiliary unit, which averages as a group anywhere from 1000 to 1500 hours annually in time spent. During one notable weekend, when brush fires were rampant, they devoted 125 hours in helping the regular firefighters preserving town and private property. They answer almost every second alarm night or weekend call, and sometimes during the days if any of the members are around town. Sometimes they respond to mutual aid calls from other towns, such as during the Woburn gas scare a few months back. And generally, they spend one night a week in drill exercises, with the regulars seeing to it that they are kept up to date on all modern innovations in firefighting techniques and equipment.

The inexpensiveness of the Auxiliary's services is striking. They operate a fire truck which the members constructed themselves—starting from the bare chassis which they bought out of their own funds. The town gave the Auxiliary a big financial hand when it appropriated the $4500 for the renovation work on their new headquarters, but the men themselves did most of the work. And when they needed professional services from plumbers, electricians and others, they got local help on a cost basis because of the fine work the Auxiliary does for the Town.

But the real importance of the Auxiliary lies in its cooperation with the regular Fire Department. At large, smokey-heavy fires, because they have already been trained, Auxiliary volunteers can be pressed into service to relieve quickly and efficiently. It is for their unselfish volunteer services that we pay tribute to the men of the local Auxiliary Fire Department, and congratulate them on the fine job they did on renovating their new headquarters from which they can continue to give added service to the Town when they are needed.

Car Thievery And Vandalism: A Bigger Problem Than Most Realize

The fine action by one of our local police officers this week in capturing and arresting a youth in the act of attempting to steal an automobile focuses attention to the large number of auto thefts and vandalisms that occur not only across the nation and in this state, but also right here in Winchester.

During this same week, a car was stolen from Winchester and driven to New York before police caught up with the juvenile offenders. And, according to police records, stolen automobiles are occasionally dropped off here in Winchester. Many of these offenders are from out of town; some, however, live right here in town—especially some of those who are bending aerials, taking hubcaps, and breaking into and stealing items left in cars.

Governor Peabody and the Highway Safety Committee last week outlined a program to reduce the car theft rate, which contributes to accidents and increasing insurance costs. According to the Governor, 40 per cent of the boys in State institutions are there for stealing cars—either for "joy rides" or for definite larceny.

There is no doubt that car stealing and thievery of personal items from cars is made easy by unsuspecting and naive persons who leave cars unlocked or with the key either in the ignition or in plain view.

A Winchester policeman told of an incident recently where he observed a few boys gathering around a car and looking about suspiciously. When they saw the policeman watching, they left, and the policeman in walking up to the sporty car saw the key in the ignition switch . . . "all ready to go." He told the driver he was sure the boys were seriously thinking of taking the car (maybe even for just a few blocks for laughs), and the driver merely said: "Well I just didn't think about it."

Over 400,000 cars will be stolen by the end of this year, according to law enforcement figures, and about 4000 of these will be in the Boston area. To help curb violations, the Registrar of Motor Vehicles has notified the state's 351 city and town police departments about the seriousness of unlocked automobiles, and urged enforcement of a new fine of $25 that will be imposed upon negligent car owners. Although it is a good idea to ask motor vehicle owners to lock their cars, the question arises as to the constitutional legality of such a fine.

Car owners who don't want to risk the inconvenience and losses of theft, should remember to take tempting articles out of plain view inside cars, and to take the key out of the ignition switch and lock the car whenever they leave it. The problem can be solved by a mere flick of the switch and the lock, and the key is in the driver's hands!

A Thinking Society?

There has come across the Editor's desk this week a short release originating with the Adult Education Committee of the Ethical Society of Boston and dealing with, of all things, the fine art of thinking.

Coming in the wake and exhaust of the recent highly political visits to Boston of President John F. Kennedy and Senator Barry M. Goldwater, the notice is a refreshment. The society is sponsoring a series of philosophical discussions. Tomorrow evening the subject will be a film of Bertrand Russell discussing his views on Power and the Role of the Individual.

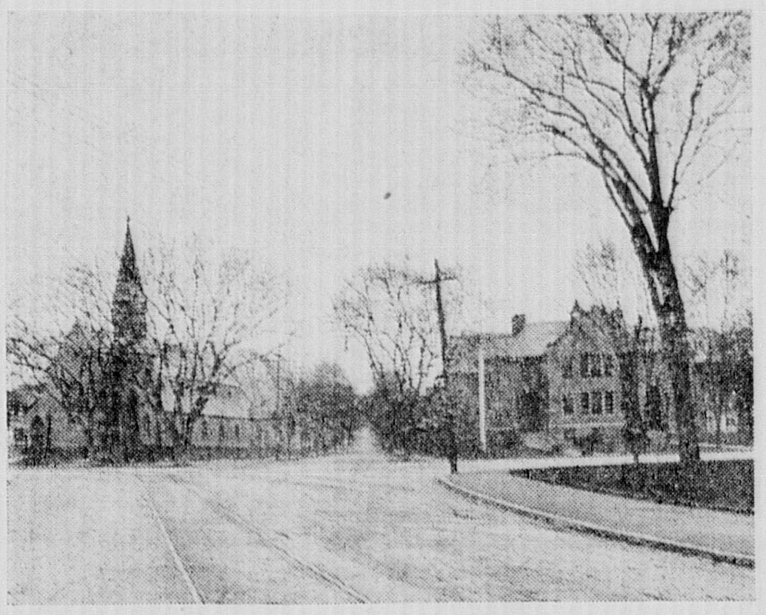
It is not that Bertrand Russell doesn't get out on the streets of England and practice his political philosophies vociferously with his 90-plus-year-old lungs, for he does. It is not that President Kennedy and Senator Goldwater do not set time aside just for thinking, for they do: each has authored books and is accustomed to define and defend his political philosophy on all levels of argument.

It is, however, good to note that there are still numbers of persons who will go out at night, even travel into Boston (the chairman of the sponsoring committee of the Ethical Society is a local resident) just to listen to and discuss purely philosophical ideas: to think about basic concepts and to expand epistemologically through deliberation and debate in terms of the world of reality and practical experience around us.

In the midst of a world where everyone's mind is turned and twisted desultorily every which way by the rapid sequence of events and constant introduction of new thoughts or angles on both new and old ideas, it behooves us all to set aside more time to set down and think on those issues and things which we feel are important and basic to our lives, and to give more ear to those few in our world culture who still make a working practice of this fine art of thinking.

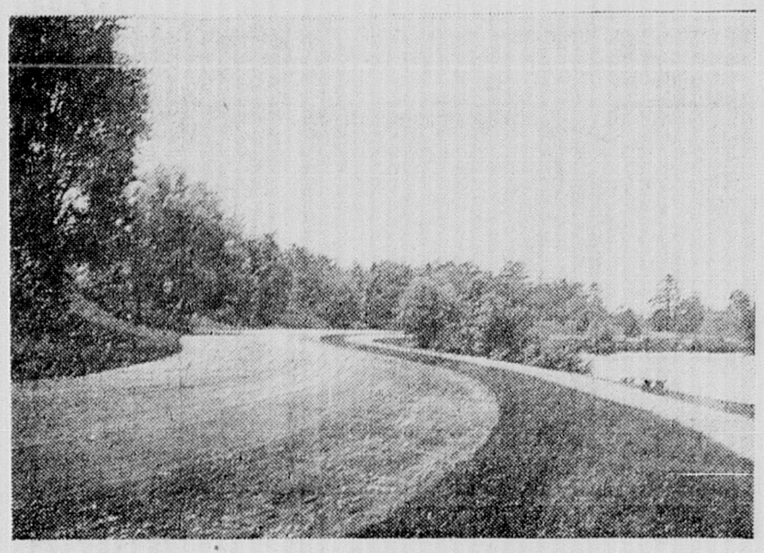
Old Winchester Photos Recall Local Memories

The pictures being shown here came to the Star from Henry B. Harris. They were included in a small brochure gotten out by the Edison Light Company, and were taken some time prior to 1909, when the brochure was published. We are publishing them because we feel that some of the old scenes about town will be of interest, not only to people who can remember them, but also to residents who known only about old Winchester what they have been told.

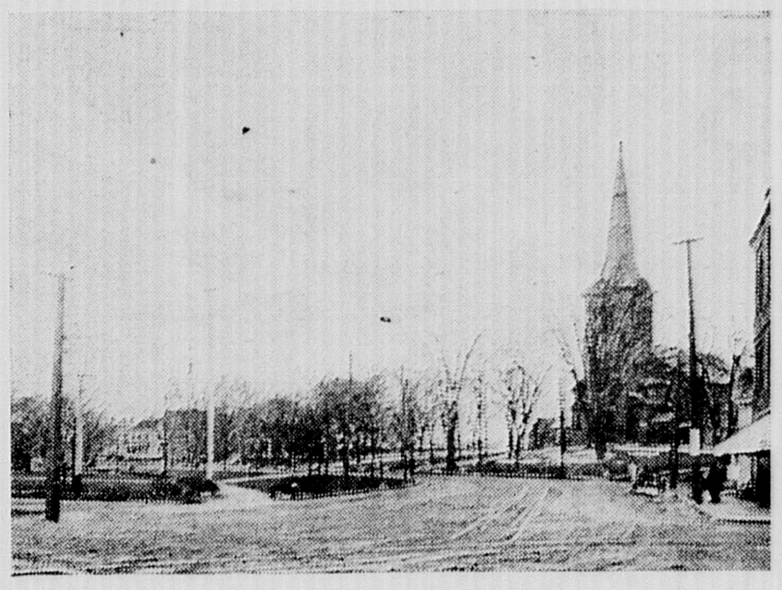


First picture shown is of the Unitarian Church and the old High School building, now the McCall Junior High School. The church is of course without the parish house built in recent years. In those days there was a drive that ran from Main Street to the Parkway which went under a porte-cochere at the back of the church, which replaced the older wooden structure which stood further up Main Street on the present high school lot and was destroyed by fire in the nineties. The church conducted a series of vesper services with splendid musicians in the early nineteen hundreds in the church auditorium.

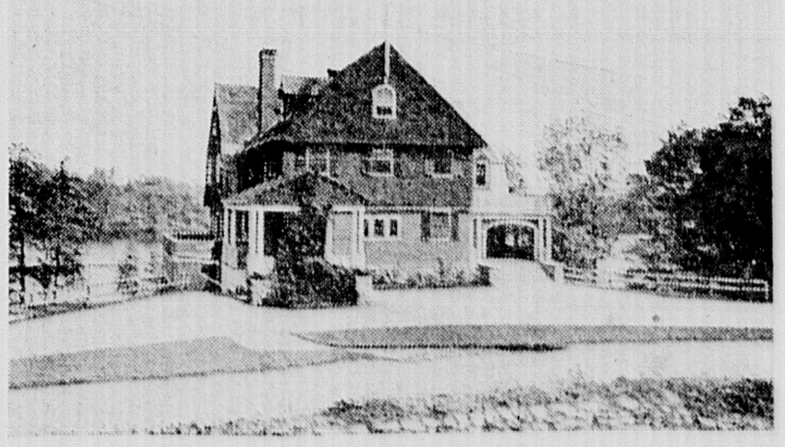
The old high school is shown from the rear without the addition of the classrooms, gymnasium and auditorium built at the school in the thirties. The war memorial had not been built in those days and the corner on which it was erected was one of the most beautiful in town. Behind the school may be seen the Blanchard, Kendall and Dotten properties which were taken when the school was enlarged.



The above illustration shows the parkway at the curve below Sandy Beach on the way to the Medford Boat Club. The road was not paved in those days and the dust that gathered on top was controlled by watering-carts that drove up and down the surface. The grass and shrubbery in the picture seems especially well cared for.



The church shown above is the old Methodist Church. It was not known as the Crawford Memorial Church until much later when the new church at Dix and Church Streets was built in 1923. The maples along Mt. Vernon Street, Pleasant Street it was then, are shown in the picture and seem especially fine. Rev. Vincent Ravi was pastor of the church when this picture was taken.



This is the old Calumet Club, a social club for men which flourished in the nineties and continued long after this era. At one time there were two good tennis courts on the club property and a Rocque court surrounded with curbing. Pleasantly situated on Wedge Pond, the old Calumet Club will bring back pleasant memories to many old timers who hated to see the building transformed into the Medical Center. Many will recall the old Calumet Club Show in which George Willey, Dr. J. Churchill Hindes, Howard Snelling, Arthur Huguley, Ruth Sleeper, Gladys Burt and Margaret Bradlee, to name only a few, participated years ago.

This old picture shows the center of Church Street facing west with the First Congregational Church on its knoll to the right, and the Common with the old wooden flagstaff. The trolly tracks are visable in the roadway, and the Star Office had not then been built. Stetson Hall also had not been built when this picture was taken.

Hayride and Barn Dance Planned By Methodist Youth

A hayride is scheduled for the Jr. High Fellowship of the Crawford Memorial Methodist Church and their friends this Friday, October 25, starting at the Bar-Le-Duc Ranch and Riding Academy in Stoneham at 4:30 p.m. A program is planned while on the hayride by Miss Jo Ann Gully, new youth director at the church, who will chaperone along with Mr. and Mrs. Richard Stiles.

The young people will have a box supper in the social hall at the church at approximately 6:15 p.m. A good old-fashioned square dance will follow. The whole affair is being sponsored by parents of the young people.

Mrs. Edmond A. Chandler has her favorite square dance caller coming from New Hampshire and will be in charge of the dance with assistance from Mr. and Mrs. Richard C. Stiles, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Armstrong and Mr. and Mrs. William Bradley. The decorating committee with Commander and Mrs. Winford Barrow in charge will carry out the theme of the evening with harvest decorating including cornstalks and a scarecrow. Other members helping with the details include Mrs. Robert E. Durfee, Mrs. Kenneth A. Donaghey, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Kramer and Commander and Mrs. Harry E. Haff, Jr., this year's counselors for the Jr. High Fellowship.

Details on the affair may be obtained by calling either PA 9-2870 or PA 9-5261. The next Jr. High Fellowship meeting is scheduled for November 3 from 6 to 6:30 p.m., at which time election of officers will be held.

And "How Do You Know It's Love?"

The Reverend Robert W. Little, minister of the First Congregational Church in Keene, New Hampshire, will ask the question, "How Do You Know It's Love?" at the supper meeting of the Senior Forum this Sunday at 6 p.m. in Chidley Hall.

Mr. Little was first invited as a Forum speaker 16 years ago and has made an annual visit since. His frankness in discussing with young people the problems which they face, his own experience as a father of teenagers and his good humor all account for the interest with which young people hear him.

Sunday at the 9:15 service of morning worship, the first of this season's "Forum at Church" services will be held. Jonathan Moody, Forum president, will assist in the services as chaplain. The deacons will be Dan Brink, Steve Emery, Bill Keeton, Jeff Russell, Ernie Sackett and Bob Ryder; and the ushers will be Steve Butterfield, Paul Ferazzi, Scott Wallace, Bob Williams, Scott Cunningham and Steve Carpenter. The Forum Choir, Dottie Keller chairman, will join the Senior Choir in providing music for the service. The sermon, entitled "The Courage to Take Love's Risks," will be given by the guest preacher, Dr. Luccock.

News from The First Baptist

Sunday, October 27, at 8 p.m., the Christian Crossroads Club will have as its speaker the Rev. Mr. Vincent de Gregoris, assistant to the dean, Andover Newton Theological School, speaking on the topic "The Use of Religious Drama in the Church." All single young adults in the area are welcome to attend.

The Senior High BYF's will attend a rally at the First Baptist Church, Beverly, at 2:15 p.m. on Sunday, October 27. Lorraine Lloy is in charge of transportation.

Monday, October 28, at 6:30 p.m., the First Baptist Church will hold its Harvest Home Supper, catered by the Women's Fellowship with Mrs. Paul E. Ward in charge. Immediately following the baked chicken dinner a discussion period on the 1964 proposal will be held.

Record Hop At S. O. I. Hall Friday Night

On Friday night, October 25, from 8 to 11 o'clock, the first of a series of record hops will be held for the teen-agers of Winchester at the Sons of Italy Hall on Swanton Street.

The hop will feature the top rock and roll groups in this area with popular disc jockeys.

There will be contests and prizes every Friday night to make these record hops the best in the area.

Rules of proper behavior and dress will be required. Boys must wear ties and jackets.

PART I

A LONG JOURNEY

the autobiography of Pitirim A. Sorokin

A Communist prison in Russia, the winter of 1918. Nighttime, and the thirty prisoners in a common cell have fallen asleep. Suddenly the door opens and the executioners walk in.

"'Petroff, Diakonoff, Tachmeneff, Popoff, Sidoroff, Constantinoff, put on your overcoats and follow us' . . .

"With pale faces, half-mad eyes, and quivering hands, the victims tried to put on their rags . . . Popoff kissed the other students and me. 'Long life to Russia and death to the Communist hangmen of the Russian people!' he exclaimed as he started out.

"'Be silent, rascal!' roared Petersen (an executioner) and struck the student's face with his revolver . . .

" 'Long life to Russia and away with Communist tortures!' shouted the student again.

"'Then I will teach you, counter-revolutionary scoundrel!' said the executioner, pointing the revolver at Popoff.

"'I am not afraid of your revolver. Fire!'

"One, two, three shots thundered. The student fell. One life destroyed! Horrified silence fell upon us, but after a few moments it was broken by a wild and purely animal cry, a cry of terror and pain, a roar, a savage groan trailing off into murmurs of muted horror. Then Tachmeneff fell into a fit of hysterics and writhed with convulsions.

"'Pick up this body and follow us!' ordered Petersen.

"The executioners and their victims disappeared."

For weeks, one of the thirty prisoners who witnessed this scene and who has written of it in his account of the Russian Revolution, "Leaves from a Russian Diary," and now in his recently published autobiography, "A Long Journey," Dr. Pitirim Sorokin waited, anguished, for the executioners to summon him to his own death.

But it was not death that claimed him, but a resurrection. One day he was summoned to the prison office to find his wife there. Lenin had written an editorial in Pravda, saying that men of Sorokin's kind deserved special attention. He was therefore released from prison. The unexpected reprieve was due to an old student of Sorokin's.

A startling contrast, no doubt, to the idyllic Komi village life of northern Russia into which Sorokin was born in 1889. His book begins with his first memories at the age of three—the burial of his mother. Several years following this tragic event, Sorokin and his elder brother parted from their artisan father and led, for the most part, an itinerant life as travelling artisans decorating churches. Sorokin describes the environment and people of the Komi villages with flashes of poetic feeling. Though simple peasants, it would seem that the people of Komi lived a life of community peace and emotional satisfaction.

Registrar Likes Auto Inspection Oct. 10 Editorial

Editor of the Star:

Thank you so much for the kind words contained in your editorial of October 10. It is a pleasure now, unlike the previous occasions that I wrote you, to know that your newspaper and myself agree on the need for a stricter inspection system within Massachusetts, and I certainly hope that we have accomplished this end.

As you so rightly point out in this article, there are loopholes or bugs yet to be ironed out in the new inspection system, and as I thank you for pointing out, this can be only expected when we try to change in a very brief period of time the inertia of some 32 years.

I don't wish to go into many of the matters you point out in your rather long and welcome editorial for the reason that I agree with practically all of them. However, I just would wish to let you know that within a very brief period of time we here at the Registry expect to be making an announcement of further steps to be taken in anticipation of the May inspection, which steps I believe will go a long way toward alleviating some of the problems that have cropped up.

Most importantly of all, as it relates to highway safety in Massachusetts, it does appear that the state was faced with the problem wherein the Registrar must get busy with policy and newspapers such as the Winchester Star must get busy with their typewriters.

I do feel quite confidently that we have made a beginning in this, and for this, I am most grateful to you.

Very truly yours,
James R. Lawton
Registrar of Motor Vehicles

Rep. Morse Lauds American Press' Newspaper Week

Editor of the Star:

I could not let the occasion of National Newspaper Week pass without commending the free press of America. There is no more secure pillar in the structure of our society than the clear voice of a free press.

Ever since Peter Zenger won his fight to publish free from government influence in the 17th century, our nation has been blessed with a press free to condone or condemn actions of the government and its appointed and elected officials, free to speak out on matters which require public attention.

National Newspaper Week is a reminder of our debt to the press in America. It is making contributions at all levels: local, state, national and international. I salute American newspapers on this occasion and thank them for their continuing defense of the vital freedoms of thought and expression.

Sincerely,
F. Bradford Morse
Congressman (R.—Mass.)

I am sure your newspaper's interest in such matters is an important source of help to all in your area who are working to encourage young people toward high intellectual achievement.

Library's Cancer, Smoking Report Is Suggested Reading

Editor of the Star:

At the Winchester Library this week has been added "The Report of the Consumer's Union on Smoking and the Public Interest." I urge every parent, and teacher, especially, to read this report.

The cancerous hands of those who would initiate and promote cigarette smoking for their profit are already on the throats of our young people, and only an intelligent, informed and indignant public opinion can break their grip.

Every man and woman in Winchester should read this Report to see where we are heading.

Aux. Firemen

The volunteers explained to the invited guests their tasks and accomplishments during the past year, which included nearly 1000 man-hours of work on the renovated station (which was allowed by special Town Meeting and Water Department approval), 400 hours of call-outs for service, and 300 hours on drills conducted by Captain Peter Galuffo of the Fire Department. Among the volunteer firefighter's various services were helping the Fire Department combat brush fires, pumping residents' cellars during the spring, answering all second alarm night fires, and aiding in the Woburn gas mishap several months ago. During 1962 the local volunteer unit put in 1400 hours of duty for the Town; 600 on calls, 800 in training drills.

Although the Auxiliary Fire Department functions under the local Civil Defense unit and its budget, it is under the supervision of Fire Chief Frank Amico. The Auxiliary Fire Chief is Bruce R. Hamilton of 3 Lagrange Street.

The rest of the Auxiliary's volunteer firefighter complement includes: William Connell, captain, Edward McDevitt, Jr., captain, Richard C. Ashenden, Thomas Baird (now in the Air Force), John Baldwin, John H. Caldwell, Theodore B. Chilcott, John Paul Cleary, Robert E. Gardner, Thomas Joslin, Charles Joyce, Neil MacArthur, Malcolm McKay, and Wilbur C. Otis.

For many years the Winn company specialized in the manufacture of watch hands and came to be known locally as "The Watch Hand." Today, the company supplies all types of dial hands such as clock hands, watch hands, speedometer pointers, radio pointers, aircraft instrument pointers, as well as precision mechanical parts to the electronic and camera industries. in the region; and two of the company's total 780 owned buildings are located in Winchester, one at 123 Washington Street that houses the business, sales and yellow page offices, and one at 954 Main Street that contains all the central switching equipment and operators and personnel to handle it.

Last year the telephone company put $385 million into the economy of the New England region in the form of wages, taxes, building construction, other expenditures, interest and dividends. A relatively small but locally important part of this sum was the $79,030.54 paid by the telephone company to the Town for real estate, personal property and motor vehicle taxes.

The Winchester telephone office's original telephone equipment was replaced with a later type model switchboard on October 19, 1907. On June 17, 1911, a common battery office was installed...which permitted users to pick up the phone and get the operator without cranking the juice box. Then, in February, 1958, the present automatic dialing equipment which is used by almost every home and business in Winchester was put in.

The New England Telephone and Telegraph Company was granted its corporate charter six and a half years after the telephone's invention.

As a consolidation of several earlier companies in Maine, Massachusetts, New Hampshire and Vermont, it was the first major operating unit of what was to become the Bell Telephone System.

Inter-city telephone lines were few and relatively short in 1883. A line between Boston and Providence represented the limits of inter-city calling. Long distance on a vast scale was then only a vision...and a vision that had many scoffers.

The Telephone Company's growth and its development of service reflects the demands arising from New England's own growth and development since the 1880's. In the process, the telephone has come to serve practically all places of business and about 87 per cent of households.

New England's telephone progress has paralleled that in the whole country...with the company sharing in the building up of a nationwide service connecting with all parts of the world.

Significant milestones in the lengthening of long distance calls were: Boston to New York, 1884; New York to Chicago, 1892; coast to coast, 1915; United States to England, 1927; around the world, 1935.

Today almost 98 per cent of the world's more than 150 million telephones are interconnected by land and deep-sea cables and by land and overseas radio, about 90 per cent of which are dial.

Complete toll calls average more than 740,000 per day by NET&T customers.

And, on the average business day, about 17 million calls are originated by NET&T customers. This is a jump from 11.2 million a decade ago.

New England's role in worldwide telephone development is pointed out by an all-time high of $140 million for construction this year compared with $56.5 million a decade ago.

Rules & Reg.

A major addition to the rules of government in the Fire Department is the rewriting of the grievance procedures. Until now, there was no clear defined procedure for firefighters to either register complaints or seek counsel from higher ranking officers. Under the new regulations, firefighters are directed to give their complaints in writing to their officer in command, and if he thinks it is a departmental matter he can send it to the chief, and then if the chief thinks it is a matter requiring the attention of the Town's executive administrators, the Board of Selectmen, he can take the matter before them himself.

Although this military-like chain of grievance command may seem perfectly normal to men of military or business experience, the procedure was not clearly written into the rules before, and the Selectmen have in the past been confronted with occasional cases of firefighters going over the heads of their superior officers to take a gripe to the top. (This almost happened once this year within the Police Department as well, but the case did not materialize.)

Another change in the new booklet of rules and regulations is the elimination of the previous height limit of five feet eight inches for prospective firefighters to no height limit whatsoever. The height limit was dropped by vote of the 1963 Town Meeting.

Other changes include the dropping of obligatory membership of every firefighter in the Fireman's Relief Association, a stricter rewording of the rule which prohibits loitering in front of the Fire Station, a moving ahead of the budget appropriations request deadline from the beginning of December to the first Monday in November, and the addition of a street directory in the back of the manual for helping new firefighters learn the layout of the Town.

Robert Mulford Ties MSPCC Work To Crittenton's

Mrs. Rowland Patrick opened her home for the first meeting of the Senior Circle of the Winchester Florence Crittenton League.

Mrs. Richard Pettingell, the new president, welcomed the members and then called on Mrs. Soucek, service representative, who spoke of the great need for blood, and asked that everyone who could donate do so. Each girl at Crittenton-Hastings House is given two pints of blood when the goes to Boston Lying-In Hospital, and this must be replaced or a $25 fee paid.

Mrs. Maxwell McCreery, now vice president of the Boston league, said it costs $250 for each girl at the hospital, and stressed that, without the hard work of all the circles, the league could not survive on what it receives from United Community Services.

Mrs. Coakley, the bazaar chairman, spoke of Winchester's food table, where we join with other circles for an area bazaar on December 4 at the Arlington Town Hall.

The speaker of the afternoon was Robert Mulford of 29 Pierrepont Road, executive secretary of the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children. The MSPCC, founded in 1878, has 60 branches in the state and is supported by the United Fund and contributions. There are 19 local offices with trained staffs.

Last year 13,000 children, representing 5000 families, were cared for, representing only half of the need. The MSPCC needs double its budget and twice as large a staff to cover the clinics, Nickerson House for children who have to be taken from their homes, and the home consultations service.

Mr. Mulford stressed the fact that, because of lack of staff, they cannot do any preventive work—the cases reported to them are full blown when the are called in. Most parents who neglect or mistreat their children were neglected children themselves and 50% came from broken homes.

ACROSS THE COUNTER

Do you know what is the greatest crime against property? The answer might amaze you—it's car theft.

Believe it or not, last year nearly 1,000 cars were stolen every day in the U. S. And it looks now as if 1963 will establish a new record!

Of the 1000 cars stolen each day, about 100, worth some $90,000, never will be recovered. This totaled $35,000,000 last year.

But worse yet, two out of every three stolen cars recovered will be damaged. This means repair bills for many motorists.

Prevention is the best single cure. Last year 9 out of 10 stolen cars were left unlocked, inviting a prospective thief to slip behind the wheel, then slip away! Many of the others were parked in remote areas giving thieves ample time to break in and drive the cars away.

Remember to remove the key from the ignition, when you park your car, for carelessness tempts theft.

So take time to prevent car theft—by removing keys, locking up, and being careful where you park.

"Theft," of course, is just one of the many hazards which your Auto Insurance policies can cover. May we help you determine your Auto Insurance requirements?

Antiques Study Group

The Winchester Antiques Study Group spent a delightful evening at the home of Mrs. Mac Adams, 41 Myopia Road, on October 15.

Surrounded by Antiques, the group listened to Mr. Clarence Blake tell the interesting story of Oriental Lowestoft. He began by explaining that through an error by William Chaffers in 1876 this porcelain was credited to Lowestoft, England. In his next book this error was corrected but the name Lowestoft has stuck to this particular china. It has other names in other countries and is called by some China Trade Porcelain.

Ching-te-Chen in the province of Kiangsi, China, was the seat of the manufacturers of Lowestoft. This town was 400 miles northwest of the city of Canton. Here the hard paste article was made and borders decorated. The rest of the decoration was done by enamelers who worked outside the city of Canton.

Decorations were painted over or under the glaze. The decoration and forms vary widely. Underglaze color was often blue. Some early pieces were done in rust red. Outside colored enamels were famille rose, blue, green, yellow, orange and brown. All of the painting was done by hand and some of it is exquisite.

In telling of the surface of the glaze Mr. Blake explained that this varies. He carefully pointed out various types. As some members had brought pieces of Lowestoft distinguishing features could be examined at close range.

Because this porcelain was produced for a foreign market the Chinese, who were astute salesmen were willing to make it in forms desired by foreign purchasers. One finds tea sets, garnitures, mugs, bowls, vases, sconces, animals and many other forms. Designs were numerous, flowers, floral sprays, birds, insects, people, etc. But the most-sought-after pieces today are those with the design of special order. Shipping companies ordered tea sets with a painting of one of their ships flying the American flag to be used by that particular ship. Individuals ordered coats of arms. Pieces were made for George Washington with the Order of the Cincinnati. The American eagle, the arms of the State of New York. Masonic emblems and historical scenes were special orders. Museums and outstanding collectors have pieces with these special designs. There is the Fitzhugh pattern executed in various colors. While most of these are beyond the average collector's budget, many other good examples of Lowestoft can be found at reasonable prices.

The "Jesuit type" Lowestoft is believed to have been decorated from prints and books brought to Ching-te-Chen by the Jesuits who were there from the early part of the 18th century until about 1745. At this time they were expelled. None of this is an established fact, but they were supposed to have influenced the use of religious prints. Many of the scenes were taken from well-known painters. Mr. Blake told of the colors used on these Jesuit pieces.

The market has reproductions of Lowestoft and members were warned of this and given a few ways to distinguish the true from the false.

The United States imported this china directly from 1784 to around 1810-20. However, it was imported by the European countries from the early 1700's to 1800.

It was a joy to see how Mrs. Adams has adapted the many antique pieces she has collected to her home. Both Mr. and Mrs. Adams answered many questions by antique-minded members before, during and after delicious refreshments.

Christmas Mail For Armed Forces Overseas

Postmaster Thomas J. Gilgun announces that the period November 1 to November 20 has been disignated for the mailing of Christmas parcels by surface transportation to members of our Armed Forces overseas. For airmail parcels the period is December 1 to December 10. Greeting cards for the Armed Forces overseas should be mailed within the periods designated for parcels if they are to have a reasonable expectation of delivery prior to Christmas.

The term "Armed Forces overseas" includes personnel of our Armed Forces, members of their families, and authorized U.S. civilians employed overseas, who receive their mail through an A.P.O., New York, New York, San Francisco, California, or Seattle, Washington, or Fleet Post Office, New York, New York, or San Francisco, California, or Navy Post Office, care of Postmaster, Seattle, Washington.

Postal patrons should observe the following mailing instruction in preparing their overseas Christmas parcels;—

(1) Packaging;

All articles should be packed in boxes of wood, metal, solid fiberboard, or strong double faced corrugated fiberboard. All fiberboard boxes should be securely wrapped in heavy paper which materially strengthens the package. Each box should be well tied with strong cord. Unless completely packed and tightly filled, boxes are likely to be crushed. Sufficient cushioning materials should be used to prevent any rattling or loosening of articles within the package. A slip showing list of contents and addresses should be enclosed in the parcel. Forms 2966 or 2976-A, (Custom Declaration) completed by the senders are required on parcels to many destinations.

(2) Prohibited Articles:

In addition to the articles normally prohibited in the mails, matches of all kinds and lighter fluid may not be mailed to overseas military addresses. Cigarettes, other tobacco products, coffee, and various other items are prohibited in parcels addressed to some military post offices.

(3) Postage:

The domestic rates of postage are applicable, and postage must be fully prepaid. When fourth class parcel post rates are applicable, the zone rate from the post office where mailed to the post office through which the parcel is addressed will be charged. Airmail articles wighing not in excess of 8 ounces are chargeable at the rate of 8 cents per ounce; those wieghing over 8 ounces are chargeable at the rate of 88 cents for the first pound and 80 cents for each additional pound or fraction of a pound.

(4) Addressing:

Addresses must be legible and complete, and should be prepared by typewriter or pen and ink.

As a footnote to indicate how precious every pint of blood is: for the past two weeks, the local Red Cross Motor Service has been making daily trips into the Boston Blood Center and other hospitals for desperately needed blood for the Winchester Hospital. This should confirm the pleas from Red Cross that there is a continuing need for blood at all times.

Gloxinias

Most of us are willing to spend a few extra moments with a special plant; few of us, however, have either the time or patience to cater to the needs of one of the most exotic plants. We are always glad when a plant which is very easy to care for and is also "something special" comes along.

The Gloxinia falls into this category. Requiring little care, they reward the grower 100 fold with magnificent trumpet-shaped flowers and handsome foliage.

The plants are grown either from seeds, tubers, or leaf cuttings which will produce tubers. Gloxinias were discovered in the jungle of Brazil during 1739. Not until 1817 was it introduced to Britain where it was named after P. B. Gloxin, a French botanist. It is in the Gesneriad Family and sinningia Genus.

Gloxinia plants or tubers are available from most florists, nurserymen and mail order houses. The larger the tuber, the larger the flowers and the healthier the plant. Flowers usually open 80 to 100 days after the tubers are planted.

Whether you choose clear vibrant whites, reds, or blues, or one of the hundreds of pastel combinations, the flowers are sure to add a restful note of harmony to the surroundings. Recent years have seen the introduction of double flowers. The bloom is composed of many rows of petals. These plants cost a bit more, but are well worth the price.

The tubers can be planted any time from January on. Any of the prepared African Violet soils is good, or you can mix your own out of one part each of peat, leafmold, good garden soil and sand. Place the tuber concave side up in a five or six inch pot three-quarters of an inch below the surface of the soil. Water well after planting, but then keep the pots on the dry side until growth starts.

The proper light is the most important factor in Gloxinia culture. The incorrect light intensity will cause legginess and/or lack of buds. If the plants are kept in a window, Southern exposure is best from October through June .

The ideal method for growing Gloxinias is under fluorescent light. This way every day is a sunny day. Twelve to fifteen hours of light each day is best. Getting the plants off to a healthy start is important. Have the fluorescent tube about four or five inches above the soil at first. As the plants mature, their need for light decreases.

The plants should not be fertilized until the buds are set. If a plant food is applied too soon, legginess will result. Gloxinias do well in a temperature of 70 to 85 degrees. Humidity of 40 percent up is required.

The same Gloxinia plants are not kept alive year 'round. After the last buds have opened and gone by, water should slowly be reduced. When the soil is completely dry cut off the foliage and put the tuber in a dark cool place.

A rest period of two to three months is required. At the end of this time, the tuber may be repotted and the plant may be grown again.

If the proper care is given, the life of the Gloxinia will be almost indefinite. Some tubers 50 to 60 years old are still producing magnificent plants.

Girls Scouts Will Assist at Board Of Health Clinic

Cadette Girl Scout Troop 486 held its first Court of Awards for the current season on Wednesday, October 9, at the Methodist Church, at which time the following badges were given: Outdoor Safety, Deboras Bassett; Life Saving, Mary Power and Loranne Gray; Sports, Deborah Bassett and Mary Power. Mrs. Richard F. Dutting, assisted by Mrs. O. E. Bassett, then presented the Curved Bar rank pin to Deborah Bassett and Mary Power. Curved Bar is, at present, the highest rank in Girl Scouting.

This year, Troop 486 serves eighth and ninth-grade students from both Lynch and McCall Junior Highs. The troop meets on alternate Wednesdays at the Methodist Church and has already outlined plans for setting up a service project in connection with the Board of Health's cilnic at the Town Hall. On every Thursday and the first Tuesday of each month, during clinic hours, two members of the troop will supervise a planned program of stories, games and simple handwork for those children who attend the clinic. Each member of the troop will work at least three afternoons, so that the total program will span a period of about seven months.

Some members of the troop will join another Cadette troop in climbing Mt. Monadnock on Friday, October 25th, and several girls have applied for a Cadetteage encampment to take place in the provinces of Canada next summer. Competition for this event is strong, since only two Cadettes from all of New England will be selected to represent Region I at these Heritage (Provincial) Camps.

CAPITOL COMMENT

YOUR CONGRESSMAN

Little League Elects Ed Williams President

The annual meeting of the Little League Inc., of Winchester was held last week at the Unitarian Church hall for the purpose of electing new officers for the coming season. John Fitzgerald, the outgoing president, spoke briefly regarding the league activities during the past year.

Mention was made of the fine quality of baseball that was played and the good crowd reaction that was obtained. Finances were in excellent shape and thanks was offered to those who have supported Little League in the past season. The wonderful efforts of the Women's Auxiliary was commented upon and the successful annual dinner that climaxed the year was high on the list of commendations.

The Board of Directors then elected Edmund Williams as the new president of Little League, Inc., for the upcoming year. Elected with Mr. Williams were the following members of Little League:

Raymond W. Chase, vice president of the National League

Charles Koch, vice president of the American League

William J. Gannon, secretary

Charles W. Craven, Sr., treasurer

Arthur Sampson, player agent of National League

Charles Lucier, player agent of American League

Charles Buchanan, umpire-in-chief

Mrs. Mary Jean Robison, last year's president of the Women's Auxiliary, introduced Mrs. Phyllis Boyd who will take over the office for the coming season. Mrs. Boyd got right into the business of the new year by suggesting the date of June 12 for the Little League Dance of 1964. She hopes to obtain the use of the Town Hall for the function.

Al LaPointe was presented as the president of the Dads' Club for the new year.

Ed Williams thanked the board for the honor of selecting him to guide the destinies of the league for 1964 and accepted the job at the present salary (none) and future headaches (hundreds). He stated that he hoped he would receive the same cooperation during the coming season as has been enjoyed by all of the past presidents and he promised that he would do his utmost to make the upcoming season a banner year for Little League, Inc.

Cystic Fibrosis Group Thanks Its Givers, Helpers

Mr. Sherman W. Saltmarsh, Jr., chairman of the 1963 Cystic Fibrosis Campaign in Winchester, announced this week the results of the drive.

As a result of increased public interest in this dread children's disease, the $3752 collected surpassed last year's total contribution.

Mrs. Richard K. Schroeder and Mrs. Samuel E. Perkins, II, cochairmen, have expressed their appreciation to the solicitors, captains, precinct heads and business men who so generously gave of their time and effort. The generosity of Winchester's citizens made the campaign a successful fund drive.

The success of the International Peace Corps in encouraging the peoples of the developing nations to play a greater role in their own progress, has led to a number of suggestions for a National Service Corps which would assist underprivileged American citizens.

In 1962 the President created a Study Group on a National Service Program which issued a report early last spring. The study group, under the direction of former Nautilus skipper, Captain William R. Anderson, proposed that a National Service Corps of approximately 5,000 volunteers be established to work with American Indians, patients in public mental institutions, migratory farm workers and other needy American citizens.

The goals of such a program are admirable ones: to work with people in great need, to motivate other citizens to give service, to dramatize human needs and to attract more Americans into service professions such as social work, teaching and nursing.

Although a National Service Corps bill passed the Senate in August, a number of deficiencies in tne present legislation must be remedied before the House of Representatives will act favorably.

Even potential supporters of the Program have insisted that it be initiated solely on a trial basis. Critics have pointed out that a National Service Corps might conflict with local and state efforts and that the Federal Government has no proper role in some of these purely local problems. Others have criticized the lack of specific criteria for the selection of projects and the possibility that political considerations might govern the choice of communities to which volunteers might be assigned. A larger degree of local approval and supervision would also seem to be required. A further objection to the present bill is that it does not require a local community to bear any portion of the cost of a project.

A number of these objections were met by amendments to the bill on the Floor of the Senate. The Program was made temporary and given only a limited authorization of funds; extension of the Program could come only after Congressional reconsideration of the first year's operation.

Some measure of local control was assured by another amendment requiring that the approval of the Governor of the state where the project is to be undertaken be received by the President before the Volunteers can go to work.

Problems remain, however, and for this reason the legislation is still pending before the Education and Labor Committee. I am currently exploring possibilities for amendments to the bill that would meet the rest of the objections. Several alternatives come to mind: the Program could be limited to areas where federal responsibility is clear, for example, the District of Columbia, Indian affairs, migrant farm workers and patients in federally supported mental institutions. In addition specific criteria for the approval of projects and the establishment of a non-partisan selection committee would free the Program from political considerations. Strict guarantees of local responsibility and participation should also be included.

These are the problems that must be worked out before the National Service Program can become a reality.

GOOD EXAMPLE

Of course, we parents all expect our children to have great respect for teachers and all persons, who have anything at all to do with them and the tremendous task of rearing them. But now we ask, in teaching youngsters how to live, just what example do you give?

If you expect good heat in your home this winter, you must use the right fuel oil. You will get quality fuel oil at fair prices from B. T. Conlon Fuel Service, 27 Lake Avenue, Woburn. Phone WE 3-1720.

The world has grown up these days.
How about your newspaper?

Years ago, it seems now, the world was a very simple place. Issues were clear-cut; things were black or white, and you could make up your own mind quickly and, once you made it up, you didn't have to change it. Or so it seemed. But today, our world is so much more complex. Things are not simple any more. To know what's going on in the world, to form a sound opinion about it, you need all the facts, and you need all the facts on both sides. That's why so many people are reading The Boston Globe these days. The Globe is an adult kind of paper. On all the important issues of the day—national, international, local—it gives you both sides of the issue—both sides in depth—and it lets you make up your mind. It's not easy to edit a newspaper this Globe way, but we think it's better. Try The Boston Globe for a week or a month. Get it at your newsstand or have it home-delivered. Get both sides: get The Globe. Just phone AVenue 8-8000.

When we consider the highly miraculous state of surgery today, it is difficult to understand the low esteem in which it has been held at various times down through the centuries.

In the middle ages, for example, surgery was considered an unfit occupation for a gentleman or scholar. As a result, surgical operations were performed largely by barbers or vagrant practitioners who set up shop in any likely locale.

A trip to the tonsorial parlor in those early days was likely to be a grim excursion which might call for anything from a shave and a haircut to an appendectomy.

A trip to McCORMACK'S APOTHECARY, however, is your guarantee of satisfaction. For a complete prescription service or a wide selection of surgical and hospital supplies and baby needs rely on McCORMACK'S APOTHECARY, 568 Main St. Phone PA 9-2700. 34-hour prescription service. Free local delivery.

Social Service Guild Meeting

The opening meeting of the Social Service Guild of the First Congregational Church will be held in the Palmer Room on Tuesday, October 29. Dessert will be served at 1:15, preceding the meeting.

Mrs. H. Kimball Archibald, director will preside at the business meeting, with Mrs. Albert J. Penner conducting the devotional service.

Mr. John W. Putnam, executive director of the Center for Applied Studies in Aging and Citizenship, Boston, will be guest speaker. His talk on "A Clearing House for Opportunity", will describe the work of the newly formed Clearing House for Voluntary Participation in Civic Activities, an organization which provides volunteer workers for civic affairs in the Greater Boston area from among retired and older persons. Believing that there is much available talent among these older citizens which can make a most important contribution to the community, it also provides them the opportunity for satisfying and enriching experiene.

Mr. Putnam will discuss the available opportunities for volunteer work and the important part played by church groups, social organizations, golden age clubs and community centers in providing a reservoir of manpower for its operation.

All women of the church are cordially invited to attend this meeting.

Elks to Hold Halloween Party For Children

On Saturday evening, November 2, from 6:30-8:30, there will be a Halloween party at the Elks Home on Elmwood Avenue for children.

There will be candy, prizes, favors, games, and fun for all the kids. Francis Curtin, chairman of the Elks Youth Activities Committee, invites members to bring not only their own children, but also those of friends. Every child who shows up will be welcomed and will have a good time.

If last year's Elks Halloween party is any criterion, the kids will enjoy a rip-snortin' affair.

Bring trick or treat bags, kids.

Jean Cabral Is School Heroine Via TV Program

The question: "Why has the United States stopped aid to Honduras when we have continued aiding other countries where the military also took over the government?"

The author: Jean Cabral, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Cabral, of 26 Pond Street.

The media on which it was heard: the national educational network, locally Channel 2, on "Places in the News."

Jean was the heroine of the Noonan School last week and the envy of all sixth graders there and in the other elementary schools when her name, her question, and her school and her town came over the TV and went out over the country. It is a weekly program used by her teacher, Dr. Marie Fagerland, and others in town as a teaching adjunct.

Jean's questions had been chosen from submissions by students all over the East who are members of grades five or six. It was used for discussion by Jerry Silverstein, program director and his guest expert for that day, Tom Connell, Latin American expert for Time Magazine.

And it was the outcome of a special in-class presentation on Honduras prepared for her Noonan classmates by Kristina Allison, Audrey Elliott, and James Mardulier in anticipation of the weekly teleview.

Needless to say interest in the program last week was at a peak for the Noonan students, who go to work immediately after the program in discussion of the subject announced that day for the subsequent week. Jean is to receive a "certificate of merit" for having her question selected. But it may well be an anticlimax to the excitement of the day.

Churches Unite Halloween For UNICEF Collection

When the ghosts and goblins come to your door on Hallowe'en this year many will not be looking for goodies but may ask, instead, for a Treat for the world's hungry children. They ask their neighbors to spend less on their treats of candy and cookies and to have a bowl of small change ready for the UNICEF cartons.

At a recent meeting at the Methodist Church representatives from the Baptist, Methodist and Unitarian Churches voted to participate in UNICEF TRICKor TREAT program on Hallowe'en this year. Previous years some of the church schools have sponsored such programs individually, but this will be the first joint approval and participation.

The general plan agreed upon by those attending the planning meeting was that the Youth Groups in the various churches might take on the project of preparing the cartons and publicity for the church school, but that the Trick-or-Treating would be done by the children. The cartons will be given to the children in church school the Sunday before Hallowe'en and returned on the following Sunday, perhaps with some dedication service. This plan has been used successfully by many other communities.

The central committee will share in organization and publicity, with the Youth Groups assuming their part. Each church will turn their total collection over to the committee so the total amount will be sent to UNICEF as coming from the children in Winchester's Church Schools.

Our churches have endorsed this program because they feel it is "religion at work."

Anyone wishing to know more about a UNICEF Hallowe'en may call Miss Patricia A. Houge, director, First Baptist Church; Miss Jo Gulley, director Crawford Memorial Methodist Church; Mrs. Stanley Marshman, director, Unitarian Church.

Army Schools, Training Now "Wide Open"

More than at any time in the past two years, the Army technical training system can be described as "wide open."

At least that's the way it is described by Sergeant Fred T. Nixon, Army recruiter in Winchester.

According to Sergeant Nixon, there are more openings for the Army's school programs than there have been since shortly after the Berlin crisis of 1961. He explained that the reason for the unusual number of openings is that "the men who were called into service at that time are now beginning to get out, and we have a need for highly qualified young men to replace them."

In the past, he said, many young men have found that they were unable to receive the school or assignment they most wanted—even though they were fully qualified—because the Army's quota was "filled." Most of these men, he said, then decided against taking "second best" and deferred their enlistment until a later date.

Under the Army's "Guaranteed Assignment Program," of course, such qualified men know before they enlist whether or not they will receive the school of their choice. If it is determined that their choice is not available they are not required to enlist. If, on the other hand, their choice is available, they receive a written guarantee from the Army that they will receive the training they have chosen.

Many of the men previously turned back for lack of quota have already taken advantage of the newly-announced vacancies. In an effort to contact more of them, Sgt. Nixon has begun an extensive mail campaign, sending letters to all previously qualified men notifying them of the changes.

Duplicate Bridge Club

The Chitel's Challenge Bowl goes into competition for the first time on Wednesday, November 6th when a field of some fifty entries is expected to clash for the WDBC Men's Pairs Championship for 1963. We hope that Jack Chitel, who caters so successfully to the sartorial requirements of all Winchesterites from kings to court jesters, will bring along his friend with the orange moustache and compete for his own trophy!

Afterwards, one of the two sections will be run as a "blind date" partnership draw game.

We finally caught up with Al Oszy (a life master whose total number of master points runs into four digits), and here is his account of useful bridge conventions at work under fire.

Today's hand is taken from a recent game at the Winchester Duplicate Bridge Club. Half the field were in either two or three hearts, making three (losing one spade, one diamond and two clubs).

In the bidding sequence shown above the opening notrump is a weak notrump which shows 12-14 high card points. The two club bid is artificial (Stayman) and requests partner to bid a four card major if he has one; otherwise he must respond two diamonds.

At all the other tables except one South played the hand at one notrump. This goes down one or two tricks depending upon the defense. At the last table, after East had opened one notrump, South bid two clubs (Landy) which is artificial and requested partner to bid his best suit. When West passed, North also passed since clubs was his best suit.

The opening bid lead was the Spade four which was won with the ace. The diamond queen was returned and won with the ace, on which West signaled with eight. A heart lead was won with the queen and the defense cashed another heart and two diamonds. The remaining tricks were won by declarer for a top on the board.

After the hand was over West remarked that he did not know what to do when South bid two clubs. He was afraid he might pick the wrong four card major. This can be taken care of by bidding two diamonds over two clubs as Stayman and having the notrump opener bid his four card major.

WVNA Reports On Retardation And Sick Room Rentals

The Winchester Visiting Nursing Association held its monthly board meeting on Friday, October 11, at the library.

Mrs. Bradford Bentley, president, told the board that at the recent laying of the cornerstone for the new wing of the hospital it was pointed out that the hospital was started by women of the Visiting Nursing Association.

Miss Rita Plummer, executive director, reported on a three-day workshop on mental retardation of children, which she attended in Chatham, given for administrators and supervisors of public health nursing agencies in Massachusetts. It was sponsored by the division of Maternal and Child Health, and the Public Health Nursing Section of the Mass. Association for Retarded Children.

Her report covered one of the more recently discovered causes of retardation, PKU, which, unless discovered by blood test within five days of birth, or within three weeks, by urine test, will do permanent brain damage. If detected, there is much which can be done to alleviate this. According to statistics, one baby in 8,000 has PKU, and one in 100 adults are carriers of the recessive trait causing it.

The overall problem of mental retardation in children, and its many causes, is one in which parent groups might take an active interest. Much legislation is needed to help these unfortunate children, who number 6,000,000 in the U.S.A., one in every three families affected in some way.

Miss Plummer also reported a new high-low bed had been purchased by the W. V. N. A., bringing the total number of rental hospital beds to ten. Also for rental by the week or month, at very nominal fees, are cribs, mattresses, walkers, hydrocalator for hot pads for arthritics, cardiac table, and wheel chairs. This service is for anyone who is in need of any of these articles for easier nursing care.

The business meeting was adjourned to the well-child clinic in the basement of the Town Hall, where Miss Beth Ervidi gave a demonstration of the duties of the volunteer worker, who helps the nurse and doctor in clinic every Thursday.

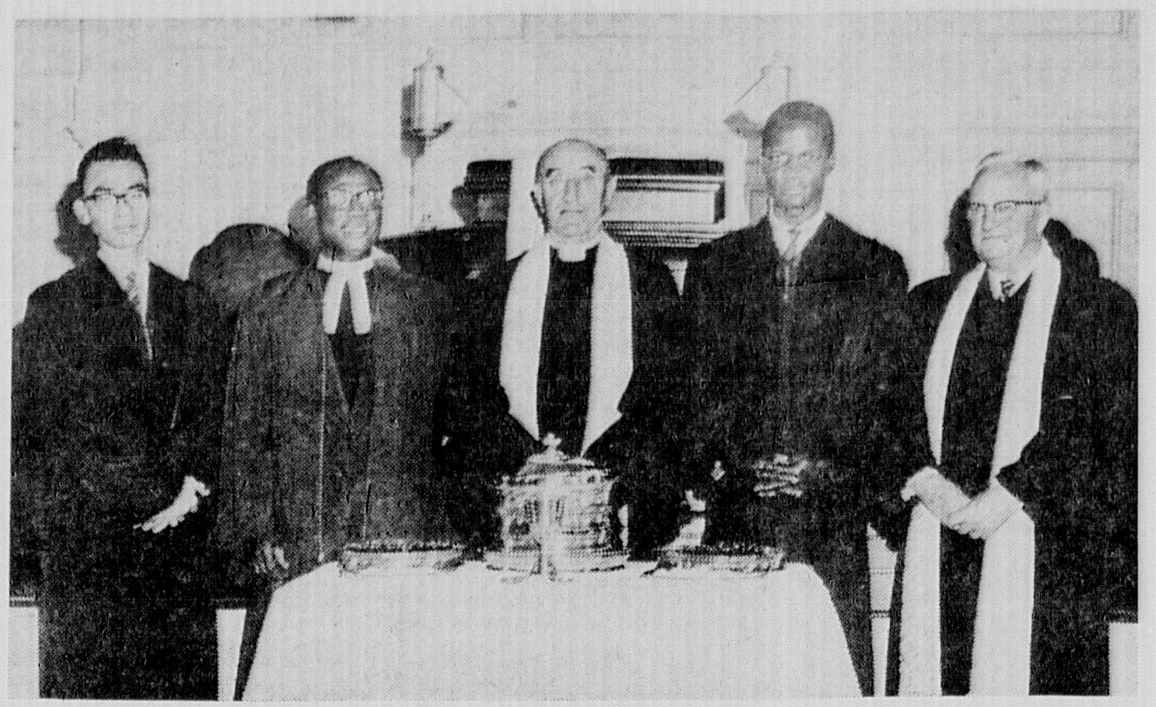
Overseas Communion Participants



WORLD-WIDE COMMUNION SERVICE SUNDAY was observed at the Crawford Memorial Church recently by special participation of visiting ministers. Above are the Rev. Wakashi Onuma, a Methodist from Tokyo, Japan; Rev. Ebeneza K. Baiden, Methodist from Ghana, Africa; host pastor Rev. H. Newton Clay; Rev. Josiah M. Kibira, Lutheran from Tanganyika, Africa; and Rev. G. Vaughn Shedd, minister of visitation. The service was highlighted by the reading of a part of the ritual by each of the three nationals, each in his own tongue, while the congregation followed the printed ritual. A special offering was received for the "Fellowship of Suffering," part to go for overseas relief and part to the Commission on Camp Activities and Methodist chaplains with the armed forces.

His topic will be "Public Health and Rehabilitation."

This second annual conference of the Northeastern regional chapter of the National Association of Sheltered Workshops, Inc., will bring social service officials from the New England states, N. Y., New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware and eastern provinces of Canada to Boston.

Dr. Kurren, his wife and two children, moved to Winchester this summer from Winnetka, Illinois, to open the first field office of the National Institute in this area.

'Winchester Walk' To Draw Large Group Today

Over 18 Winchester residents are traveling to the Boston Museum of Fine Arts for a "Walk through the Museum" today at 11 and 11:30 a.m.

Led by Mrs. George A. Marks of Foxcroft Road, they will be introduced to the Museum's renowned collections and its extensive membership program. After the hour's "Walk", refreshments will be served in the Tapestry Gallery.

The recently acquired 15th century Flemish altarpiece, the "Martyrdom of St. Hippolytus," will be one of the masterpieces seen during this visit to the Boston Museum. This rare triptych brings to the community one of the great Flemish paintings in the United States, rivalling the best of its period in its glowing colors and its scrupulous detail.

Wyman Parents Plan An "Island Interlude"

On Saturday, November 2, the annual Wyman School Parents' Association benefit dance will be held from 8:30-12 in the auditorium amid settings of the exotic South Pacific islands. Dancing will be to the music of Roger Carpenter and the Meltones.

As this is the only money-raising affair of the year, parents are asked to support the dance, proceeds of which go towards equipment for the school and the Scholarship Fund. They are reminded that this evening is a fine one to get together, plan a pre-dance party and then go to the dance.

Among the generous contributions from our merchants for prizes are: a slipcover for a chair from Eric's Upholsterers; a birthday cake to order from Christie McDonald's; a fruit basket from Renton's; cologne from Cradock's and shoe care items from the Vernon Shoe Clinc. Next week others will be announced.

Tickets for the dance may be purchased from Mrs. Judson James, PA 9-6294 or from the ticket mothers of each class.

Mrs. Richard Hillger, as chairman of the dance, is being assisted by: Mrs. Walter Armstrong, refreshments; Mrs. Judson James, tickets; Mrs. Dennis Smith, decorations; Mrs. Donald Stebbins, flowers; Mrs. Theodore von Rosenvinge, prizes, and Mrs. Malcolm Leslie, publicity.

Dial-a-matic adding machine. For small offices, home use, income tax, etc. Six dials, answers appear automatically. Also subtracts. Priced at $4.00 at the Winchester Star.

Overflow Crowd Hears John J. Waite on Math

On October 17th, John J. Waite Jr., of 44 Winford Way, head of the mathematics department at the high School, was the speaker at the first Vinson-Owen Parents Association meeting of the year when an overfow crowd, including parents from Parkhurst and Wyman schools, attested the great interest in his topic—"Modern Math."

Mr. Waite was well qualified to present this subject, having been associated with Winchester schools since 1956, after receiving his B.A. and M.A. degrees from Boston College. Last year he was active on a committee of local educators concerned with bringing new methods of teaching mathematics to the elementary schools. He has also taught a course in "Modern Math" at the Cambridge Adult Education Center.

Instead of teaching students rigid rules and formulas for handling specific problems, according to Mr. Waite, the new approach is to have them think problems through to the logical conclusions, based on knowledge of the relationship between number facts. The need to teach more mathematics than pupils could previously assimilate led various organizations such as the National Science Foundation and the Ford and Carnegie Foundations to sponsor research which led to several new teaching methods.

Winchester teachers examined these approaches and selected the one now in use in our schools. Similar systems are now in use in some 10-15 percent of American schools, in about 45 percent of Massachusetts schools and in many foreign countries.

A large number of previously confused parents gained an understanding of modern mathematics at the meeting and some whose understanding is still incomplete were inspired to learn from their children or to take courses given by the Adult Education Program.

Winchester At The Armory-Saturday Night With JFK

The big news of our week was the great success of the dinner at the Commonwealth Armory, Boston, billed as New England's Salute to President John F. Kennedy.

Many of us who have attended political dinners and meetings down through the years never have experienced anything like the size and enthusiasm of the Saturday night gathering.

With 7500 persons seated at tables that took up all the available space in the Armory, drill hall, garage, and the lower quarters, as well as a TV set-up which carried voices and the pictures of the speakers to every corner of the large building, one could only admire the ingenuity and electronic achievement of modern science, while giving credit to the co-chairmen, Thomas J. White and Sheriff Howard W. Fitzpatrick.

The honorary chairman, Hon. John W. McCormack, speaker of the National House of Representatives, was at his best as, in a short speech, he listed the accomplishments of this administration, and additional accomplishments to come.

Governor Endicott Peabody spoke well and, of course, both the Kennedy speakers, President and senator, were excellent, as usual.

The writer of this article was tremendously impressed when she had an opportunity to look into the press room. Here reporters from all over the country were pecking away at their typewriters while messengers hurried in and out. Two reporters nearest to the door wore signs which read ""Fitchburg" and "Texas". In addition to Chairman Elizabeth McDonald of the local Town committee and Mr. McDonald, others from Winchester who enjoyed the dinner were Town comptroller Jim Costello, Harry A. McGrath, and Jack Costello, acting director of the State Community Colleges. There were others no doubt, but one could easily miss them in the crowd.

As we left the Armory at 10:30 it was a thrill to see the two large trucks from which 12 great search lights were beamed into the sky and the rows of big busses from the other New England States, with long lines of Army M.P.'s, State Police, and Boston's Finest, massed together around the Armory.

Winchester's "Salute to the President" will take place on Saturday evening, November 2, when Mr. and Mrs. Roger Harsch will entertain at their home, 10 Nassau Drive, a group of Democrats, many of whom are comparative newcomers to Winchester. As the Harsch couple are famous for their hospitality, an evening of enjoyable good fellowship may surely be anticipated.

The sympathy of the Town committee has been extended to Mr. and Mrs. John Murphy of Richardson Street in the loss of Mr. Murphy's mother, Mrs. Florence V. Murphy of Brookline and Nahant.

Sons of Italy Halloween Dance

Hallowe'en is almost upon us and there is bound to be spooky things going on. There will be "Ghosts and Goblins" afoot when the Women's Lodge of the Sons of Italy hold their Hallowe'en Masquerade Dance, Saturday, October 26th at the S.O.I. Hall.

Put on your thinking cap and dream up a wonderful idea for a costume. Of course, you will be allowed to come if you don't have a costume, but think of all the fun we'll have if everyone comes dressed as a surprise guest. There will be prizes for costumes.

The girls on the committee will supply you with tickets and a share of the fun for the evening. The committee consists of the following girls: Venerable Lorraine Maggio, Chairlady Vi Bruno, Rose DeTesso, Lorraine Screnzi, Nora Amico, Jenny Amico, Sue Barbaro, Mary Vespucci, Julia Petitti, Marion Marrone and Dot Russo. The music will be by Rajjar. I hear they are a real swinging group. Don't forget to join us Saturday, October 26th for a real ball.

Newcomers Are Asked to Friends' Opening Meeting

The annual fall meeting of the Friends of the Winchester Hospital will be held on Thursday, October 31, at the home of Mrs. Harold J. Pyne, 5 Sussex Road. Coffee will be served promptly at 2:30.

"Some New Meanings of Volunteer Services" will be discussed by an expert, Mary Ruth Wolf, director of Volunteer Department, Massachusetts General Hospital. Miss Wolf, an alumna of Central Michigan University, did graduate work at the University of Chicago, Columbia University and the University of California. She was head Recreational worker in military hospitals for the American Red Cross, 1944-1954. Her contribution toward the development of Hospital Volunteer Service has been constant resulting in the establishment of a graduate course of Directors of Hospital Volunteers at the MGH

Everyone interested in becoming a Friend will be most welcome at this meeting and will find Miss Wolf's talk a wonderful introduction to hospital volunteer work.

Wilderness Bill Gets Boost From Garden Club

Vivid slides of birds and wild flowers highlighted the fine talk presented by Mrs. Donald B. Bischoff at the first meeting of the Winchester Home and Garden Club last week.

Mrs. Bischoff spoke of the great need to preserve more of our areas of forest and marshland. She stressed the fact that there is strength in numbers and urged that everyone write her senators and representatives to pass The Wilderness Bill. A postcard will do, said Mrs. Bischoff.

Mrs. Dean Hintlian set the tea-table with a gold cloth and decorated it with a lovely centerpiece of dock, shading from pale green through beige to dark brown, and dried artichokes, cut to look just like tulips. Presiding were: Mrs. James Mason, Mrs. Joseph Vaccaro, Mrs. Granville Gilpatrick and Mrs. Arthur Anderson. Mrs. John Heffernan's fall corsages which she displayed and sold before the meeting were greatly admired

Six new members were welcomed by Mrs. James Mason, president. They are: Mrs. Thomas A. Kirwan, Mrs. Robert Meisel Mrs. Joseph A. Lucey, Mrs. Benjamin Gowing, Mrs. Gertrude McPeake and Mrs. James F. Dwinell.

Living With Your Heart

("Living With Your Heart" is a community service of the Massachusetts Heart Association Greater Boston Chapter.)

Records of over 25,000 Harvard students are being surveyed over a five year period in an effort to determine the relationship of body build to susceptibility to heart disease.

The survey, believed to be the largest of its kind ever undertaken, is directed by Dr. Albert Damon, Associate Professor of Epidemiology at the Harvard School of Public Health, and an American Heart Association Established Investigator .

Using computer techniques, Dr. Damon's team is studying records of 17,000 Harvard men of the classes of 1880 and 1920 and 8,000 men from the classes of 1943 to 1949. Body measurements on the latter group were taken by Dr. Carl C. Seltzer when they entered college.

The project is designed to test statistically the widely-held theory that muscular, stocky persons are more susceptible to cardiovascular diseases than those of other body builds.

"We hope to be able to ultimately determine how much of a built-in cardiovascular risk accompanies various body form," Dr. Damon said. "If this is possible, the findings may have preventive value. We shall be interested to learn, if possible, whether body build is or isn't as important a factor as diet or exercise, and on whom to concentrate our preventive measures."

Photographs of 3,000 of the 1880-1920 students are being analyzed according to complex formulae for rating body build, and each photograph will receive a bodyform specification based on more than 20 measurements.

Earlier investigation of the 3,000-man sample by F. L. Stagg and the late Prof. E. A. Hooton, famed anthropologist, developed voluminous data on their ages, residence, causes of death, origin, race, religion, occupations, and the relationship of their body builds as Harvard freshmen to events of later life. It will provide a valuable basis for further investigation, Dr. Damon said.

The project also owes a major debt to Dr. Dudley Sargent, physical education pioneer for whom Boston University's Sargent College was named.

The 17,000-man sample is different from Harvard's general population of that era in one respect; each man was sufficiently interested in physical education to rent a locker. With assistants, Dr. Sargent, who derived part of his income then from the leasing of lockers, made over 30 physical measurements, strength tests and took medical histories of every man who rented a locker. The records of Dr. Sargent will be coded on punch cards and run through a computer.

To make certain that findings are truly representative of the Harvard population, Dr. Damon's team will compare the "locker" group with samples from those who did not rent lockers and from those who were serious athletes.

"We expect to discover enough persons in several of the leading single causes of death to provide a base for further analysis," he said. "The second stage will be to determine the physical characteristics of the men at college with a view to predicting the later age and cause of death."

Such factors as race, religion, residence, and national origin will be a part of the formula by which it is hoped to obtain an expression of probability not only for heart disease but for other major causes of death.

The project follows a study supported in part by the Massachusetts Heart Association among first-generation Italian - Americans whose parents were born within a 75-mile radius of Naples, to learn the relationship of their smoking habits to body build.

The survey of 167 men found that smokers had a slightly higher serum cholesterol amount than abstainers, but that smoking had no significant relationship to morphological masculinity, blood pressure, diet or alcohol consumption.

Nor was any association found with birthplace, age, height, body measurements or calorie intake. Smokers in general were no more active and drank no more alcohol than non-smokers. Lean men, it was found, smoke significantly more than stout men.

Lexington Pulls Out Victory In Hard Fought Game

DAVE ROWE (18) finds himself hemmed in at mid-field during second half action. The promising sophomore filled in for the injured Ed Cutting.

Lexington High School, with Tom Soderstrom doing some effective carrying and two long bombs by quarterback Frank Yeomans, pulled a hard one out of the fire last Saturday afternoon on Manchester Field, beating Middlesex League rival, Winchester, 20-14, in a game that could have gone either way. Strangely enough after two early-game long passes Lexington kept pretty well to the ground, while Winchester's only consistent ground-gainers were passes.

Lexington rushed and passed for 157 yards and 11 first downs. Winchester's rushing game was limited to 84 yards while the Sachems completed six of 12 passes for 123 yards. Winchester made only five first downs.

The Minute boys drew two penalties for 20 yards while Winchester lost only five yards all told.

The deciding touchdown was made as the result of a Winchester fumble, alertly pounced upon by Lexington at its own 48 yard line. Arbeene was piled up without gain on a try at the line, but that "old bread and butter man," Tom Soderstrom, banged off left tackle for three and Yeomans hit Spinelli with a completed pass at the Winchester 40.

Yeomans then handed off to Jenson, who found running room with a dash to a first down at the Winchester 25. Jenson in two tries reached the 19, and Arbeene busted through for a first down at the Winchester 15.

Winchester Line Holds

Soderstrom reached the six and Arbeene made it first down at the 5. The Winchester line was giving ground grudgingly, and Soderstrom was able to pick up only a yard at tackle, through with an important first down. On his next thrust through center, he plunged to the one yard stripe.

The Sachems dug in and Arbeene was held without gain a yard short of pay dirt. It was "fourth and goal" when Soderstrom lunged into the line, and this time the officials ruled he had made it. It was a very close call, but possibly correct, since Winchester did not protect, and Arbeene ran for the extra two points that made the Lexington total 20.

Great Catch by Stavros

Lexington kicked off to Dave Rowe who ran the ball from the Winchester 15 to the 32 as the final quarter commenced. John Stavros carried for four, and then Bobby Branley hit Stavros again for a first down at the 32. Stavros fought for the ball in the air and made a fine completion.

Two passes were grounded and then on a draw play Rowe went to the 23. Once again it was Stavros who picked up the first down at the 20.

Here a handoff was fumbled and recovered by Winchester back on the 22. Rowe reached the 18 yard line and Branley again hit Dick Papadinis this time with a pass at the 14. The stands were in an uproar as Steve Goldin bulled his way to the six for a first down, but Stavros slipped and fell on a sweep at the 11 and a pass was batted from Rowe's eager arms in the end zone.

Winchester Scores

Branley dropped back again to pass but was snowed under at the 12 when he found his receivers covered. Trying it once more on fourth down Branley connected with Papadinis for a touchdown that looked as easy as pie. On an attempted sweep for the extra points Goldin was caught from behind and pulled down.

Arbeene ran the kickoff back to the 17, and from there until the end of the game Lexington ran out the clock on the ground with Soderstrom and Jenson doing most of the carrying off Winchester's left tackle.

Lexington Safety

Winchester started well when Arbeene ran Frongillo's long kickoff out to the seven-yard line. Jenson reached the 11 and Arbeene added two before Vic Lawson smashed through to drop Yeomans on a sweep at the three.

Busa dropped back to kick, but the pass was away over his head and went through the end zone for an automatic safety.

First Score for Lexington

The teams exchanged the ball after this score, before Yeomans rolled out and rifled a long pass far down the field which Spinelli hauled in at the Winchester 11-yard line.

On second down Jenson broke the next play Soderstrom went over. Yeomans' handoff to Jenson through center to the one, and on for the extra points was no good.

Winchester had to punt after the touchdown, and Jackie Kimball hoisted one into the end zone. Lexington was called offside on the play and Kimball dropped back again. This time Lexington blocked the kick and recovered at the Winchester 41.

On a pretty pass play that went from Yeomans to Arbeene to John Glennon Lexington reached the five, but the ball was brought back for a fast start. One the next play, a quick opener over center, Soderstrom busted through center and legged it all the way to pay dirt. A Yeomans to Arbeene handoff for the extra point was piled up.

Dave Rowe ran the kickoff back to the Winchester 34. A pass was grounded. Rowe picked up only a yard, but on the next play Branley hit Rowe for a first down at the 20.

Goldin swept to the 11, but Stavros was piled up without gain, two plays after the second quarter commenced.

Stavros then got away behind some good blocking to the six-yard stripe and a first down and on the next play Steve Goldin circled his own left end to score standing up. The try for extra points was not good.

Winchester blocked a punt soon after this and recovered the ball at the Lexington 30. This advantage, however, ran out with a screen pass being piled up at the 15 and Lexington taking over.

Papadinis saved a touchdown after this when Crisp got away for a gallop to the Winchester 42, where Vic handfought the interference and brought him down.

Ed Cutting and Jackie Kimball, two of Winchester's best backs, were injured in the first quarter and were lost to the team thereafter, materially handicapping both offense and defense.

The summary.

Soccer Team Drops Overtime Thriller, 1-0

After a bitter defensive struggle with experienced Lexington, the Winchester soccer team lost the heated duel 1-0 in the second overtime period. Lexington had two weeks earlier whipped the Sachems 4-0. This second encounter showed an entirely different Winchester team.

The scrappy forward lines of George Murphy, Gerry Hills, and Ron Scherban; and Ernie Sackett, Garth Nelson and Peter Thorp, maintained an attack the equal of the Lexington team, but could not find the visitor's nets for a score. Wings Peter Harvey and Walter Harwood proved vital forces in the attack, displaying clever ball handling and timely centering to the forwards.

In past games, the Sachems had difficulty controlling the ball at mid-field. But in the Lexington game, Dick Wakefield, Hugh Fisher, Tibor Saddler, Dick Penner, and Jim Kerrigan consistently beat the opponents to the ball, thus creating offensive opportunities.

As the score indicates, the fullbacks Barry Weeks and Randy Randlett repelled the opponent attacks time after time. The playing of Randy Randlett has been so consistently fine that opposing coaches have each commented on his excellent soccer skills.

The game was tied at the end of regulation time 0-0. Then, in the second overtime period, Lexington countered their lone tally on a shot from a corner kick.

Scouting Report

MELROSE

Coach: Joe Hoague

'62 Record: 7-0-2

Little doubt that Melrose's Red Raiders will be the Sachems stiffest opposition this year. They are a team that is well-balanced, defensively and offensively, and highly-spirited. They enjoy the simple process of blocking and tackling as much as other teams enjoy passing and running. Two hundred and fifteen pound tackle Art Stratton (74) will be noticeably outstanding in these respects. Their backs are quick to move and supply a potent scoring punch. But they can be scored against, as Concord proved this last week with 14 points in a losing cause. Players to watch: Turco (28), Kasprzak (35), Verge (32), backs: Stratton (74), tackle.

Sachems Face Melrose In Big Test At Melrose This Saturday At 1:30

Winchester gets into real big league competition Saturday afternoon when the Sachems, with a 2 and 2 record, journey to Melrose to take on last year's league co-champion, Melrose, a team unbeaten and untied, going into the game.

Stoneham gave Melrose a real scare in the opening game of the season, but since that time Melrose has rolled over Reading, Lexington and Concord to keep its unbeaten record intact.

Winchester's only league victory came in the Stoneham game, its other victory being over hapless Cambridge Latin.

In taking on Melrose Winchester is definitely an underdog. Melrose defeated Lexington convincingly and also won from Concord, two teams that have beaten Winchester. It will take a big nod from Lady Luck to return the Sachems victors in their battle with Melrose Saturday.

One thing about the Middlesex League is the fact that any team can knock off any other team on any given day. You can not wholly count Winchester out at Melrose, but the odds, and rather long odds at that are riding on Melrose for this one.

Whether the Sachems are without the services of their backfield ace, Ed Cutting, is something to ponder. Cutting injured his knee against Lexington, and knees can mend slowly. Without Cutting Winchester will be at a big disadvantage against the toughest team it will face all year.

SACHEM FANS had something to cheer about here as Steve Goldin crossed into the end zone for six points in the second period of Saturday's game.

FIFTY YEARS-PLUS of Sachem football watching hasn't dulled the perception of J. Churchill Hindes, of 2 Elmwood Avenue, as he gazes intently at Saturday's action.

James Francis Thorpe, the Jim Thorpe of Carlisle and Olympic fame, was not a full-blooded Indian; his father was half-Irish, and his mother, quarter-French. Dutch and Welsh blood is also said to have flowed through his veins. His great-grandfather was the war chief of the Sac and Fox, Black Hawk, against whom a young captain named Abraham Lincoln campaigned in 1832.

"Bellino, you're a bum!"

The shout came from somewhere in row 20-odd on the Boston side of Everett's Memorial Stadium last Saturday night where the Providence Steamrollers defeated the Boston Sweepers 24-21 in a game that gave the fans little opportunity to shout at all. In fact, the loudest cheering that those 11,000-plus bored souls fashioned came when a pint-sized juvenile stole a football and raced away from pursuing Pinkerton men as half-a-dozen of his buddies donated accurate interference.

"Bellino, you're a faker! You've had it!"

The former All-American lay prostrate at mid-field as trainers of both teams worked over him. He had just been involved in a collision with defensive halfback Johnny Hopps. Among those now showing concern were quarterbacks Carl Mobley of Providence and Don Allard of Boston. The Sweeper's doctor helped him to his feet, and Joe left the field in obvious pain. The final period was almost over. A few, and only a few, Boston fans applauded his effort. As he passed in front of the Sweeper bench several players clapped their hands and hollered encouragement.

All considered it was probably the worst night that Joe can remember. Not that he played poorly, he spent the entire game being double and triple teamed. When he was loose, passes went to someone else, or went astray. Still, Joe was a disappointed young man. — Knowing him, he probably felt he had let a lot of people down.

Joe's injury, a dislocated shoulder, was a common occurrence last week end. Winchester High's Jack Kimball, with a badly bruised shoulder, was, for a while, feared to have either broken or separated it in the Sachem's loss to Lexington. And on Sunday afternoon, Philadelphia Eagle quarterback Sonny Jurgensen fractured his right shoulder in a game with Cleveland, while star Detroit Lion linebacker Joe Schmidt also dislocated his . . . Missing from the Providence-Boston game was Sachem line coach Charlie Martin, a better than average offensive end . . . Dana Kelly, Senior of Mystic Avenue, a former Harvard varsity alumnus, Class of 1928, will be on hand to watch his son, Dana, Junior, quarterback Dartmouth against Harvard this Saturday at the Stadium . . . From a copy of the 1930 Star comes this accolade concerning the Winchester Town Team that will participate with the Woburn semi-pro football club in a reunion to be held November 10 at St. Anthony's Hall in North Woburn: "Coach Mansfield paid a fine tribute to the members of the town team, most of whom had played under him at high school. He stated that they in the truest sense of the word were playing football for the real love of the game, and expressed the hope that the town team might grow into a boy's club to give the youth of the town something with which to occupy its spare time . . . The outstanding factor in the team's success was the splendid condition in which the boys kept themselves, being especially strong defensively. Many of the boys played football under Coach Wendell Mansfield at Winchester High, and the town team showed the same clean brand of play which had been characteristic of the local school."

Boat Club Members Meet For Supper, Business And The Awarding Of Trophies

The members of the Winchester Boat Club got together last Friday evening and enjoyed a chowder, pie and ice cream repast before tackling the official business of the club for the year.

The annual meeting heard a welcome from the commodore and reports from both secretary and treasurer before electing the following persons to lead them for next year: Walter Y. Josephson, commodore; Vincent T. Berger, vice commodore; Everett D. Littlefield, rear commodore; James A. Newman, secretary, and Stanley D. Gardiner, treasurer.

Elected as directors were: William W. Bartell, Jr., Walter Cronburg, Warren B. Dannenberg, James J. Harrington, Jr., John H. Ivers, Alton D. Jones, Thomas Raphael, E. B. Suneson, Ralph M. Swanson, and Richard R. Thuma, Jr.

After listening to a most satisfactory report from Shu-Shu-Gah trustees, the commodore awarded the following trophies: the Shu-Shu-Gah Trophy to Robert Olsen; the Sidney R. Burr Trophy to Mary Ann Patrick, the George B. Field Trophy to Roger Howell and the Commodore's Trophy to Ronald MacDonald.

The William B. Hall Trophy, awarded to Richard C. Chase, was presented by James J. Harrington, last year's winner. A short sketch of what the trophy stood for was explained by Mr. Harrington.

A report of the Women's Bridges was given by Mrs. Victoria Soucek who was co-chairman with Mrs. Geoffrey Kerrigan. One of their outstanding activities of the year was a welcoming party to all the new members at the home of Mrs. Geoffrey Kerrigan with more than forty attending. Their monthly poolside coffees, fashion show, water show by Mrs. Birchall made this a memorable year for the women. And Mrs. Soucek and Mrs. Kerrigan have agreed to head up the women's activities for another year.

Thomas Legere gave a brief account of the Snipe fleet's activities. Last year there was a fleet of 27 and this year a fleet of 37. They attended meets at Marblehead, Cottage Park, Winthrop, Quincy, Quassapaug and the National Meet in Texas, at which our Tommy got tenth place out of a fleet of 70 boats. Congratulations Tommy!

Mr. Suneson spoke for the Turnabouts. He says there was a fleet of 53 anchored in front of the club. They participated in several meets and hope to have a large Junior fleet next year.

Then Commodore Josephson gave a brief summary of the achievements at the club this year and this in spite of the various handicaps which occurred at different times. He thanked all the officers and directors for their support, and promised to do all in his power to make 1964 the best ever.

Winchester Boat Club

Sunday, October 13, saw the last of the season's formal Snipe activities at the Winchester Boat Club. The season's end was punctuated with a winsome ballad by Clarence Borggaard and wry remarks by Ralph Swanson, who presented trophies to winning Snipers after a dinner party jointly sponsored with the Club's Turnabout Fleet.

The overall Snipe champion of the Winchester Boat Club is not new to the winner's circle. Once again Tom Legere, Jr., made the most of the Mystic Lake's unpredictable puffs. He caught a whisper of a breeze that put him 2/27ths of a point in front of Terry Cronburg. Dick Montminy kept the pressure on the first two boats by consistently keeping his Snipe "Allegro" near the front of the fleet of thirty local Snipe Sailors.

The results of the season are:

Overall Point Score

1st, Tom Legere; 2nd, Terry Cronburg; 3rd, Dick Montminy

Series "A"

1st, Tom Legere; 2nd, Ralph Swanson; 3rd, Rob Dannenberg

Series "B"

1st, Terry Cronburg; 2nd, Paul Chase; 3rd, Clarence Borggaard

Series "C"

Director's Trophy

1st, Ralph Swanson; 2nd, Dick Patrick; 3rd, Paul Chase

Alden Sherman

1st, Shanley-Raphael; 2nd, Dick Thuma, Jr.; 3rd, Clarence Borggaard

Snipe Juniors

1st, Dick Thuma, III; 2nd, John Berger; 3rd, Ralph Swanson, Jr.

The Junior Snipe races saw several new contestants this year. Many of the club's younger members are in transition from Turnabouts to Snipes and this has produced a new interest among the Juniors. Young Thuma took this series for the second year in a row, but is faced with increased competition by renewed interest of his colleagues.

The fleet's Juniors plan to send several crews to the N. E. Junior Championships next summer and are looking forward to bringing this championship back to the Winchester Boat Club.

Soccer Team Loses 3-2 In Double Overtime

After showing a scoring punch which put the Sachems in a 2-1 lead, Belmont rebounded to hand the Winchester soccer team its second straight double overtime loss, 3-2.

Belmont drew first blood, scoring early in the first period. During the first half, the Red and Black booters had difficulty pulling together as a team.

But in the second half, the story changed. The Sachems began to pass and tackle better, their confidence soon developing into a score. With the ball deep in enemy territory, Hugh Fisher moved up from his halfback position to score on a line drive boot into the right corner of the goal. The score now tied 1-1, Winchester put extra pressure on the Belmont defense.

In a third period breakaway, George Murphy, Ron Scherban and Walter Harwood passed until within range of the Belmont goal. Then Walt Harwood slammed the tie-breaker past the opposing goalie.

With three minutes remaining, Belmont knotted the score on a high bouncing ball past goalie Dennis O'Connell. In the final three minutes attempts by Gerry Hills and Peter Harvey came very close to breaking the tie, but the threats were repelled.

Then, in the second overtime period, Belmont scored, sending the Sachems home with their second straight overtime loss. Although Belmont scored three goals, Dennis O'Connell played one of his most outstanding games in the goal.

Though disappointed in these two losses, coaches Knight and Bouley feel that the young team has nothing to be ashamed of. Although the team still has much to learn about the game, their aggressive play and competitive spirit have made this an outstanding squad.

BOWLING

S.O.I. Men

The 6-2 win over Alabama kept Notre Dame in first place while the losers still hold down next to last position in the league of fourteen teams. Moose Bellino hit for excellent strings of 119-120-123 for the winners while his teammate Randy Kazazian must have used his left hand since he rolled 60-65-78. Going strong for the losers was Mingie Frongillo who stayed right in there with 93-127-100.

Despite its 8-0 defeat at the hands of third place Bates, Yale is still holding second rating in the standing. Bates is captained by Bob Fiore who had a good night and broke Moose Bellino's high for three strings by two pins. The high triple is now 396 and in the three strings Bob got 141-118-137. Top performers for losing Yale were Bill Fiore 109-103-110, Capt. Richie Bucci 86-113-113 and Chick Vespucci 109-99-96.

Boston College took Army 6-2 which moved the winners up one from eleventh while the defeated dropped one to fourth. B. C.'s Capt. Tony Saraco was best with 95-121-106 and was followed by Andy Buzzotta with 99-112-100. The only 300 hitter for Army was Capt. Frank Gangi who hit for 89-106-112.

The 8-0 Navy win over Georgetown climbed the victors to fifth from seventh while Georgetown dropped from fourth to eighth. The record of high single by Frank Provinzano of 154 was nearly broken by his Capt. Richie Riga who rolled for 152 in his second string. In his other two strings he rolled 105 and 110.

Sixth and last places are held by Holy Cross and St. Mary's, respectively, although H. C. won by 6-2. Neither team had a 300 bowler. Phil Ardagno of St. Mary's was closest with 95-85-108.

California and Harvard split at four each keeping the latter in ninth spot but California moved up one spot to seventh. The sole roller in the match to go over 300 was Hokie Procopio who finished with strings of 96-90-115.

Maryland went from twelfth to eleventh after knocking off Penn who moved from tenth to twelfth. Having a big hand in the 6-2 Maryland win were Tony Bavuso connecting for 95-111-104 and Johnny Dattilo 92-84-123. Carl Bertolucci topped the loser's unit with strings of 100-97-101.

S.O.I. Women

Strike Lanes provided all new beautiful bowling balls last week. It sure was a treat for the girls. Hats off to the management. The new bowling balls provided some good pinfalls. With the exception of one, all teams rolled 3 string totals in the 1200s.

Kools still top team, but Luckies are only 2 points behind. Luckies were the only team to take all 8 points last week. Kay Lentine is captain of the Luckies and a more determined gal to win. Good going, Luckies, keep it up!

Eleanor Tucci, captain of the Kools, sure had a thrill with two strikes in a row. Maybe next time it will be three strikes in a row Eleanor. We hope so!

K. of C.

After six weeks of bowling some of the boys are finally warming up. Last Thursday night at the Strike Lanes, some of the league records took a beating. Bob Fiore started things off by bowling 131,147, 110 for a record three-string total of 388. However, a protest has been lodged to the committee because of the way he abuses the foul line. Al Gullotti led the Redskins on a scalping party when he came up with a total of 350 to shut out the Colts 8 to 0.

The Redskins as a team had a one string total of 512 for another record. The Packers also set a record for three strings with a total of 1475.

Was that a display of temperament put on by John Mulrenan when he walked off the alley after missing two "pigeon" spares in a row? He has gone from the sublime to the ridiculous, from first to last place, in one year.

There is a crucial game coming up this week, when the Redskins and the 49ers meet in the battle for last place.

Early Birds

Pacesetters in the Winchester Early Birds ten pin bowling league at the Atlantic Ten Pin lanes of Woburn are:

1st place team: Mrs. M. Petterson, 5 Fairlane Terrace; Mrs. V. Rauch, 16 Canterbury Road; Mrs. C. Eyden, 16 Bacon Street, and Mrs. B. Smith, 16 Squire Road.

High average 142, Mrs. H. Martell, 1 Kenilworth Road

High series 469, Mrs. M. Petterson, 5 Fairlane Terrace

High single 180, Mrs. Connie Gibbs, 43 Thornberry Road

The girls are really rolling that ball at a terrific pace. Every Thursday morning at 9 a.m. they're ready to go even before the lanes are open. We have them standing outside pounding on the doors to get them unlocked, they do this so that they may hide the right ball before someone else beats them to it. Enthusiasm is the by-word for this league. Keep up the good work girls.

Concord Trips Lynch 16-0 In Well Played Game

The 16-0 loss of Lynch to Concord is not a true indication of what the game really was. The contest was one well played by both elevens and if the breaks went the way of the Lynch unit the final results could have been different, It should also be realized by interested readers that when the Lynch and McCall varsity teams compete against the schools in the Middlesex League, those teams (except for Lexington who also has two junior high schools) put together their strongest units consisting of all athletes in the ninth grade while our own ninth grade athletes are split into two groups.

Coach Frank Provinzano realizes this factor and sees advantages and disadvantages. He feels that our system includes more boy's participation which is a good thing at this age level. He also feels that because so many do take part in the program, the pay-off will show later after the boys have learned the fundamentals of the game which are then put into practice one or two years later in high school competition.

Despite the loss against a Concord team which has tasted four successive victories, Coach Provinzano is extremely proud of the showing his squad has made in games gone by. It is true the bench is not deep and the platoon system is impossible but the coach tries very hard to have as many boys as possible enter each game. There are a few who have yet to taste actual game competition but there are various reasons for this and the outstanding one is that the safety of the boy is first considered. When the opportunity arises the bench will be cleared but patience is a virtue. As the Concord coach mentioned, "We have to be mothers first and coaches second."

Lynch kicked off to Concord to get the game on the way and in the first series of plays Concord was stalled and had to punt out of danger. The Lynch running game got rolling early but offsides brought the ball back after long gains of 20 to 35 yards at three different occasions in the opening period. Doing the carrying in these runs that went for naught were quarterback Brian Collins, halfback Jim Mumma and fullback Bob Russo. The latter went off tackle for 35 yards to wind up on the twelve yard line only to be called back because of an anxious lineman jumping the signal. Had these runs held firm Lynch, no doubt, would have gone in to score which could have given them that much more inspiration and desire to go further but—

The first half ended with a 0-0 score and the third period closed with neither team crossing pay dirt. Then midway through the final period one of Jim Mumma's punts was blocked on Lynch's 45 yard stripe with Concord picking up the loose ball and going all the way. The rush for the extra points was successful and Concord went ahead 8-0.

In the closing minutes Russo and Mumma combined their efforts with some strong running and when just over Concord's territory a Collins pass intended for end Kevin Barry was intercepted and after two running plays were halted, Concord's left end was able to get by defending halfback Ed Murphy for a beautiful pass completion and second touchdown with the extra points again successful. The game ended a short time after and with much disappointment, the boys left the scene of action by shaking hands and congratulating the winning combine. That type of spirit, too, has its carry-over values!

Lynch takes the road on Friday (tomorrow) to take on a big and strong Wakefield team so come on over and cheer the boys. Pat them on the back, they deserve it.

Middlesex League First to Get Cousy Clinic

Belmont High School will host the seven other Middlesex League members at the first Bob Cousy basketball clinic this Friday evening at the High School Gym at 7:30 p.m.

Jointly sponsored by H. P. Hood & Sons Physical Fitness Program and the Boston Traveler, the clinic will feature a two period all-star game with Bob playing one period with each team.

The two all-star teams will be made up of two representatives from each of the Middlesex entries: Belmont, Melrose, Winchester, Concord, Stoneham, Wakefield, Reading and Lexington. Each of the league's coaches will also be on hand.

"Mr. Basketball," who in addition to his coaching duties at Boston College is chairman of H. P. Hood Milk Company's Physical Fitness Program, puts on an hour and a half clinic demonstrating all the fundamentals and intricacies he learned as an All-American at Holy Cross and as captain of the World Champion Boston Celtics.

Free tickets have been distributed to each of the member high schools and from the manner in which they were snapped-up, a sell-out crowd is assured.

BOODAKIAN GANG BEATS THE RAP

(Part Two)

Fellow citizens, I think you will agree that the BOODAKIAN case has stirred more than passing interest in the community.

When we left the courtroom last week, the BOODAKIAN CLAN was valiantly trying to tear our rug case apart. They had admitted to a lengthy indictment which included: Dipping rugs and carpets in special solutions, stretching and sizing them, using scissors, cutting blades, and needle and thread, as well as selling rugs and carpets into domestic slavery.

Although the defendants, ORIENTAL Harry, BROADLOOM Leo, and HOOKED BRAID Mike, had admitted to the counts against them, they had also promised a stout defense. It must be said, in all fairness to the wily gang, that up until the point of adjournment it was doing quite well in this department. The credit must go to HOOKED BRAID Mike, self-styled orator, and group defense counsel.

As you may have guessed by the headline, we didn't win this case. Like the poor rugs and carpets involved, we civic-minded citizens couldn't make the public, there assembled, believe that anything shady had been going on for all of these years. We suppose you still want to know how the BOODAKIAN GANG managed to beat the rap, so here goes.

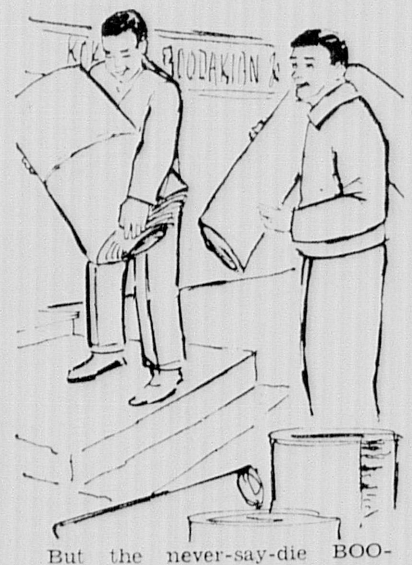
When we last heard from HOOKED BRAID Mike he had explained how hundreds of important persons, including many of you, I am sure, attended a big party to inaugurate a brand new artistic masterpiece of a showroom in 1954. After the big party, the gang sold even more rugs and carpets of OUTSTANDING BEAUTY and taste indiscriminately to whomever took a fancy to them. The years rolled by and the rugs kept rolling in and out of the secret process cleaning plant and the much-talked about sunken showroom.

More and more money rolled into the BOODAKIAN coffers. But then, in 1958, a fire of undetermined origin all but finished the gang. It consumed the SECRET CLEANING PROCESS PLANT and part of the showroom. Everyone for blocks around hurried to the Boodakian store, all of them bent on trying to save as many of the trapped rugs as possible. Even the gang members risked their necks to save rugs and carpets from the hungry flames.

Scores of those involved took the rugs and carpets to their homes for safe keeping as the general alarm fire burned itself through the plant and other facilities.

The New England Institute of Rug Cleaners came down the following day and carted off many smoked and grime-filled rugs and carpet victims to be given proper attention. HOOKED BRAID Mike testified on the stand that it was probably one of the worst fires in Winchester's History because several firemen were felled by smoke and the big blaze roared unchecked for some six hours.

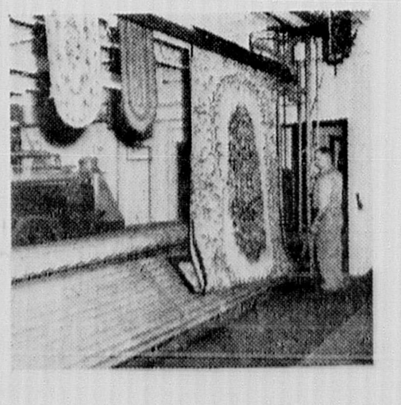
As Mike stated earlier, the cause was unknown, but one bystander at the blaze that night remarked that a few of the rugs looked pretty burned up over the whole affair.



But the never-say-die BOODAKIANS were back in business a few days later. The sales room was relocated temporarily in Lyceum Hall at Winchester Center, on the second floor. It was to have been a temporary arrangement, but remained as the new Boodakian headquarters until September of 1961.

Meanwhile, the gang, shortly after the fire, had already formulated plans to rebuild the plant and to set up more permanent showroom facilities. . . . They were to be BIGGER & BETTER if possible. The operation was split into two parts with the old plant facilities becoming just that.

The new plant was bigger and completely modernized. In spite of the fire, the plant had expanded from a 10-pole dryroom in 1938 to an 80-pole facility in 1963. Within could be hanged no less than 160 nine by twelve rugs. Other modern machinery, designed and built to BOODAKIAN CLAN specifications, was brought in.



When set up for modern operation, the workroom could handle any type of repair job on rugs and carpets from machine stitching and binding, to serging and edging quickly and professionally without losing sight of the still not FORGOTTEN ART of hand repairing.

The gang also realized it had to have new facilities for sales. So it bought what was then a large garage at 1026 Main Street, Winchester, and had it completely renovated. All was ready in July of 1961, and so the gang moved out of Lyceum Hall in Winchester Center to its new sales headquarters. It took a couple of months to get the place ship-shape and ready for the grand opening.

But finally the big day came and, as always, the BOODAKIAN GANG put on a big PUBLIC SHOW citing the outstanding features of their new and even more spacious showroom. It can be safely said that the present facilities for sales are the largest of their kind in the New England States.

Former Governor, John Volpe, sent his wife over to do the honors as far as launching the new sales facility on (as we all know) a very successful career. The date was Labor Day 1961. There was another big open house affair and about a month later, the gang: ORIENTAL Harry, BROADLOOM Leo, and HOOKED BRAID Mike, held a private party on the premises for other members of the rug beating industry.

And that, friends, is the long and not exactly dull story of the BOODAKIAN gang. A history of one rug clan that spans a quarter of a century.

Did the public make the right decision in this here trial? Well, I hear that many of these same persons who wanted to see justice done are down at the BOODAKIAN SALES ROOM RIGHT NOW buying those same rugs we worked so hard to set free. As for we civic-minded people, well the whole affair seems kind of silly now. As a matter of fact, the scales of justice seem to be in balance at the moment. Our wives, you see, have banded together in a BUY BOODAKIAN RUG CLUB. So we the hunters, having become the hunted, have decided that if you can't lick them join 'em. Oh neighbor, one more thing! . . . Take it from us . . . it pays to walk softly if you don't carry a big stick, so starting today, our better halves say we'll be doing all of our future walking on BOODAKIAN RUGS!!! HOW ABOUT YOU???

Former Italian King Is Guest Of Volpe's In Winchester Visit

Ex-Governor and Mrs. John A. Volpe entertained former King Umberto, II, of Italy at their 10 Everett Avenue home on Thursday afternoon, October 24th, between 2 and 3 p.m. The former king, who reigned during the brief transition period following World War II and the creation of the Republic of Italy, visited Winchester prior to his leaving for Chicago, and a month's tour of the United States.

During his one hour local visit, the former king met and talked with several Winchester residents, including Chief and Mrs. Joseph J. Derro. Chief Derro presented the royal visitor with a badge making him an honorary member of the Winchester Police Department, which his majesty greatly appreciated.

In the former king's party were his aid, the Marquis Lucifero, minister of Casa Reale, and Prince Ruspoli. In talking with the Marquis, Chief Derro discovered that they had both been born in about the same southwestern area of Italy.

Also present at the reception were Peter E. Donadio and his wife, Grand Venerable of the Order of the Sons of Italy in Massachusetts, Dr. Vinzo Comito, a radio announcer associated with Il Progresso, an Italian newspaper and radio corporation, and Gino Merluzzi, a radio announcer with WLYN of Lynn.

On his visit to Massachusetts the former king was the guest of Mr. Volpe for three days. Mr. Volpe hosted his royal guest at a dinner held on Monday night at the Statler Hotel in Boston. Over 75 persons attended the $75-a-plate dinner, the proceeds of which went to support the Italian Migration Committee, which helps persons of Italian ancestry in the U. S. Local residents who attended the dinner, among others, were Leonard Barbo of 9 Lakeview Road, Salvatore Cantella of 19 Taft Drive, and Leo Pistorino of 44 Myopia Road.

The king made a short visit to Tufts College on Wednesday, and on Thursday morning he visited elderly citizens at the Orione Home in East Boston, many of whom, natives of Italy, were touched at meeting the former king—some recalling the former king's father and background of the Savoia family rulers.

ARSONIST STRIKES IN WINCHESTER. For the first time in many years an arsonist has struck in this small suburban community. Both the front and rear entrances of a dwelling at 51 Vine Street were intentionally set on fire by a "torch," or arsonist, early on Monday morning. A member of the Scholl family heard noises in the yard and spotted one of five fires set by inflammable liquids around the house in a deliberate attempt to make an incendiary out of it. The Fire Department was alerted in time to prevent the fire from burning the house or injuring its 10 occupants.

Arsonist Sets Fire At Vine Street Dwelling; Police Look For Clues

A Winchester family of ten was endangered, and their house threatened, when an arsonist maliciously and intentionally set fire to their home with inflammable liquids early on Monday morning while the family was sleeping.

Shortly before 3:30 a.m., the arsonist methodically poured kerosene or some similar flammable substance over the front and rear steps to the Robert Scholl home at 51 Vine Street, sealing off the two entrances to the house. Kerosene was also poured over the back porch, the side porch, along the south side foundation of the house, beside the garage, under the family's station wagon on the driveway, and over leaves on the yard near these points. The arsonist then ignited the leaves and left while the "fuse" burned toward the house.

Frederick Scholl heard some noises in the yard and woke up and looked out to see who was there. Fortunately, he saw the burning leaves around the car. He yelled "Fire!" and awoke the other nine members of the family, ranging in ages from 3 to 74, and called the Fire Department, which responded and quelled the flaming liquids before the house blaze got a chance to develop.

The State Fire Marshal's office and the local Fire and Police Departments, working in conjunction with each other, are investigating the criminal offense which could have resulted in a catastrophic tragedy. It was the first such case of deliberate arson the town has seen in many, many years, according to Acting Fire Chief Peter Galuffo, who said he knew of no other kind of its nature locally in the 17 years he has served with the Winchester Fire Department.

On arriving at the Scholl home to put out what they thought would be an ordinary brush fire, Acting Lt. Henry P. O'Melia and firefighters Robert Swymer and John Nowell found five small fires burning: one riser and two treads of the front stairs, leaves and wooden shingles at the rear porch, along the foundation, beside the garage, and beneath the right rear fender of the 1957 Pontiac station wagon. When they had put out the fires, the damage had been confined to the front steps and shingles of the back porch.

The firefighters smelled strong odors of kerosene at the fire locations and in searching the premises for the causes of the distinctively separate fires "of suspicious origin," they discovered broken bottles at the rear of the dwelling and

'64 UF Campaign For Funds Starts Friday

Winchester's United Fund residential drive officially starts tomorrow, November 1st, and it is hoped that the town's goal can be reached within one week, according to Audley Clarke of 65 Myopia Road, chairman of the local UF Drive.

Approximately 700 Winchester volunteers are expected to participate in the drive which enables over 200 charitable services and agencies to continue helping the needy of this country.

"We hope to obtain pledges for the year as well as actual cash," Mr. Clarke said, "because this will enable residents to spread their donations throughout the year as they wish.

"The amount of the donation, or pledge, is naturally up to each individual," he added, "but we do ask that donors realize that the amount they give must be divided 200 ways." While every donation is welcomed by the UF, it is easy to see that each agency receives theoretically only one-half cent out of each dollar.

Each year, the United Fund volunteers are repeatedly asked many questions by residents, such as:

Who decides where the money goes which is raised each year?

According to Mr. Clarke, funds are allocated by a completely unbiased volunteer committee made up of informed men and women from all walks of life who carefully study all financial requests from participating agencies.

Why aren't all fund-raising campaigns in the United Fund?

Mr. Clarke said that many local chapters of various drives would like to join the United Fund but they are forbidden to do so by their national organizations. The United Fund maintains an open-door policy to any and all such campaigns which can prove they are providing a necessary community service.

Middlesex Bar Offers Public Legal Service

The Middlesex County Bar Association has voted to initiate a plan to put a lawyer within the reach of anyone who needs legal services and advice, but doesn't know a lawyer.

The Middlesex Bar Association is joining the American Bar Association and two hundred others, throughout the country, who are concerning themselves with the difficulties that beset the middle income group in obtaining legal services. Unable to afford large fees and fearful of the consequences of random attorney selection, the legal affairs of the vast majority of this group are neglected and their interests unrepresented.

The "plan" is simple. "Panel members" of the Middlesex County Bar Association agree to see a referred client for a one-half hour consultation for $5.00. If further

Dedication Of Honor Roll On Veterans Day

Veterans Day on Monday, November 11th, will be celebrated a little differently this year, with many more of the town's numerous veterans both from and outside of town expected to attend the special dedication ceremony for the Town's new Memorial Honor Roll in tribute to its citizens who served in the armed forces.

Construction on the new Honor Roll, to replace the old bedraggled temporary one that stood in front of the Town Hall, was begun shortly after the Town Meeting voted to appropriate $10,000 for it in March. It was completed at the end of July, with the $500 remaining over and above the original appropriation for the dedication ceremony still available for the Veterans Day observance and dedication.

The tentative lineup of the program for Veterans Day and the dedication of the Honor Roll is as follows:

Winchester Police - Escort
Commanders of the American Legion and Veterans of Foreign Wars
Board of Selectmen
Color Guards of the American Legion and Veterans of Foreign Wars
Firing Squad, Co. C, 101st Engineering Battalion, Mass. National Guard, Woburn

Local Retirees Offered Florida Retirement Place

John J. Barry, president of local branch 243 of the National Association of Letter Carriers, announced today that on behalf of his letter carrier membership, retirees of the Winchester area have been invited to join the letter carriers at their new Florida retirement community, NALCREST.

According to Mr. Barry, NALCREST was originally constructed as a retirement haven for letter carriers. However, realizing that others would enjoy this type of retirement living, the letter carriers enlarged the scope of their project to accomodate retirees from this community.

NALCREST is a four and one-half million dollar self-contained community in central Florida with its own shopping center, post office, 500-seat auditorium, marina, swimming pool with cabanas, and all the other services necessary for modern

Parachute Drops Weather Balloon On Cemetery Tree

Dropping out of an "Indian Summer" sky on Thursday afternoon, October 24, a small orange-red parachute dropped onto a tree in Wildwood Cemetery, and became entangled in its high branches.

An observer of this unusual occurrence at the cemetery, Max Hammond, telephoned police and described what had happened. The police, in turn, asked the Fire Department to go up with a ladder truck and retrieve the strange object which had alighted in Winchester.

Acting Fire Chief Peter Galuffo sent Acting Lt. Henry O'Melia and firefighters Bernard Stygles, Joseph McDonough and John Hennelly to the scene. When they brought the parachuted object down from the tree, they discovered it was a weather balloon with a modulator-radiosonde, a high altitude weather data gathering device which at one time transmitted in-

Illegal Alien's Return To Town Means 2nd Arrest

A 35-year-old South American man, Maxim Gabriello, who was arrested in Winchester on Thursday, September 12, for disturbing the peace in bothering a local family and their young girl charge, and who was court-ordered to stay out of this area, was arrested a second time on Wednesday, October 16, for violation of his probation.

After the man was identified by School Department personnel when he had gone to several elementary schools in search of the girl to take her away with him to stay with another relative, local police requested Cambridge Police to arrest him for violation of the court order when he returned to a Cambridge concern with a rented car.

Rainfall Is Welcome Relief After Drought

With most of the country, including Massachusetts, suffering under conditions of severe drought for the past month, Winchester has not been alone in experiencing this lack of water replenishments. "Even with the rainfall of Monday and Tuesday," says William Conlon, superintendent of the Water Department, "Winchester is still in a serious drought condition."

While with 242.6 million gallons left in its supply of water on hand at the three Fells reservoirs as of Monday morning, and a plentiful supply still available to the Town through the Metropolitan District Commission's tapline, local households and businesses have not exactly had to worry about any inadequacy of water resources for public use; nevertheless, according to the Water Department, the Winchester water supply is the lowest it has been for many years.

The Town's reservoirs are down five feet from what they should be normally at this time of year. Last week Horn Pond Brook was completely dried up, and the bare brook bed was a distressing sight to anyone who knows the value of water resources. Big Winter Pond was almost non-existent, with only small patches of water left on the stony bed. And there were other examples.

But this week it has rained here, 1.59 inches in the 24-hour period between Monday norning and 8 a.m. on Tuesday. "But most of this is going straight down into the dry earth," said Mr. Conlon, "very little of it is running off as it usually would." However, some needed water has been added to the reservoirs, and Horn Pond Brook is beginning to flow again, and Big Winter Pond is gradually regaining its body of water. Wedge Pond is in good shape because it appears to be partially spring fed.

Generally speaking, Winchester is in an enviable situation so far as its water supply is concerned, for even with the 10 to 11-inches less rainfall so far this year from what it was last year, and with a daily local consumption of 2 million gallons a day (700,000 of it from the M.D.C.) there has been no curtailment of services here as there has been in many other cities and towns across the nation.

This condition is in large part due to the foresight and planning of previous Water and Sewer Boards, consulting engineers, former water superintendent James Halwartz, and various Town Meetings in preparing and providing for future needs and possible conditions by developing the reservoirs the water supply system, and going in with the M.D.C. in its vast water system which puts out between 200 to 225 million gallons a day to 30 Greater Boston communities from its Quabbin Reservoir near Athol.

Police Going All-Out On 33rd Gala Concert

The Winchester Police Association has gone all-out this year in planning and preparing the best annual concert in its 32 year existence as an annual town and police social event. The committee for the annual concert has lined up a good two and one-half hour show, beginning at 8 p.m. on Wednesday, November 6, at the Memorial Auditorium in the High School, and features both professional entertainment and new events this year of local interest.

As a part of the program this year, which has not been done before in Winchester, there will be an award presented to the policeman (one or more) who, during the past year in the performance of his police duties, has displayed an outstanding example of meritorious service.

The award will be a scroll certificate naming the officer and his accomplishment, and a wooden plaque bearing a description of the award for meritorious service.

The winner of the award was selected by an impartial committee, consisting of a member of the Board of Selectmen, Edward Hicks, two representatives of the press, David McLean of the Star and Charley Riley of the Woburn Times, and Lt. Edward Bowler of the Police Department, who, for several years, has advocated having such an award for public recognition of some of the fine police work that is done locally in protecting the town and its people. The award will be presented during the concert intermission by Shailer Avery, chairman of the Board of Selectmen.

Another innovation this year is the introduction of a souvenir program booklet, which will be given out at the concert. In the 32 years of the annual Policeman's Ball, and now Concert, there have been only two of these programs, the last one being 12 years ago.

The souvenir program will have a nine page history of the local department, written by Lt. Bowler, a short story about the Police Association, individual pictures of each police officer and of all the past chiefs, a group picture of the Auxiliary Police Department, and a group picture of the School Traffic Officers. There will be full page photographs of Joseph Quigley and Lt. Edward O'Connell, who retired this year and to whom the program is dedicated. There will also be a picture of John Boyle, who passed away this year and was the only police officer who died while still on the active duty roster.

There will be four acts put on by major entertainers at the concert, featuring Ford and Reynolds, a comedy dance and song team which has appeared seven times already this year on the Ed Sullivan TV Show and who are now at the Frolics Nightclub. Also appear-

'63 UF Campaign For Charity $$ Starts Tomorrow

Some 49 Greater Boston cities and towns including Winchester will kick off their residential drives for the United Fund "People Helping People" campaign on Friday, November 1. This year's goal is $10.1 million.

Small amounts multiplied to big sums will make the difference between victory and defeat in the United Fund's effort to make its $10.1 million goal 1963 chairman Elliot L. Richardson asserted on the eve of the residential kick-off.

"We can't look for large amounts of money in any one place now. We already have the big contributions, so whether we succeed depends on the ability of the community to raise smaller amounts hundreds of times over," Mr. Richardson said.

Greater Boston givers never have hurdled the $10 million barrier, and Mr. Richardson and his thousands of volunteers are determined to accomplish the leap this year.

He noted that in industry, government, education and other groups there has been increased giving by employee groups through payroll deductions and by corporate aid. However, he cautioned that stepped-up efforts are needed if the fund is to meet its goal by November 20.

Mr. Richardson stated that the metropolitan residential campaign was vital towards meeting the goal, through house to house giving by those who have not previously contributed; and by contributions from small enterprises in the 49 towns that comprise the United Fund of Greater Boston.

On Thursday, October 17, Police Chief Joseph Derro asked the Woburn District Court judge for a disposition to turn the man over to State Police, who wanted to try him on a more serious offense that occurred on Cape Cod. Local police also discovered that federal immigration authorities had a pick-up order on Gabriello for illegal entry into this country.

Chief Derro suggested to State Police that they try and have the Barnstable District Court set a high bail on Gabriello to prevent him from jumping a court appearance. State Police attempted to get the high bail, but all the court set was $7500.

Gabriello was scheduled to appear in court on Friday, October 25, but he did not appear, and has not been located since.

M. V. Dartmouth Club Schedules Fall Round-Up

Royce Randlett, president of the Mystic Valley Dartmouth Club, announced that the fall dinner meeting would be held on Wednesday, November 6, at the Winchester Country Club. Dinner, to be served at 7:30 p.m., will be preceded by a social round-up starting at 6:30 in the Country Club Tepee. Professor Gene M. Lyons, director of the Public Affairs Center and of the Great Issues Course, will be the speaker of the evening and will discuss various facets of the recent Test Ban Treaty.

Professor Lyons was graduated from Tufts College in 1947, received a license as Science Politique at the Graduate Institute of International Studies in Geneva, Switzerland, in 1949 and took his doctoral degree at Columbia University in 1958.

He joined the Dartmouth faculty in 1957 and assumed his present responsibilities in 1961.

Professor Lyons has studied and written extensively on public policy, especially in the national security area and is well versed in the background of his topic for the evening.

The Mystic Valley Dartmouth Club is associated with Dartmouth Alumni Association of Boston and embraces all Dartmouth Alumni in the towns of Arlington, Belmont, Burlington, Lexington, Medford, Winchester and Woburn.

Alumni, undergraduates and friends of the college are all invited to attend this fall meeting on November 6, at the Winchester Country Club.

Rainfall

"However," said Mr. Conlon, "even though we have a large reserve and an even larger potential reserve through the M.D.C., we always urge residents to conserve water and not waste it because it is a valuable resource. Too often water supply and water service is taken for granted; and its full value isn't appreciated until the supply is threatened or exhausted."

By observing the actual drop in the amount of water available to the townspeople during the long dry periods of 1963, the seriousness of the local water situation—although still adequate: on April 1, in the early spring, there were about 580 million gallons in the Fells reservoirs; on July 1, in the early summer, there were approximately 430 million gallons on hand; and now, near the first of November, in the fall, the supply has dwindled to somewhere near 240 million gallons.

Or, another way to look at figures showing our position relative to our cache of this life necessity: At this time in October of 1962, there were 511 million gallons in the reservoirs; in 1961, 475 million gallons; in 1960, 300 million gallons in 1959, 400 million gallons, and in 1958, 370 million gallons.

Compared to the above listed levels, both for earlier this year and for the previous five years, the present 240 million gallons—while not a condition of emergency at this time—still should be a matter of thoughtful concern to residents. While both a drought condition and yet not a cause of threat here and now; nevertheless, it may prove that citizens here are not totally unaffected by what happens weatherwise elsewhere in the nation and state.

800 Attend WHS Open House

Over 800 parents learned last Thursday evening not only what their students study, but the physical stamina that it takes as a student just going from class to class. They attended Open House at the High School.

Robert F. Williams, president of the Parent Faculty Association, welcomed parents over the PA system, and W. Howard Niblock, principal, also addressed the gathering announcing that this year, for the first time, when college representatives come to the high school, parents as well as students will be invited to the interviews. During study periods, parents visited the cafeteria where Mrs. Joseph Castignetti, P.F.A. social chairman, and her committee served cider and doughnuts throughout the evening. The committee included Mrs. Roland Hanson, Mrs. Ormond Hessler, Mrs. Louis Amoroso, Mrs. Francis D'Andraia, Mrs. Fred Cardin, Mrs. Andrew Jenike, Mrs. Joseph Church and Mrs. James Russo.

at the rear of the station wagon, and two quart Mason jars under the rear wheel of the station wagon — all of which had been used to carry the inflammable liquid — and some grey chino cotton material which had been charred in the small fire under the car.

Fire Lt. Joseph Connolly notified the Police Department of the evidence pointing to arson, and Officers John Reardon and David K. Richardson were dispatched in Patrol Car 51 to the scene to investigate the matter. The officers took the Mason jars to the Police Station to dry them out and try to obtain fingerprints; Lt. O'Melia took a disintegrated beer bottle that had been ignited but burned out back to the Fire Station to hold for Lt. Det. Jeremiah Sullivan, district investigator for the State Fire Marshal's office, which is a division of the Massachusetts Department of Public Safety and which investigates all fires of suspicious or undetermined origin.

Acting Fire Chief Peter Galuffo, who was called from his home when the fire was known to be deliberately set, said: "If the fire had not been discovered by the light sleeper who decided to check something he had heard, the small fires might have turned the house into a blazing inferno . . . and with all the entrances sealed by arsonist-set flames, we might have found ourselves faced with a multiple murder case on our hands."

"It was the worst instance of an intentionally set fire I have seen in 17 years of firefighting duty," he said, and added that the local Fire and Police Departments, as well as the State Fire Marshal's office, would pursue their investigations to the fullest extent possible.

Police and Fire investigators questioned members of the Scholl family and Vine Street neighbors on Tuesday and Wednesday to see if they could turn up any substantial clues that would give them leads in determining who the culprit was. The Scholl family said they knew of no one who might have a grudge against them, and could think of no one who might have had such a vengeful and criminally malicious intent against them. Neighbors told investigators that the Scholls were very friendly and well-liked by everyone they knew by all appearances.

Arson is a criminal offense, and is punishable by 20 years imprisonment in a state penitentiary.

Art of Japanese Flower Arranging Is Seen Here

Members and guests of the Winchester Garden Club were entertained by Mrs. Rowland V. Patrick on Thursday, October 24.

Mrs. Percy Bugbee and Mrs. Charles M. Vanner presided at the dining table where the attractive centerpiece consisted of pale yellow Fuji and white pom pom chrysanthemums with eucalyptus foliage in a French gold and white container.

The president, Mrs. Harold F. Meyer, extended a cordial welcome to the new members, Mrs. Don S. Greer and Miss Caroline D. Kellogg and attractive year books, designed by Mrs. Philip Boone, were distributed.

At the business meeting it was announced that the club had been given an award by the Bedford Veterans Hospital in recognition of volunteer service to the patients. Mrs. Harold M. Twombly and Mrs. Edward B. Mansfield are faithful workers there.

Mrs. Meyer then spoke enthusiasticially of two major projects which have been completed at the Winchester Hospital. The first was the landscaping and planting at the entrance, under the leadership of Mrs. James S. Jenks Jr. All agreed after viewing before and after pictures, that Phillip W. Ansell, well known landscape architect, had shown perfect taste in the design and the selection of cryptomerias, dog wood trees, yews and other shrubs.

The second project was the decorating of the lobby with unusual plants by Mrs. Patrick, assisted by Mrs. Alexander P. Aitken and Mrs. Mansfield. A rising vote of thanks was given to Mrs. Jenks, Mrs. Patrick and her committee.

Mrs. Robert J. Durant, a native of Japan, then spoke on "Okebana", the art of Japanese floral arrangement. She demonstrated the styles of Shoka, by using flowers and leaves of the bird of paradise plant to represent the three elements of heaven, man and earth; Rikka, using leaves, chrysanthemums and berries with the theme of a miniature garden and Nageire (which literally means "throwing in"), an arrangement in a tall vase with autumn foliage and Fuji chrysanthemums.

Moribana, the most popular style, had laurel and yellow roses. Not only were many arrangements made using other flowers but there were rules for bending branches, ways of preserving flowers and other pertinent information.

Mrs. Durant was in her native fall costume and it was a joy to watch her work with a few flowers and produce such pleasing results.

Gala Police Concert: An Important Social Event

For 32 years the Winchester Police Association has been sponsoring annual police balls, or concerts, as they have now become. Up until the last five or ten years not only has every ticket been sold for the event—which is the main source of income to the relief fund that provides death benefits to the families of deceased members—but the event was such an important social affair within the town that there wasn't a building here capable of handling everyone that wanted to get in.

In recent years, however, although almost every ticket has been sold, the number of local residents actually going to the event has been dwindling down to a small loyal several hundred.

There are several reasons for this turn of events: television can supply variety shows in the convenience of the family's living room; and with all the numerous other events going on in the town every night, and the frequency of other big social events during the course of the year, many put off going to the police concert in lieu of doing other things. Both of these reasons are unfortunate, for the Police Association really tries—and succeeds—in putting on a good show.

What is the proper perspective here? Look at it this way: do the police go around merely soliciting money, in a charity-seeking sense, to support their worth-while cause? They do not. They go out and raise money by selling tickets to an event which they go all-out to make a whopping success and an enjoyable evening for their audiences, and they come up with some very good shows. This year's promises to be one of the best, for they have inaugurated several new things of particular interest: an award ceremony for the police officer who has given particularly meritorious service during the year, and a souvenir program that will have a lot of interesting reading in it.

The townspeople show their "local spirit" by their attendance at such events as school athletic games and plays, the En Ka's Fair, the Winton Club's Cabaret, and the Hospital Friends' Waltz Evenings, among other things. Is the police concert any less important for the community to support, and not just in buying tickets but in actual attendance and enjoyment of the affair? Its profits are used for a very worth-while benefit, and judging by the high-caliber talent performing at fairly high expense, it would certainly appear that the high school's auditorium should be filled with a good audience next Wednesday night.

An important aspect of every social event in this community is, who is going, or who was there. Well, one would expect most of the town's elected officials and municipal employees certainly to be there. How about all the parents of children who are daily helped safely across local streets by police officers; could they be so ungracious as not to attend this gala affair in the same large numbers that go to PTA and open houses at the schools? How about the local merchants who are protected every day and night from theft by patrolmen, undoubtedly they will go. How about the many homeowners who have called upon the police for ambulance, burglary, theft, and other emergency calls for help?

There should be a very large turnout at this year's police concert: especially if every person who in the last year alone has been personally helped in some way by the efficient and dedicated members of the Winchester Police Department decides to go to the concert and enjoys himself that night, alongside the guardians that protect our society.

People Helping People . . .

Imagine the reaction of Winchester homeowners if they were asked four times each week of the year to contribute to one of the 200 health and welfare organizations now connected with the United Fund and whose work affects people of this and other communities. Undoubtedly, it would simply be "too much!" But this is what could happen if it were not for the United Fund, which is the most efficient and effective means yet devised to solve the problem of supporting needy charities without constant solicitations and needless duplication of fund-raising efforts.

The greatest possible saving of fund-raising costs is achieved when hundreds of separate charity drives are combined in one united fund-raising effort; it reduces an otherwise high 20 to 30 per cent of administrative costs on each fund-raising charity down to a low 7 per cent in the United Fund—meaning more of the donor's money is actually put to work in helping people as the donations were intended to do. Therefore, giving to the United Fund is the charitable equivalent of a good business investment, with the money doing more for its owner's intended use of it.

From The Editor's Desk

Moral Stigma On Fun?

Every week multitudes of publicity releases for all kinds of events, charities, and other things cross the Editor's desk, and every once in a while there is one that really stands out as being unusual.

Traditionally, tonight, Halloween night, is a happy event for thousands of youngsters in this area who long await the chance to put on a goblin or goofy gander outfit and go out "late at night" after supper and "trick or treat" for some goodies. With minor exceptions, almost everyone looks forward to enjoying Halloween . . . to see all the youngsters in their get-ups and cute mischievous smiles as they munch on chocolaty candy bars and sugary sweets.

Recently, Halloween night has also had a little something extra added to it. That is the collecting of pennies for UNICEF (United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund) by the Halloween youngsters as they go out around the neighborhoods. Without a doubt the young UNICEF collectors have generous and magnanimous hearts to give up their candy collecting pleasures for getting money to aid and support the worthwhile UNICEF programs, and we commend them for doing it. However, it seems a bit of a shame that the organizers of the drive for pennies had to pick on Halloween night - - - when this, one of their few very own special occasions. Although we do not suggest Thanksgiving Day itself as a better substitute time for such a drive, might not the day before or after Thanksgiving be a more appropriate occasion for this cause?

But, while it is kind of difficult to criticize the Halloween drive too harshly—because it concerns good kids here doing a good thing for less fortunate kids elsewhere—nevertheless, we can object to and criticize and refuse to print an objectionable section of what otherwise would have been an ordinary publicity release asking public support for the worth-while cause.

Such a paragraph in a locally written piece for the UNICEF drive attempted to shame those kids who were planning to go out and enjoy the joys of Halloween in the usual manner, and, in the same sentence, expressed an opinion (which never should have been included in a news release) in such a way as to take the editorial position that the only good kids were those who enjoyed themselves while going out for UNICEF.

Needless to say, the Star couldn't endorse such a point of view against having children enjoy one of their very few special fun times, as they have traditionally done, without stigmatical castigation from an overzealous publicity writer. Well, yes, it's a small example of the many "unusual" publicity items that editor's have to delete from copy, even here in Winchester, but it is worth pointing out to illustrate how important it is for people to read what they are reading carefully and critically.

Although many people quote it as such, the printed word isn't necessarily always the be-all and end-all of gospel truths. The printed word is the creation of human minds and hearts - - - as was the publicity release mentioned the product of a mind and heart that thought it was achieving good ends, unmindful of the means; and as a human product what is set down as the printed word is as liable to error as is any other human endeavor.

The Quality Of Mercy Is Not Strained

Editor of the Star:

An inner compulsion forces me to write the following: In fact, I think that there are three reasons. One, I have an intense love for all children and an interest in their activities. Two, I respect and love animals very much, especially horses. Three, I am a member of the M.S.P.C.A.

Friday evening as we were having dinner, we were made aware of something unusual transpiring by the uneasiness of our Collie dog. Going to the window, I was delighted to see a large hay wagon pulled by two white horses and filled with happy youngsters passing by on Forest Street. I returned to dinner, with a happy glow, thinking, "What fun!"

My illusion was soon to be shattered. About fifteen minutes later, I was to learn that this same wagon with its passengers was having difficulty making the steep ascent of Highland Avenue, the section sometimes called the Hospital Hill.

The horses, unable to carry such a load, were being badly whipped and flogged by the driver. Not one youngster removed himself from the wagon and from among the many excited voices came the shout, "Whip them harder!" After almost reaching the top the youngsters got out of the wagon.

Aside from the cruelty involved here, there also was the very real danger of an accident being caused by the many impatient cars who are not geared to horse and buggy speed. Furthermore, as Grandpa could have told us, the horse is an animal with extreme intelligence and knows immediately when a load is too heavy.

This entire episode, in itself, was most distressing, but the whole story became almost unbeleivable, when it was learned the following day, that this was a group of our Winchester youth participating in this Hay Ride.

Granted, modern youth does not have training in horse handling. However, wouldn't common sense indicate that everyone get out of the wagon and lighten the load? What about our sense of moral values here? What is happening to our modern youth that they would stand by and see helpless animals whipped?

Is mass hysteria so great that not one of these youngsters would step out or speak out for the right action? It seems that a little Humane Education would not be amiss all along the way!

Perhaps we can remember—

"He liveth best who loveth best
All things both great and small
For the dear Lord who loveth us
He made and loveth all.

Sincerely,
Elsa N. Wittet

"The Litterers"

Editor of the Star:

We love this town we live in,
And try to keep it neat,
But litterers are with us
(And may live up your street!)

They have their fun, and when they're done
They throw their trash away;
"Let someone else take care of it"
Is what they seem to say.

They don't mind exercising
For pleasure, don't you know,
But the distance to the trash-can
Is just too far to go.

They park beneath our friendly trees,
And pet, and smoke, and swear,
Consuming countless cans of beer,
Then leave them lying there.

They scatter paper far and wide,
Without qualms or regrets,
Marking their progress with the stubs
Of countless cigarettes.

And so they go their empty round
Of self-indulgent days.
Still thoughtlessly pursuing
Their pleasure-loving ways.

But, as we note their leavings
On highway, field, or lake,
We can't help wondering what sort
Of citizens they make!

Yes, we love this town we live in,
And try to keep it neat,
But litterers are with us,
(And may live up your street!)

South Pacific Benefit Dance At Wyman Saturday

As Tahiti is known as the "High Island" in the South Pacific, Saturday night's dance will be known as the "High Event" of this year's Wyman School Parents' Association.

At this annual benefit affair (November 2, 8:30) visitors on the make-believe trip to Tahiti and neighboring islands will be awarded door prizes from the following generous merchants in addition to those listed last week: three stereo records from the Sound Specialists; a shampoo and hair styling from the Riverview Beauty Salon; roses from Foresters' Flower Shop; stockings from Bettie Donald's and a gift box of soap from the Colonial Perfumers.

Tickets may be purchased from Mrs. Judson James (PA 9-6294) or from the ticket mothers. Music will be Roger Carpenter's Meltones.

Democratic Committee Activities

Next Saturday evening, November 2, will be an important one in the annals of the Democratic Town Committee. On that evening, Mr. and Mrs. Roger Harsch will entertain a group of 25 Democratic couples in their beautiful home at 10 Nassau Drive.

The unique feature of this gath- will be the make-up of the invited group. Most of them will be Democrats (a few Independents) who have lived in Winchester only a comparatively short time. They are, however, interested in the Democratic Party locally, and, in the interchange of ideas, we will get a report of how success came to the party in several other states.

Knowing the fine hospitality of Roger and Peggy Harsch, we can safely prophesy an evening which will be long remembered by those present. The special guests at this auspicious occasion will be Senator Phil Pellegrini and wife, Nancy, Representative Jack McGlynn and his wife Helen of Medford (Jack is also Mayor of Medford under their Plan E system) and probably the Lieutenant Governor, Frank Bellotti.

We have been assured that a second evening for the purpose of making newly arrived Democrats in Winchester feel at home among us is being planned to take place soon in the Myopia Hill section. More about this in a later communication. In all of these parties no guest lists will be made public.

Mrs. Susan Winn, director of voter registration for the local Democratic Town Committee, announces that Mrs. Bette Hill will be the hostess at her lovely home at 11 Alden Lane for a meeting of the precinct chairmen of registration next week, the date to be announced.

Mrs. Hill, chairman of voter registration in Precinct 3, is a charming hostess who has entertained us on many past occasions.

Italian King

The former king is on a month's visit to the United States, and is currently living in Portugal. He invited guests who were in attendance at the various affairs held in his honor to visit him should they ever visit Portugal.

The ex-king then flew out of Logan Airport to go to Chicago, and ex-governor Volpe flew down to Florida.

BOOK REVIEWS

PART II

A LONG JOURNEY

the autobiography of Pitirim A. Sorokin

Somehow or other he acquired elementary school knowledge and did a great deal of rapacious reading. In 1903 he was granted a scholarship at Khrenovo Teachers' Seminary. This further broadened his outlook. He became at this time interested in revolutionary activities and a leader of the Social Revolutionary Party in the school and adjacent regions.

It was through meetings with peasant-worker groups that he had his first imprisonment under the Czarist regime at the age of fifteen. In all, he was imprisoned three times by the Czarist government. In between he entered night school in St. Petersburg, then the Psycho-Neurological Institute and the University of St. Petersburg.

His first area of specialization as a graduate student was in criminal law, penology, and constitutional law. His work for the degree in this field he accomplished in two years, having had to read some 400 titles. At the same time, he was able to continue his sociological research.

Sorokin's life at this time as well as that of other intellectuals and workers was embroiled in revolutionary activities. He outlines his reasons for being a partisan of the Social Revolutionary Party rather than that of the Social Patriots and the followers of Lenin.

This leads him into giving a vivid picture of the holocaust, the 1917 revolution in Russia. Quoting and abridging his earlier book, "Leaves from a Russian Diary," he depicts a life of immense unrest and terror. All of Russia was in a cataclysm to be followed by starvation and widespread famine. In 1921, he started to make a scientific investigation of mass starvation.

He writes: "I will acknowledge at once that I largely failed in this intention. I was able to make no experimental study, but I saw a famine; I know what it means. What I learned in those awful provinces was far more than any scientific investigation could have given me. My nervous system, accustomed to many horrors in the years of the Revolution, broke down completely before the spectacle of the actual starvation of millions in my ravaged country. If I came out less an investigator, I do not think I came out less a man, less an enemy of any group of men capable of inflicting such suffering on the human race."

Marked out as an enemy of the state by the Bolsheviks, having successfully received his doctor's degree in sociology in 1922, continually in danger of further arrest and of being shot, he decided to be banished along with other notable Russians.

In the latter part of his book, Sorokin writes of his life as an emigre to Czechoslovakia and later to the United States. His work as a scholar is so well known there is no need to emphasize it here.

As one Oriental philosopher told someone in the Hotel Kenmore several years ago, "Sorokin is a genius."

The Dog Soldier

Part One

When George Bird Grinnell, a proper graduate of Yale with the Class of 1870, determined to chronicle the history of THE FIGHTING CHEYENNES, he packed his trunks, left the comparative comfort of New York City, and went out to talk to the participants at first hand. He started in the Oklahome Territory, which was the Cheyenne's most southerly penetration, and worked his way north and west. With a leather satchel of pencils and long pads of yellow-lined paper, he went from village to village interviewing survivors of all the great battles and some of the lesser fights.

The American Indian lived under the strain of incessant warfare. If by chance, history had seen fit to preserve some sort of written record of these people, it would be a voluminous account of skirmishes, battles, and full-scale wars that lingered from generation to generation. It stood to reason that a people whose livelihood depended so heavily on the skill of its hunters and the courage of its warriors held high esteem for these classes. Even the promised "messiah," of which every tribe possessed some basic belief, was never represented as a god of peace; but rather one who spoke with the sound of thunder, and would eventually loose his terrible fury upon the invading whites to restore the ancient freedom of the Plains.

Warrior bands or societies existed in every tribe, save those too remotely situated. The Cheyennes, who had six classes of warriors, can be taken as an example of most. First in prominence, and among whose numbers were the bravest, were the Dog Soldiers; secondary societies, all about equal in tribal status, were the Fox Men, Pointed Lance Men, Bowstring Men, and Crazy Dogs; lastly came the Red Shields, made up of those too old to keep the pace of the younger, more daring bands. Not often mentioned, but still part of the warrior system, was a seventh society that consisted of youths in apprenticeship ranging in age from ten to twelve years.

To be born a Cheyenne male was to be born a warrior; of the fighting warriors each society held pride in certain distinguishing traits and mannerisms. The cut of the scalplock, the warpaint, the arrows, all differed. Some bands could be recognized by the color of red, some black, some yellow. The uniformity of certain groups even extended as far as matching a collection of Appaloosa ponies. Among themselves they participated in friendly contests of physical endurance and skill with weapons; and this competitive spirit even found its way to the battlefield where one band tried to outdo the other. Yet, the rivalry was never harmful; rather it seemed to strengthen the tribe as a whole as it would temper the character of the individual.

The Cheyennes were a nomad people, and their warriors loved the smells of battle and the hazards it authored, but it cannot be said that they were wandering belligerents. In their sometimes strange, but particular way they were noble and just, and usually made every attempt at peaceful diplomacy before embarking on the war trail.

The story is related by the old men, whose memories of such events are cunningly accurate, that in the summer of 1840, at a site near old Bent's Fort on the Arkansas River in what is now Colorado, an Arapaho brave fell in love with an Apache girl, and started a chain reaction that unified not only the Arapahoes and Apaches, but also the Kiowas and Comanches. Only the Cheyennes, grieving over the loss of a group of Bow String soldiers recently killed in battle by the Kiowas, abstained. The Arapahoes, their closest allies, begged them to reconsider, and join in this great movement for peace. Though the families of the Bow String men were still in mourning, the Cheyennes nevertheless agreed to put the question to a vote. Since the Dog Soldiers were the strongest in both numbers and courage, the final decision rested with them. They deliberated only a short while and voted for peace.

Eleven years later, at the Laramie Council, the Sioux, Assiniboines, Gros Ventres, Arapahoes, and Cheyennes smoked with the Crows, Shoshoni, and Arikaras. It was a dramatic and remarkable step forward; of the twelve thousand that gathered, many had never before met except on the field of battle. The Jesuit missionary, Father Pierre-Jean DeSmet, known simply a "Black Robe" to the Indians, wrote optimistically that he felt there would now exist a lasting peace. But peace on the Plains was always a transient thing; by 1853 the Cheyennes and Kiowas were allied against the Pawnees, Shawnees, and Delawares.

Then came the comparative tranquility of the Civil War period, as tribes which could have done immeasurable damage, settled peacefully on reservations. One such camp was that of the Cheyennes on Sand Creek.

It was a stintingly cold November morning in 1864, when Colonel J. M. Chivington, an ex-preacher, disregarded a governmental hands-off policy, and led the 1st and 3rd Colorado Volunteers in the attack and slaughter of some three hundred Indians; two hundred and twenty-five of which were women and children. Ironically, most of the warriors — including the Dog Soldiers — were absent, having made their camp some ten miles away.

Kit Carson, in his eighties at the time, declared that Chivington had done more in a single day to sever Indian-white relations than all the glory-hunting soldiers of the past had been able to accomplish since Coronado crossed the Rio Grande with his Conquestadors. "Remember Sand Creek" became the battle cry of the sorrowing Cheyennes; and when the grass grew high enough to fatten their ponies in the spring of '65, the Dog Soldiers prepared for a fight to the finish.

Dr. Karl Terzaghi

Dr. Karl Terzaghi, 80, emeritus professor of civil engineering at Harvard University, who founded a new engineering science, soil mechanics, died Friday, October 25, at his home, 3 Robinson Circle.

Regarded by many of his colleagues as the greatest civil engineer of the century, Dr. Terzaghi wrote and contributed to the field until his death.

Dr. Terzaghi was the son of Anton, and Amalia (Eberle) Terzaghi. He was born October 3, 1883, in Prague, Austria, and was educated at the Technische Hochschule in Graz, Austria, receiving his bachelor's degree in civil engineering in 1904, and his doctor of technical sciences in 1912.

He practiced engineering in the Austrian Empire, Russia and the United States and taught at the Imperial School of Engineers and later, at American Robert College both in Turkey.

During 1925-29 he taught at Massachusetts Institute of Technology and then accepted a position at the Technische Hochschule in Vienna. He came to Harvard in 1938, retiring in 1956 as professor of the practice of civil engineering, a position he had held since 1947.

Dr. Terzaghi first lived in Winchester in 1936 when he came to this country for the Harvard Tercentenary. He came to town permanently in June of 1939.

As a young man he became deeply impressed by the "absence of national thinking" in the field of earthwork and foundation engineering. He repeatedly saw the earth slide, settle or cave in, and the opportunity to do something about it came to him after World War I while teaching at a small college in Turkey.

He conducted experiments and performed classical tests on the consolidation of clay and in 1925 he published his results, a book which became a classic work of engineering literature.

In the book he presented the principles of modern soil mechanics which today form the indispensable basis of all earthwork and foundation engineering.

During his stay at M.I.T. he established the method by which soil mechanics is taught throughout the world.

Dr. Terzaghi held degrees from Trinity College, Dublin, Ireland; Teknik University, Istanbul, Turkey; Mexico University, Federal Institute of Technical Science, Zurich, Switzerland; Lehigh University, Technical University, West Berlin; Norwegian Institute of Technology, Trondheim, Norway; Institute of Technology, Graz, Austria; and Ohio State University.

He was four times awarded the Norman Medal of the American Society of Civil Engineers, highest honorary award possible; and twice won the Clemens Herschel Prize of the Boston Society of Civil Engineers. He was also awarded the Frank P. Brown Medal of the Franklin Institute in Philadelphia; the Thomas Fitch Rowland Prize of the American Society of Civil Engineers; the Gold Medal of Honor of the Austrian Society of Engineers and Architects, the Fitz Gerald Medal of the Boston Society of Civil Engineers; the New England Award of the Engineering Societies of New England, the James Alfred Ewing Medal of the Institution of Civil Engineers and the Moles Award of the Moles Society of New York.

The American Society of Civil Engineers also established the Karl Terzaghi Award in his honor.

In 1939 he was invited by the Intitution of Civil Engineers in London to deliver the James Forrest Lecture. The only other non-British engineer previously so honored was Marconi.

He wrote five major books and several hundred papers on civil engineering subjects. In 1936 the International Society of Soil Mechanics and Foundation Engineering was founded at Harvard and Dr. Terzaghi was elected life president.

A selection of his writings, "From Theory to Practice in Soil Mechanics" was published by his students. He was a member of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences and the Boston Society of Civil Engineers.

He leaves his wife, Dr. Ruth Doggett Terzaghi, a fellow of engineering geology at Harvard; two daughters, Margaret and Vera, and a son, Eric.

Petition Drive Reducing Council Power Half Way

The initiative petition drive for 63,000 signatures to curb powers of the Executive Council has reached the halfway mark, according to official estimates by Ronald C. MacKenzie, general chairman.

"Reports from the Massachusetts Junior Chamber of Commerce, the Massachusetts League of Women Voters, the Massachusetts Taxpayers Federation and other sponsoring groups show that some 31,500 signatures have been collected so far," he said.

MacKenzie urged the petition circulators to "double their efforts so that we may go way over the top with this important government reform." Reporting deadline is November 15.

The petitioners need 63,272 valid signatures of registered voters to place the matter of removing most of the council's statutory powers before the 1964 Legislature. Constitutional powers would be unaffected. If the Legislature refuses to enact the reform, 11,000 more signatures would place the issue before the voters on the 1964 State ballot.

formation to a tracking station via a battery powered transmitter.

The firefighters took the instrument back to the Fire Station to examine it more closely, for it had written instructions on it that it had served its purpose and was of no further official use.

When they got back to the Fire Station, Acting Chief Galuffo, in handling the object, said it was warm. A little while later, Acting Chief Galuffo felt the object—shaped like a cone on a cube-shaped box—and learned that it was getting hotter. He ordered the firefighters to immerse it immediately in water.

Under water, the firefighters opened the box and read an inside label which said that immersing the battery in water would reactivate the battery which powered the unit. So, they took it out of the water and set it aside to determine what to do with it.

Acting Chief Galuffo said that when Fire Chief Frank Amico returns from a fire chief's conference he is attending in Memphis, Tennessee, he may decide to give the Weather device over to the High School science department for its science studies.

Mr. & Mrs. Club To Present Byzantine Priest

On Wednesday evening, November 6, at 8:30, the Reverend John J. Mowatt, administrator of the Church of Our Lady of Kazan, South Boston, will address the St. Mary's Mr. and Mrs. Club.

FATHER MOWATT

Father Mowatt will present an illustrated talk on the Russian Greek Catholic Church, its rite, customs and tradition. The Byzantine Rite in Slavonic is used today by the Russians, Ukranians, Carpatho - Russians, eastern Slovaks, Serbs and Bulgarians. It is the most widely used, after the Roman rite of all ancient liturgies.

A native of Cambridge, Father Mowatt studied at the Pontifical Roman College in Rome, where he was ordained in 1957. He then returned to Boston and organized the Russian Catholic Mission. With the help and blessing of Richard Cardinal Cushing, the Church of Our Lady of Kazan opened in January, 1960.

Refreshments will follow a discussion period and it is hoped a large crowd will take advantage of this opportunity to learn more about this ancient rite which existed side by side with the Roman rite long before the schism of 1054 A.D. Everyone is invited.

WDBC Plans Gala Charity Bridge For November 22

Did you know there are three red letter days in November this year? Veterans' Day, Turkey Day, and the Winchester Duplicate Bridge Club's annual charity game for the American Contract Bridge League's national charity drive.

As in recent years, the local club is holding two charity games; this one will benefit the ACBL's charities of the year, the American Cancer Society and the United Cerebral Palsy Associations.

The evening will start at 7:30 at Hadley Hall, Church of the Epiphany, with coffee and dessert. Bridge will start at 8:00. Master points for the winners of each section, of course, and door prizes promise to brighten the lucky receivers' evening.

Fun, points, prizes, all for a low price, which incidentally, is tax deductible—but who would need that extra inducement? Last year's game was a big success, and this year we're shooting for 60 tables. With so many good reasons to come, it hardly seems possible anyone could stay away. For tickets phone Mrs. Geraldine Lawrence, or better still, drop in at the Winchester Duplicate Club on a Wednesday evening and pick them up. Those of you who are new at bridge or new at duplicate might well find an introductory evening at the Knights of Columbus Hall not only fun, but interesting. It starts at 7:30.

The general chairman for the event is Mrs. Robert Grove, and her able right hand is Mrs. Ralph Atkinson. Mrs. Joseph Dean is planning the refreshments, Mrs. Lawrence is in charge of tickets, and out hunting up those door prizes mentioned is Mrs. C. Andrew Perkins. Other committee members include Mrs. Chandler Symmes, Edward Sullivan, and Ralph Gartner.

So lend a hand, in this case, a bridge hand, to the fight against cancer and cerebral palsy. Come to the Winchester Duplicate Bridge Club's annual charity game, Friday evening November 22. How to remember that date? Veterans' Day is the 11th, and what do we like twice as much as a parade? You guessed it, a gala evening of bridge. And twice 11 is 22. See you there for coffee at 7:30.

Let There Be Light

• IN THE LAST few decades we have come a long way from the gloominess which the Western World seemed to believe to be the only way of honoring the departed. The emphasis on black, the marathon "wakes" which left survivors physically exhausted and psychologically drained, the entire atmosphere of bleak hopelessness, has been greatly softened or even eliminated. The funeral rites are just as reverent, but now as we remember the dead we also consider the living and in warm and gracious surroundings we endeavor to remove some of the sting from their tragedy rather than adding to the burden they must bear.

Smith College Club

At the home of Mrs. Charles Moore last Wednesday evening, the members of the Winchester Smith College Club, their husbands and friends, were treated to a thought-provoking, if slightly disconcerting view of the world of today, and the "Road into the Unknown" of the future. This was the title chosen by Massimo Salvadori, professor of history at Smith College, for his talk to the sizable audience.

The great dream of American democracy, of an International Brotherhood of Man, is likely to remain a dream. There are too many splits and factions within all nations for this to become a reality. The independence gained by the underdeveloped peoples will not bring the hoped-for democracy, but more totalitarianism, stemming from a fierce nationalism.

Where liberty exists, there is always change. Where there is no transition, you have a state society.

The Chinese are an example of this. They did not want liberty. They were contented with their ancient customs and traditions. When these were destroyed by their present leaders, so-called liberty was forced upon them.

Professor Salvadori feels there is not much difference between the Chinese and the Soviets, as recent newspaper accounts would have us believe. Their goals are the same, but each has political problems.

Since the common men and women are the ones who actually make history, we should all be more aware of what is going on in the world today.

We should pay more attention to fundamentals and values, do more individual thinking—for no nation knows today where it is going into the future.

Film Program At the Library

Family Film night begins again at the library on Friday, November 1, at 7:30 p.m., with three films in color.

"Giuseppina," the little Italian girl, disappointed at not going to the fair, feels that nothing ever happens. Her father, who runs a service station, tells her to wait and watch. And things do happen —English tourists, German tourists, North and South American tourists (their national characteristics happily caricatured), a local wedding party—each group a story in itself, prove to Giuseppina that there is excitement even by the side of the road. Children will enjoy and adults appreciate this one.

"Night out with Mr. Toad" is one of the loveliest nature films to be seen. Mr. Toad is the hero (a fine blustering one) and his surroundings are caught in delayed-action shots—a flower unfolding, dew forming, a snail travelling fast (for a snail).

Who doesn't know Ludwig Bemelman's "Madeline," who lived in a tall house in Paris all covered with vines and concentrated on frightening Miss Clavell? She's been here before, but comes again to welcome a new audience.

Children under Junior High School age must be accompanied by parents on Friday night. On Saturday morning, school-age children may obtain tickets in the Boys' and Girls' Room at 10 a.m. for the second showing in the Rich Room at 10:15.

YOUR Pharmacist SPEAKS

By: Fred McCormack

Here are a few medical odds and ends we picked up along the way: According to statistics, regardless of what an illness turns out to be, it is 4 to 1 that it started out as a result of emotional upset . . . Ever wonder how much medical services tap the pocketbook for? Recent studies disclose that the American per capita annual cost of doctor and dentist fees, drugs, hospital costs and health-insurance premiums comes out to $540 . . . If you are over 19 years of age, consider yourself fortunate that this isn't the 17th century. The life expectancy at birth in that era was a scant 18.2 years . . . You're also fortunate that it isn't the 17th century in that cures in those days were often more terrifying than the disease. For 20th century prescriptions call on McCORMACK'S APOTHECARY, 568 Main St. Phone PA 9-2700. 24-hour prescription service. Free local delivery.

Dr. Carleton To Speak At First Church

The Rev. Dr. Alford Carleton of New York City, executive vice president of the United Church Board for World Ministries, will speak next Sunday at the 9:15 and 11:00 services at First Congregational Church.

REV. DR. ALFORD CARLETON

Dr. Carleton began his distinguished career in 1924 when he was appointed a missionary teacher of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions of the Congregational Christian Churches to teach for three years in the Near East. Returning to this country in 1927, he entered theological school and three years later returned to the Near East, this time as a career missionary of the American Board.

For almost 30 years he served in Turkey and Syria, 17 years as president of Aleppo College, Aleppo, Syria. In 1954 he returned to the United States to become executive vice president of the American Board.

Dr. Carleton is a widely recognibed authority on the Near East and has, through global travel and service on numerous international church and educational committees, extended his influence to all parts of the world.

He is a member of the central committee of the World Council of Churches and of its executive committee. He is also chairman of the World Council Committee on Religious Liberty.

In 1956 Williams College conferred upon him the honorary degree of Doctor of Humane Letters in recognition of his outstanding career as a scholar, author and Christian leader. He was honored again in 1962 when he was awarded a Doctor of Divinity degree by Chicago Theological Seminary and a Doctor of Laws from Emerson College in Boston.

An excellent study help, world replogle globe, including record of Mr. World. At the Winchester Star.

Art Association

During the month of November there will be an exhibit of drawings by Mr. Ture Bengtz of the Boston Museum of Fine Art, in the west reading room of the Library.

Mr. Robert E. Grady, a native of Boston and a teacher at the Boston Museum of Fine Arts, will lecture to members and friends of the Winchester Art Association on the evening of November 5 at 7:30 P.M. in the Rich room of the Library.

Mr. Grady attended the Mass. School of Art, with time out for war service. At the Boston Museum School he was a special student in graphic arts. There followed two years in Paris, where he worked with Fernand Leger and Edouard Georg. He attended the Ecole des Beaux Arts and the Academie de la Grande Chaumiere. He received a Master's degree from Cranbrook Academy in Bloomfield Hills, Michigan.

Mr. Grady has exhibited widely in the United States and in Paris. Among his awards are four from the Boston Printmakers National Exhibitions and the Makepiece Award for Excellence at the Society of Boston Watercolor Painters. After teaching at the former Cambridge School of Design and at the DeCordova Museum in Lincoln Mr. Grady is now at the Boston Museum.

Former students at our local Studio Guild and his many friends in Winchester welcome Mr. Grady on this evening of November fifth.

"Relative Values" Here Tomorrow

The fall attraction of the Unitarian Players, Noel Coward's "Relative Values," will be staged at the Unitarian Church on tomorrow and Saturday evenings, November 1 and 2 at 8:30. This is the story of a titled British family who discover that the girl who is about to marry the heir to the title is the sister of the lady's maid.

In addition to the always-clever dialogue of Noel Coward, the play offers a fine cast. The excellent British voices of Enid Houlding and Betty Foskett add authenticity to the roles of Felicity and her maid, Moxie. Pert Betty Vallee, as the Hollywood star, Miranda Frayle, Tony Carrigan as Nigel, and Cecil Prest as the butler, Crestwell, have always proved strong performers in past presentations of the Unitarian Players.

Ann Carrigan delightfully portraying the girl-servant Alice, and Ron Papile as the foppish son Peter, are making their debuts with the Players. In addition the east includes Ted Knowlton as the brash American actor, and Mrs. Bertha Blanchard and Ken Astill as Lady and Admiral Hayling. Direction is by Jacqueline Sibley with production by Mrs. Woodford Wilcox.

African Violets

The African Violet, like so many other popular plants, has a name which is in no way related to the plant itself.

There is some doubt that the plant actually came from Africa and it certainly is not a violet. It's really a member of the Gesneriaceae Family and Saintpaulia Genus, named after Baron Walter von Saint Paul, who introduced it to Europe in 1898.

The plant is characterized by hairy, oval-shaped leaves which, in most cases rise directly from the crown - there is usually no main stem. The flowers, which range in size from one to one and one-half inches across, are found only in reds, pinks, blues, purples and white.

The plants are often described, by people who know little or nothing about them, as puzzling and hard to grow. This is far from true. There are certain definite requirements which must be met, but when these needs are understood, the grower can adapt his methods to them and have a plant which will give him endless joy.

A temperature of 70 to 75 degrees during the day and no lower than 60 degrees at night has been agreed upon as one need. An east window is best, but northeast or south is also acceptable. Try to shy away from northern exposures since a cold draft usually accompanies the light coming in through these windows during the winter.

The differences of opinion occur in regard to whether or not the plants should receive a light misting of water and whether they should be watered from top or bottom.

I mist my plants two or three times a week with a sprayer from the five and dime store used primarily for air fresheners. It is important to use water which is at room temperature or above and never to do this later than two o'clock in the afternoon. This is for one main reason, expressly that all Gesneriaceaes are very susceptible to crown rot.

This results when excessive moisture is present. Spraying or watering in the afternoon leaves the plant wet and rot-fungus will set in. Watering from the bottom reduces the chances of this happening, but is a step really not necessary if care is taken to water in the morning.

If a large drop of water is spilled on the leaf while the sun is shining on it a white spot will result. A bit of care will eliminate the possibility of this mark of haste.

African Violets bloom profusely when the plants are slightly potbound. Therefore, avoid changing one of these plants from a very small to a very large pot.

The plants prefer a soil rich in humus and nutrients not required by other plants. Special soils have been prepared for them.

The plants are propagated by leaf-cuttings or plant division. A large plant which has stopped blooming must be divided. It will be noticed that sometimes the crown is divided into two segments, each having its own roots; it is a simple task to separate these stems. It is not the nature of all African Violets to form multiple crowns.

It is seldom that pests or diseases attack the African Violet. Mites are sometimes found on them; a few camphor flakes in the saucer will make them quickly disappear.

THE TRICK IS—TREAT!

Goblins witches and ghosts as well, are busy weaving a magic spell that will encompass all the land for those who try to understand. Each year it's harder to recall the fun we had when we were small, but Halloween can still be fun if we'll just treat some little one.

There's nothing magic about a good heating system. It must be checked and serviced regularly in order to work efficiently. B. T. Conlon Fuel Service, 27 Lake Avenue, Woburn. Phone WE 3-1720.

Well informed or misinformed—which are you?

It depends to a great extent on which newspaper you read. If you read only one paper and that one happens to be "pro" this or "pro" that, then chances are you'll end up believing exactly what that paper wants you to believe—and nothing more. On the other hand, if you want to understand both sides of all important issues, then you won't be satisfied with anything less than a newspaper such as The Boston Globe. The Globe gives you the news—all of it—national, international, local. And The Globe gives you complete coverage of sports, political, medical, science and religious news. Moreover, The Globe gives you both sides of the news — in depth — which is most important in a day when so many of the issues that make up the news are controversial. Want to be well-informed? Get both sides: get The Boston Globe. If you'd like to have The Globe home delivered, just phone AV 8-8000.

Little Things Mean a Lot; EMARC Scouts

There is a song entitled, "Little Things Mean A Lot," and truer words were never spoken when it concerns boy scouting for the retarded boys in Troop 534. There is a great deal of enthusiasm and devotion, even though people are inclined to think retarded children are incapable of doing very much. These boys show how much can be accomplished with the proper person who is patient, kind and understanding in handling and teaching these retarded children.

Thomas Basti of Burlington is more than qualified for the job with 35 years of scouting to his credit. When he first started his troop in 1958 it was the first in the state that wasn't in a state school. Through the years he has taught them the Boy Scout oath, the directions of the compass, knot-tying, bandaging and all the things a Boy Scout should know.They can set up their tent at a camp site in the best tradition. They had an opportunity to test their ability at this task in July and August when they journeyed twice to Harold Parker State Forest in Andover. The Scouts also make various items in woodworking and leathercraft.

Troop 534 is sponsored by the Stoneham Rotary and meets once a week, Tuesday evening at 7 p.m. at the Occupational Center on 52 Sanborn Street, Reading. Boys from the vicinity that EMARC encompasses (Burlington, Melrose, North Reading, Reading, Stoneham, Wakefield, Winchester, Wilmington, North Woburn) participate in this program.

If anyone is interested in further information, contact Mr. Basti at WE-3-0418.

LWV Will Discuss Gov't Structure At Nov. Meetings

The structure of Massachusetts government, with emphasis on methods of amendment and how they have been used in the past year, will be discussed at the Unit meetings of the League of Women Voters November 5, 6, and 7.

Also up for consideration are such thought provoking questions as: Is a Constitutional Convention desirable? What is the past history of constitutional conventions in Massachusetts? What are the results of recent constitutional conventions in other states?

The League of Women Voters of Massachusetts continues to support measures to strengthen the office of governor: four year term for governor and other constitutional officers with election in the non-presidential year; a shortened ballot; power of the governor to reorganize the executive department and to appoint policy-making department heads whose terms will be concurrent with his; and abolition of the Executive Council.

The unit meetings are scheduled as follows:

Tuesday, November 5, 7:45 p.m.: Mrs. Lewis L. Wadsworth, 54 Wedgemere Avenue, hostess; Mrs. Sears Walker (729-3564), chairman.

Wednesday, November 6, 1:00 p.m.: Mrs. O. Guinn Smith, 38 Rangeley Road, hostess; Mrs. James E. Kimball (729-2347), chairman.

Wednesday, November 6, 7:45 p.m.: Mrs. Richard W. Freeman, Jr., 14 Franklin Road, hostess; Mrs. David J. Ashton (729-2708), chairman.

Thursday, November 7; 9:30 a.m.: Mrs. Franklin K. Patterson, 3 Herrick Street, hostess; Mrs. John S. Ahern (729-3914), chairman.

For the convenience of those attending the Thursday morning discussion, babysitting is available for pre-school children at the home of Mr. Marshall Kincaid, of 12 Prospect Street. For further information concerning these meetings, please call the chairman of the unit you wish to attend. Women who are not members of the league are welcome to attend these informal meetings as well as the membership.

EMARC Meeting

A discussion concerning state schools was the highlight of the evening at the East Middlesex Association for Retarded Children's (EMARC) monthly meeting at the Reading Community Center, 52 Sanborn Street, Reading, Wednesday, October 23.

The invocation was given by Reverend Robert Williams, pastor of the Wakefield-Lynnfield Methodist Church.

At the business meeting the young adults of the Occupational Center were praised for the excellent work they are doing painting the entire Center. Mrs. Eleanor Burke of Wakefield was the voting delegate at the NARC Convention in Washington, October 23-26. Mr. Richard Ford of Melrose was appointed to the nominating committee of MARC at the semi-annual meeting at the Paul Dever School, Saturday, October 12.

The panel of speakers for the evening consisted of Mrs. Gloria Johnson of Stoneham who spoke about the Walter Fernald School. Mr. Arthur Jaynes of Wakefield and Mr. John McNeff of Stoneham spoke about Wrentham State School. Mr. Richard Ford of Melrose described the Paul Dever School. Mr. William Powers of Lynnfield commented on St. Colleta's School in Hanover.

The whole panel agreed that the children were treated kindly and were given as much education, etc, as possible under the present conditions. "Every state school is badly in need of all kinds of help so that they may help these people even more," they commented.

Delicious sandwiches and cakes were served by the ladies of Reading.

Local Republicans Attend Att'y-Gen'l Brooke Reception

Appearing before approximately three hundred interested Republican friends and workers of this district, Attorney General Edward W. Brooke delivered a forceful speech at a dessert reception held in Saugus last week.

Attorney General Brooke graphically outlined the organization of his office and the business accomplishments over the period since his induction on January 16.

He spoke of the Undercommon Garage case, the Waterways Division, and other state legal matters, and told of the value to the taxpayer of the Crime Commission which was activated during Gov. Volpe's administration.

Attorney General Brooke spoke briefly about the overpublicized fact that no Republicans had been indicted and answered this directly with the simple and pointed statement that because Massachusetts has become almost a one-party state ther are virtually no Republicans holding office in the departments which warrant investigation.

"But," he reiterated, "I will repeat what I said during this campaign. Republicans do not have a monopoly on virtue and I will ferret out crime no matter where I find it and no matter which party the defendant represents.

"I do not ask the party affiliations of the person I am investigating and I honestly admit I oftentimes do not know to which party he belongs until I read about it in the newspapers," he continued.

The attorney general went on to give a comprehensive survey of his own party, much to the satisfaction of his audience. He spoke of its great ideals, its current weaknesses, and summed up in a few well-chosen words very definite and necessary points which should be followed for future success.

After the formal speech, Attorney General Brooke talked individually with each person who attended. Among the Winchester people present were:

Mrs. Warren Whitman, Mr. and Mrs. David Wardwell, Dr. and Mrs. William D. Barone, Mr. William Wilde, Mrs. Arthur Rand, Mrs. James Blackham, Mrs. Sherman Saltmarsh, Mrs. W. E. Underwood, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Ashenden, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Thompson, Mrs. Walter Winship, Mrs. James Joslin, Mr. George Pettersen, Mrs. Pearl Larson, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Stoneman and Mrs. John Minihan.

ACROSS THE COUNTER

Why deliberately take a bigger risk than that of fire damage to your store or business?

Almost every businessman insures against fire damage to his investment in property of various kinds. Yet, oftentimes, the biggest risk of all—that of loss of earnings from a fire or other insurable hazard—goes without coverage.

Last year, for example, a $300,000 loss to a manufacturing plant was reported in the South. Yet the story noted "no business interruption insurance was carried." The owners were worse off than the unemployed workers after the loss. For they had the expense of continuing key salaries for several months, renting temporary quarters, carrying fixed expenses, and giving up all income during this period including profits (their main purpose for being in business).

Business Interruption insurance has frequently proved to be a "life and death" coverage. Those businesses that have it can reopen. Those that don't often go under! In these days of tight profits and heavy taxation, few businesses are able to accumulate reserves large enough to carry them through even short shut-downs.

Why not let us explain the Business Interruption coverage which best fits your operation? We're as close as your telephone.

World of Color Keynotes Colten's 42nd Anniversary

A "New World of Color" is the theme of Colten's 42nd Anniversary now in progress at all four Colten Stores.

Color can do more to brighten a drab room or change a mood than any other decorating device. A visit to any Colten store will open a new vista of ideas for every fashion period.

On parade are scores of fashionable bedspreads styled to the moment, and in colors that create an aura of beauty. The color favorites this year are antique gold and raspberry and they're newsworthy hues.

Each Colten store has a wall of draperies featuring one hundred and fifty shades, each different. With the aid of a competent staff, the exact match, the perfect contrast, or the ideal blend for your furnishings can be selected. Draperies from this display can be ordered any width or length.

Swatch books with magnificent prints from the imaginative palettes of such world famous designers and makers as Desley, Kandell, Titus Blatter, Waverly, and Riverdale are on display for the customers approval.

Mr. Jerome Colten, president of this firm, took over the management of a linen store founded in 1921 by Esther Abelson. Later he expanded the business and changed the name to Colten's.

In 1950, Colten's moved into the mail order business and sold their designer fashions throughout the nation and in many foreign countries.

The publisher of House Beautiful Magazine has praised Colten's for their foresight and integrity. He said,"..it is with sincere pleasure that we see stores of the Colten caliber crusading for the bettering of homes throughout the country."

This home fashion center has expanded time and time again. Sales for 1963 are far ahead of last year. Mr. Colten, in explaining these record sales, said "the enthusiasm our customers have shown for our decorator styled merchandise has been gratifying. New customers are always "discovering" Colten's. We feel our high standards of quality, originality and moderate price policy have contributed to our 30 fold growth in 20 years."

Each year, thousands of greater Bostonians and visitors from the country over visit Colten shops in Concord, Brookline, Wellesley and Belmont, surburban centers where shopping is always leisurely.

Parking facilities are available to the rear of Concord and all stores. Colten's friendly staff is trained in home decoration. They understand the subtleties of design and are most helpful in solving color, style and size problems.

Colten's 42nd Anniversary with many fine ideas and exciting sales items will continue all month.

The Fortnightly Dessert Bridge

Mrs. Paul W. Atwood, chairman and Mrs. Francis C. Bowes, cochairmen are in charge of this Fortnightly activity project. This event is the highlight of the club for the season. The proceeds will benefit the Veterans Service Committee and make possible the distribution of Christmas bags fiilled with accessories appealing and useful to hospitalized service men at the holiday time. Medic-Alert May Save Your Life If You Need Help

Take heed, all would-be Good Samaritans!

The well-meaning public, policemen and firemen, doctors, nurses, or anyone who helps another person in an emergency, should first look for a simple metal tag, on a bracelet, or necklace worn by the victim.

This tag, with red letters "Medic-Alert" might help save the victim's life. It is a recognized emblem of protection for persons with medical problems.

There are more than 40,000,000 Americans who have specific physical ailments, allergies to medicine or injections, epileptic or cardiac problems. The wrong first-aid treatment for any of these persons could result in their death.

For a one-time membership fee of $5, sent to the Medic-Alert Foundation in Turlock, Calif., a person receives a stainless steel medical identification emblem. This tag has engraved on it a warning which names the specific medical problem of the wearer. It also contains the telephone number of an office on the West Coast where a central file has all the medical information about that person. Responsible authorities may call this number collect anytime, day or night.

Write to "Medic-Alert," Box 311, Boston, Mass., 02117, or call 267-7410 for further information.

Duplicate Bridge Club

An effective blend of youth and maturity paid off in Section A of the October 23rd game as Martha Wood carried "Papa" Herb to victory in the North-South field while Dave Littleton and Clarence "Gramps" Woodward had a runaway win East-West. With an average of 108 for 27 boards, the leaders were:

North - South
Martha and Herb Wood	128½
Ruby White and Martha Walker	120
Jock Olmsted and James Curley	116
Mr. and Mrs. William Wheelock	115
Rae Grove and Fredna Perkins	107½
East - West
Clarence Woodward and Dave Littleton	135
Gerald Barrett and Ted Atkinson	120½
Donna Redpath and William Duryea	116½
Roger Locke and Thomas Wilder	116½
Mr. and Mrs. Chandler Symmes	106½

The eleven table Section B was shooting at a par of 90 with the following results:

North - South
Gerry Lawrence and Richard Smith	117
Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Johnson	107
Ann Murray and Richard Herlihy	105½
Peg Sullivan and Luther Hayes	97
East - West
Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Bell	104
Rose Hickey and Lillian Sheridan	104
Greta Hawley and Darrell Root	102½
Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Scarpaci	96

Miggs Root has selected as hand of the week an interesting board entitled:

THE CASE FOR THE DEFENSE

North is the dealer, both sides vulnerable.

North
♠ A J 4
♥ J 4 3
♦ A J 6
♣ K J 6 5

West
♠ Q 8 6 3 2
♥ A Q 8 7 2
♦ 10
♣ Q 10

East
♠ K 10 9 5
♦ K 9 7 3 2
♣ 9 7 4 3

South
♥ K 10 9 6 5
♦ Q 8 5 4
♣ A 8 2

If you will study the North-South cards first, this hand looks like a reasonable play for game in hearts. There are one or two losers to hearts, the club suit may finesse, the diamond King may be on the right side, and of course, the lead from the defense may help. All in all, things look quite rosy for North - South.

Bringing the East - West hands into the picture, however, changes things considerably. Even though there are far fewer points East - West, the distribution is such that if they find it, they have an excellent defensive bid in spades or have good defensive cards if South wins the bid in hearts.

Contracts at the one level are easily made — one no trump by North twice, one heart by South and one spade by East. At the two level, it's chancy; two no trump by North makes once and goes down once, two hearts by South makes twice and goes down twice, and two spades by West makes three.

Things get even rougher as aggressive bidders advance to the three level, down two for three no trump by North, down three for three hearts doubled by South, but one three hearts doubled by South makes as does one three diamonds doubled by South. Three spades is played three times, making four once, down two and down three doubled.

Now we come to the North - South bid that looked reasonable on our first glance, four hearts, going down two and three tricks. One four spade bidder also goes down, probably sacrificing (and we all know the feeling) against a four heart bid in trouble anyway.

More than is usual, North-South in the bidding are at the mercy of the defense, and at our table in the play as well. The bidding goes one no trump by North, pass by East, three hearts from South and double from West, all passing. The results hinge on the philosophy of West in leading. With long trumps should he try to trump in his singleton and doubleton suits, or keep hammering at the spades. Our West chooses the first approach and leads the singleton diamond; taken in dummy by the Ace, followed by the Jack of hearts to West's Queen. Still hewing to his original principle of trumping in his short suits, West leads the Queen of clubs, taken by North's King. A small diamond from the board is captured by East's King, and when West shows out, East leads another diamond which is ruffed by West who returns a spade. North takes it with his Ace, leaving this result:

North
♣ J 6 5

West
♠ Q 8 6 3
♥ A 8 7

East
♠ K 10 9
♣ 9 7 4

South
♥ K 10 9 6
♦ Q
♣ A 8

Hearts are led until West takes his Ace. Then the spade return is trumped by South, any remaining trumps in West's hand are led out, and the good diamond and clubs take the remaining tricks. Three hearts doubled is made, losing only the King of diamonds, the Ace, Queen of trumps and the diamond trumped by West.

If, however, West decides to attack the hand by leading spades and eventually cutting down South's trumps by forcing him to ruff spades, three hearts cannot be made. Sometimes that long ingrained instinct to lead a singleton should be repressed, especially when you have a long suit with settin-up possibilities as well as long trumps.

It is interesting to note that the East - Wests of the discretion - is - the - better - part- of -valour school fare very well by consistently passing, letting North - South bid up to an unmakeable game.

Reminder: Next Wednesday, November 6, one section will be the Club's Men's Pairs Championship for 1963.

Ninth-Grade Assemblies Will Open in December

A Winchester Ninth Grade Assembly series for the 1963-1964 season will be conducted by Mr. Ron Greenwood and Mr. Harry Raymond of the Curry School of Dancing. Opening with a party preceding the Christmas holiday season, the assemblies will be held at the Washington School Hall on Saturday evenings and will include some instruction in the new steps.

Invitations will be mailed to all pupils enrolled in last year's eighth grade dancing program and to newcomers. Others are welcome to enroll by notifying the Curry School before invitations are issued.

Registration cards are to be returned to Mrs. Winthrop Knox, Winchester representative of the Curry School. They will be accepted in order of receipt, but will be limited so as to balance the numbers of young ladies and young men. This balance was the key factor in the decision of the Community School Association not to sponsor the usual ninth grade program this season: because its members represent the public schools, they felt that they could not impose the necessary limit upon registrations. As explained in the Star of October 3, their decision was based upon a very careful evaluation of the answers to a questionnaire sent to parents of ninth graders.

Among those who will serve as hosts and hostesses during the season are: Mr. and Mrs. Donald Abbott, Dr. and Mrs. Richard Alt, Mr. and Mrs. Austin Broadhurst, and Mr. and Mrs. John Sexton from Lynch Junior High School; and Mr. and Mrs. H. Rushton Harwood Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Henry K. Porter, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Sawyer, and Mr. and Mrs. Ganson P. Taggart from McCall Junior High School. They, along with Mrs. Knox, will welcome the suggestions of other interested parents.

Mr. Hood, who attended the ceremony with members of his family expressed gratitude for the honor given to him. The courtyard, located between Watson Fine Arts Center and Meneely Hall, features a plaque honoring the Hood family.

services are needed, the lawyer and client discuss future financial arrangements. Minimum fees are established by Bar Associations for all lawyers. It is beyond this area that the lawyer, in setting his fees, is to take into consideration the economic status of the client.

The director of the public service, representing the Bar is Mrs. Pearl J. Larson, attorney and law librarian of the Superior Court. Mrs. Larson is executive secretary of the Grievance Committee and is experienced in the public relations work of the Bar. All persons wanting to be referred to a lawyer must have a personal interview with Mrs. Larson, so she can direct them to a lawyer experienced in the particular field of law needed. No person having a criminal matter will be sent to a lawyer listed as experienced in civil law. Mrs. Larson states: "We're now prepared to refer persons to qualified lawyers in all fields of law, who are entering into the spirit of the public service program in the hope the public image of the legal profession will be improved."

For referral, come personally to the law library, Superior Court, Cambridge, or telephone TR 6-8880, ext. 220.

Concert

ing will be Brenda Larson, a soloist singer, Midge and Bill Haggett, a dance team, and the Cherry Brothers Trio, a comedy impersonation group. Music for the evening will be supplied by the Ambassadors of Boston.

This is the only social event of the year sponsored by the Winchester Police Department, and the only event at which retired police officers and their wives, and the wives of deceased members of the department have a chance to get together. Many townspeople also attend to enjoy the entertainment and show by their presence their support of the local department.

Police Chief Joseph J. Derro has arranged with the State Police, the Metropolitan District Commission Police, the Woburn, Stoneham and Medford Police, and our own town Auxiliary and special police to have off-duty officers come to Winchester to cover-in for the local department while the concert is going on. In many cases, the officers standing in are either residents or former residents who know the town well; and there will be more men, numerically, on patrol duty that night than there usually are to guard the town.

This year, the Police Association has done more than in any other year to make the concert a sell-out success. The association, established in March of 1931, was created to provide death benefits to the families of deceased officers. It is supported mainly by the proceeds of the annual concert and gifts from generous local citizens. The police officers themselves contribute annual dues to the association to help perpetuate its funds.

The only remaining charter member of the original association's group still on the force after today, when Lt. O'Connell retires, is Chief Derro. The present officers of the association are Mario Buzzotta, president, John Frongillo, vice president, John Elliott, secretary, and John Dolan, treasurer. Trustees of the association are Daniel Reardon, Angelo Amico, and Daniel Pearson.

The chairman for the annual concert is James Cogan, and John McHugh is treasurer. The committee for the souvenir program book is William Nash, Angelo Amico, John Frongillo, Donald Pigott and James Cogan.

Harry Hardy Joins Thompson Dabney Sales Staff Here

Harry L. Hardy of Auburndale, has just been appointed to join the sales staff of the newly affiliated investment office of Thompson, Dabney and Tyson at 47 Church Street, according to an announcement by Maurice C. Bird, manager.

Winchester is a familiar name to Mr. Hardy, who was born and educated in Winchester, Virginia.

Investment sales is familiar, too; for he has been in the business starting in 1929 on Wall Street. From an association with Ritter and Company there he went for four army years in World War II then came to Boston where he has been with the home office of A. C. Allyn and Company since 1948.

Mr. Hardy will make a second painting enthusiast among the three man team on Church Street, joining Mr. Bird in a liking for this hobby. A Winchester Star will not be new to him; his home town paper is the Winchester Evening Star.

REMEMBER THE ROTARY AUCTION. It's time to help us fill-up THE BARN. Just call the NEW AUCTION NUMBER PA 9-4108, anytime, day or night.

United Fund

How much money is spent in campaign costs?

The United Fund allocates 93 cents out of every dollar received for actual services to people. Other campaigns run anywhere from 73 cents to 80 cents, with the rest going for costs, according to Mr. Clarke.

Ar United Fund campaign workers paid?

No. From official UF estimates, more than 50,000 volunteers serve in this campaign from coast to coast. They all donate their time and effort free of charge, from the general chairman to the house-to-house solicitor.

Under the United Fund, may a donor give his entire donation to one agency of his choosing?

Yes, says Mr. Clarke, merely by indicating a particular agency on a pledge or check.

Mr. Clarke said that figures recently revealed by the UF clearly show that Winchester receives its share of money collected in the annual United Fund Drive.

"The various youth agencies such as the Girl Scouts, Boy Scouts, Y.M.C.A., etc., received $11,292.24 last year for services rendered to the youth of Winchester," he said.

"The Winchester Visiting Nurse Association, along with other health and rehabilitation agencies, rendered services to residents costing $8,445.28. The Red Cross, now joined with the United Fund, provided 3,691 Winchester residents with help costing $18,818.00, he added.

Many of the 200 United Fund agencies have their service headquarters in Boston for greater convenience. Such family services as the Boston Legal Aid Society and Traveler's Aid provided services to Winchester residents costing $2,494.71.

The United Fund also gave $1,587.36 for the many services given to Winchester children, such as the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, and various guidance centers.

"While no exact figure is available, we shared in the United Fund donation of $742,330 given to 23 Red Feather hospitals and in the $555,000 given to the Salvation Army," Mr. Clarke noted.

"This year," said the UF chairman, "we are asking everyone to give his fair share, and that amount is entirely up to the individual. However, we do ask that each person realize that his share must be divided by the 200 UF agencies."

Mr. Clarke has predicted that within five years all health and welfare campaigns currently operating by themselves will be included in the once-a-year United Fund drive.

"In the short six years of its existence the United Fund has consolidated the campaigns of 200 agencies into one big drive, Mr. Clarke said, "because the UF was formed at the urging of many Americans to eliminate hundreds of individual campaigns and to consolidate all of the efforts into one drive."

Fish Hatcheries, Game Farms, Closed To Public

Visitors at state game farms and fish hatcheries are barred for the duration of the current forest fire emergency, state fisheries and game director Francis W. Sargent has announced.

Division of Fisheries and Game personnel are assisting state forest fire crews during the current emergency by being available on call for fire fighting and are providing tank trucks to transport water.

When the woods closure is lifted, Sargent will recommend to Governor Peabody that he extend the seasons on pheasants, quail, grouse and squirrels by the number of days lost. The added days would begin after the regular deer season in December if the ban is off by that time. The division held up pheasant stocking just before the closure went into effect and will release these birds when the season opening appears imminent. The problem of the November archery season on deer will be considered later if it appears the woods closure will affect it.

The trapping season will not open on November 1 if the woods closure is still on.

Director Sargent has been contacting other states affected by the serious fire danger and U.S. Fish and Wildlife service officials in Washington in an attempt to arrange some type of open season on water-fowl to compensate hunters for days lost because of the fire emergency. No decisions have been reached at this time.

Field Hockey Is In Full Swing; 2 Wins To Date

Field hockey in no game for those out-of-condition as attendance at any WHS practice or at anyone of the good games held on Ginn Field will attest.

The four times a week practice for the squad of 40 girls under coach Jan Collins at the High School commences each time with an 800 yard run, taken at alternating speeds. The four twenty-minute periods in a game are played with no time outs and no substitutions—once out of a girls' hockey game your out.

Friday's Varsity 4-0 win over Melrose was the second win of the already four-game down season. The record thus far has been: an opening hard fought tie with the Cambridge School of Weston, 2-2; a shut-out loss to the aggressive Lincoln-Sudbury team, 0-2, and a win over Belmont, 2-0.

The team, co-captained by Carrie Paine and Claire Denton, has only two holdover players from last year's varsity hockey. Junior varsity field hockey at WHS, however, plays the same stiff schedule as the varsity, working under the assistance of Mrs. Mary Bohigian, coach. And in addition to the top squad there is lively intramural or B squad hockey at the school.

The JV's, under Captain Beth Gilpatrick, have tied Cambridge School, defeated Lincoln-Sudbury and Belmont and tied Melrose.

Field hockey has been a strong and popular sport at the High School since its inception over forty years ago. Last year's varsity was undefeated and the records always have a good Winchester ring. The games yet to come this season, in all of which the girls here expect a real tough competition, are: Tuesday, November 5, Arlington; Friday, November 8, Newton, and Wednesday, November 13, Concord-Carlisle—all games on the home field.

Last, but not least, this season is a just announced special sponsored by the WHS Student Council between the varsity and the faculty as a money-raiser for the Laurence Owen Memorial Fund. Male ringers will augment the faculty team and it is expected that the foul call of "sticks" will be heard fairly often. Date: Friday, November 15 — or in case of rain, the 22nd.

Dick Radatz To Appear At Men's Club

The Men's Club of the First Congregational Church will sponsor its Annual Forum Night, Wednesday evening, November 13 in Chidley Hall at 6:30 p.m. The Senior High School Forum group will again be the guests of the Men's Club at this annual gala event and the guest speaker will be Dick Radatz, the All-Star relief pitcher for the Boston Red Sox.

The young ladies and gentlemen of Forum, as well as the members, are sure to find Mr. Radatz extremely interesting. Largely due to his phenomenal pitching feats in relief, particularly in the early part of the season, fan interest reached new peaks in the Red Sox 1963 season and gave these Eastern Massachusetts baseball fans something positive to talk about. Although Mr. Radatz will be "the frosting on the cake" for the evening, a sumptuous and bountiful catered dinner is planned for those attending.

The men of Winchester are invited to join with the Men's Club in attendance at this event.

For information and reservations, call Roland H. Moody, PA 9-1824 before Sunday, November 10.

On September 27, 1953, Bert Rechichar of the Colts kicked a 56-yard field goal against the Chicago Bears.

Reading Rockets Here For Annual Game Saturday

Winchester faces another tough one Saturday when the Reading Rockets come to Winchester for their annual football game.

Not that the Rockets are too formidable this year, but Reading always seems to play a good game against Winchester and can be counted upon to fight to the bitter end to beat the Red and Black.

Reading played non - league Rindge Tech last Saturday and beat the Cambridge high school, 30-26, while Winchester was being clobbered at Melrose, 46-8. Off that record Reading would seem to have a pretty fair shot at Saturday's game.

In league play Reading has been turned back by Belmont, 21-12; and by Concord, 22-8. Winchester has not played Belmont yet, but results against a common foe, Concord, would indicate a close one in the making.

The Rockets can be depended upon to play their best game of the season against Winchester and this could mean that any resumption of the fumbling and failure to block and tackle that the locals have shown to date will result in another defeat.

Winchester has the makings of a good team, but the boys badly need a little more "umph" overall to commence to click. When they do start, if they do, they will make it rough for some one, and Saturday against Reading would be a good place to start.

Ed Cutting, hobbled with a bad knee is a doubtful starter, and his loss will be keenly felt. It is hoped that the other cripples on the local roster will be ready for Reading, for the local's best is likely to be none too good come Saturday.

Melrose Swamps Sachems 46-8; Fifth Win Tops League

Scoring the first three times they got possession of the ball, and also scoring in each period, Melrose outclassed Winchester in every department last Saturday afternoon with a lopsided 46-8 decision at Athletic Field, Melrose. Some 5,000 shirt-sleeved fans saw the issue decided as early as the first quarter when Red Raider quarterback Jackie Turco threw two of his three touchdown passes and fullback Tom Kasprzak smashed over for another.

In extending their current victory streak to five games, Melrose thoroughly humiliated the Sachems by handing them one of their worst defeats of the modern era.

Injury-riddled and still smarting from last week's loss to Lexington, Winchester had to battle both a consistency of bad breaks and a hard-hitting Melrose eleven, and came out second best in both instances.

Hardly had the opening whistle sounded when halfback Ed Cutting, favoring a badly bruised knee, fumbled a Bob Branley pitchout on the first play from scrimmage and a rushing Melrose defense recovered on the Sachem 33. In rapid order, Kasprzak burst through center to the 18, and halfback Bill Verge carried to the 14. Two consecutive penalties moved the ball back to the 24, but apparently had little effect on Turco who quickly hit end George Smith for the first of six Raider scores. Kasprzak bulled his way over for the conversion.

Four plays later, With Winchester in punt formation on their own 36, a pass from center sailed over the head of Jack Kimball, who recovered and returned to the 30 before he was piled up and forced out of his second game in as many weeks. From there, Verge carried once and Kasprzak six times before Kasprzak split right tackle for tally number two. A conversion pitch to Kasprzak, after an offside call had placed the ball on the 8, failed at the 3.

On the next series of downs, runs by halfback Dave Rowe, Cutting, and Branley, gave the Sachems their first down and temporarily altered Melrose's fearful domination. This spark of life, however, which occurred near the end of the first period, was soon terminated when a Branley pass to end Vic Papadinis was intercepted on the Melrose 42. Workhorse Kasprzak carried twice to midfield, then, unexpectedly, faked a third carry, and, instead, pulled down a Turco pass for a 51-yard scoring play. The two-point conversion was good.

After a brief exchange, Winchester's Steve Goldin lofted a punt that Kasprzak fumbled but managed to retain on his own 6. Out of that tight and dangerous area, Verge carried four consecutive times for 43 yards and three first downs, Kasprzak for 10 more yards, and a Winchester illegal substitution penalty added another 5, before Turco capped the almost effortless drive with his third TD pass, a 36-yarder to Smith. Verge went over unmolested for two points, giving Melrose a substantial 30-0 half-time lead.

With Melrose coach Joe Hoague now employing his number two line and number three backfield, a Sachem fumble on their own 12 yard line paved the way for the Raider's fifth tally. The same units scored again the next time they got the ball, and with a 46-0 margin, it was all over except for the showers.

Winchester's lone TD came early in the final period when Bob Branley and John Stavros teamed on a 58-yard pass play. Branley also made the conversion good with a pass to Goldin.

Thereafter, Melrose took possession, ran off 15 plays, including 5 first downs, and consummated the afternoon's fiasco on the Sachem 15 yard line.

SACHEM SIDELINES

It was the kind of game that comes along in everybody's lifetime, and there's not a thing you can do about it except "write it off." Forget it, bury it, and prepare for next week . . . Temperatures were in the high 80's, and no where was it any warmer than on the Sachem bench and in the locker room at half-time. It was Patterson getting knocked out by Liston all over again. It made you feel a little sick . . . Grandstand quarterbacks blame the coaching staff, the antiquated plays; but with any justification? Melrose grounded out 366 yards rushing, every bit of it by simple quick-openers up the middle and off-tackle. Plays they used on the plains of Princeton in 1898! What was the difference then? Training and attitude . . . You can be taught how to tackle, you can think long hours about it, but if you don't apply it on your own incentive it's useless. No coach in America can teach a boy the things he learns by getting out to practice twenty minutes earlier, by remaining out twenty minutes later afterward; by walking when he's told to walk, by running when he's told to run . . . An inadequate coaching staff? Not a chance . . . Apply the same principle in the classrooms, and it's the student who devotes the most time applying what he has learned who finishes with the highest marks . . . Quarterback Bob Branley deserves recognition for a well-played and well-called game in the face of constant pressure. He threw several passes that were dropped, two that receivers turned the wrong way on, and accounted for all the rare penetration into Melrose territory.

Scouting Report

READING

Coach: John Hollingsworth

'62 Record: 4-5-0

After Reading's 30-26 upset of Rindge Tech last week, that unimpressive 0-3 record in Middlesex play appears less unimpressive. Although they have a porous defense, Reading has an explosive offense that can hit when you least expect it. Backs Al Tine and Barry Newell carry the load. The squad is well-conditioned and scrappy; they thrive on hard-hitting contact. Five regulars return from last year. Reading, in many respects, will compare to Stoneham. Players to watch: Tine, Newell, Foley, backs; Serrecchia, an end; Robichard, a tackle.

Indian Tracks

BY FRANK PROCOPIO

When the Yankee organization announced last week that Lawrence Peter Berra would pilot the Bombers to another pennant in 1964, baseball people reacted with varying degrees of surprise and alarm. Yogi, the son of an Italian immigrant, is not known for his intellectual capacity; nor has he ever before been remotely considered as a leader of men. He's short and squatty, and his Dumbo-like ears give you the impression that he's as flighty as his rapidly moving tongue.

But Yogi knows baseball. In fact, you might say that he's as much a connoisseur of baseball's intricacies as Casey Stengel is in fracturing the King's English. Selected the American League's Most Valuable Player in 1951-54-55, Yogi maintains a popularity that is both appreciative of his talents and derisive of his unintentional humor.

He is the only man to ever upset Ted Williams so badly that he had to step out of the batter's box and wait for the laughter to subside. He also holds the distinction of having hit more home runs than any other catcher in history. On October 2, 1947, in a game against the Dodgers, he became the first man to hit a pinch homer in World Series competition. Since breaking into the majors in 1946, under the tutorship of Bill Dickey, he has hit seven grand slammers, batted a seasonal high of .322 in 1950, and appeared in more All-Star and World Series games than any other Yankee including Babe Ruth and Lou Gehrig.

Last summer, ex-major leaguer John Berardino invited Yogi to play a bit part on an afternoon TV medical soap opera. Yogi appeared briefly as a renowned brain surgeon, uttered one gem of wisdom, and committed acting's cardinal sin by staring directly into the camera, before he walked off stage and nervously announced, "I'll stick to baseball."

Two Winchester boys, Sid Bixler and Phil Pollard, are getting their share of rugged line play with the Century Club of the Boston City Football League. Pollard played with the Wakefield Redskins last year, while Bixler is a former Harvard N. E. collegiate wrestling champ . . . Golf enthusiasts will want to experiment on the electronically operated driving range and 18-hole course recently installed at the Strike Lanes Bowling Alleys. The only one of its kind outside of Portland, Oregon, it comes equipped with everything except old fashioned outdoor exercise . . . Reading's 30-26 defeat of Rindge Tech last Saturday morning was a real shocker. Tech, noted for its fine basketball accomplishments, had previously beaten Malden . . . Burlington ended a three-year drought with its 26-8 win over North Andover, and coach Connie O'Doherty should be breathing easier . . . Despite punt returns of 50 and 45 yards by Dan Serieka, Northeastern blanked New Hampshire 26-0. Serieka contributed almost all of N. H.'s ground offense, punted, and played outstanding defense . . . It was similarly frustrating for Dartmouth's Dana Kelly who tossed for one TD and scored one himself in Harvard's 17-13 surprise . . . A lanky senior from Northern Illinois named George Bork will undoubtedly be receiving national attention any week now. Bork has fired no less than 26 touchdown passes in five games. Last Saturday, in humiliating Eastern Illinois 43-0, he completed 20 passes out of 33 attempts for 209 yards . . . Jackie Kemp's 73-yard TD pass to Charlie Ferguson in the final 40 seconds that sank the Patriots last Saturday night 28-21 should never have happened. Boston, figuring him to throw short for field goal position, failed to apply pressure by rushing, and resultantly Kemp just stood there, unmolested, calmly waiting for Ferguson to outmaneuver safetyman Bob Suci.

Sachem Soccer Team In Two Deadlock Games

Last week the Winchester soccer team played an informal scrimmage with Newton and a scheduled game with Watertown. The scrimmage, held at Winchester, did not show the best side of the Sachem booters. Newton, which is also beginning soccer this year, showed less polish than the Red and Black team, but exhibited more aggressive play and drive.

The Sachems were sporadic, their best moments showing in the second and fourth periods. In the second period, Winchester kept the ball deep in enemy territory. During one of the assaults on the enemy goal, hustling George Murpry booted home the only Red and Black score of the day.

Then again in the fourth period the Sachems drove hard, but were repelled by good play on the part of the Newton defense.

On Thursday, Winchester and Watertown tied 1-1 in a double overtime. The game, played in a constant cloud of dust, proved to be another thriller. Watertown rang up the first score of the game in the first period. In these early stages, the Sachems did not exhibit their normal hustle.

But then the spark caught and Winchester, behind the drive of center Murphy, pressed for numerous scoring opportunities. Late in the second period, a rebound from a corner kick was picked up by halfback Bob Pierce. A fine shot by Pierce knotted the score at 1-1.

The second half was a see-saw battle with the Winchester firepower greatly increased. The Watertown goalie and Dennis O'Connell, goalie for the Red and Black, made exceptional saves in the action packed second half.

This was the third straight double-overtime game for Winchester. Rumors have it that coaches Knight and Bouley have been receiving treatment following such nerve-racking finishes.

The Sachems play their first scheduled home game this Thursday at 3:15 p.m. against Wellesley High. Come and root for the Red and Black.

Canadians Go For Fluorescent Orange for Safety

The Canadian Association of Optometrists recently adopted a resolution endorsing the use of daylight flourescent orange as a public safety color and the ideal color for hunters in the field. They thus followed the lead of the American Optometric Association, the National Safety Council and the U. S. Bureau of Standards, all of which have endorsed results of the safety color study conducted by the Massachusetts Division of Fisheries and Game.

Somebody at the Candian convention went all out to get the resolution passed; they circulated bumper stickers printed in fluorescent orange, the local newspaper printed a welcome to conventioneers in fluorescent orange on its front page, and a highlight of the convention was a golf tournament played with fluorescent orange golf balls, according to the Optometric Weekly of October 10.

Massachusetts hunters in quest of deer during the shotgun season are required to wear at least 200 square inches of the material.

Ernie Nevers of the Chicago Cards scored 40 points against the Bears on November 28, 1929.

BOWLING

S.O.I. Women

A new gal on the Winstons dethroned our top bowler Terry Nappa. Her average 97.0 is top notch. A great big welcome to Ruth Garvey and good wishes for a successful season. You started off with a bang and I know your captain Ginger Maggio approves of that. Beware of Terry she's not a gal that will stay in second place. One good terrific bowler, that's our Terry. May the best gal win.

Sue did a lot of humming at Strike Lanes, 9-10 last week. That's where the Springs played the Kents and the only time the Springs took all 8 points. Must be because they have a full team now and are full of that old spirit. Good luck to their captain Laura Cario. We'll see you number one team yet!

Sue Barbaro, that cute little grandmother, did very well in the strikes and spares department. Keep it up Sue, you'll go higher than Ruth Garvey did. As for Sadie Antonuccio, I understand bowled the best she ever did. Who said you couldn't do it Sadie? Couldn't get whether that was a strike or a spare you got Sadie, but I'll be looking next week, so make it a strike for me please. Good luck!

Now for the happy and sad news.

The Strike Lanes was the scene of some spirited action last Thursday night. In the battle for last place, the Redskins managed to gain a tie with the forty-niners, mainly through the efforts of Vito Scaturro and his "golden right arm." Vito finally took his arm out of moth balls and rolled a total of 330.

The Vikings with a good team effort tipped over the Browns 8 to 0, and are looking forward to meeting the Bears next Thursday.

The Rams had three photo finishes with the Colts and just barely beat them in all 3 strings. If someone doesn't stop them soon the race for first place in the first half will be all over.

Dick Tofuri's Eagles, minus their ace Tony DeTeso, defeated the Giants 6 to 2, despite the efforts of Dick Fiore who rolled a total of 333. Charlie Doherty and the Bears finally found a team they could beat. The Bears overwhelmed the Packers 8 to 0.

Charlie Doucette and George Foley tried to take up the slack, caused by the absence of Bob Fiore, but the job was too much for them. They make a better team on the golf course, especially when it comes time to add up the scores. Anyone who has a set of ear plugs please give them to Pat Tofuri.

Notre Dame is still in the driver's seat after defeating tenth place Georgetown by an 8-0 score the last time out. All of the Notre Damers hit the 300 mark with Emile Doucette topping all with 96-126 121. The rest of the Notre Dame club is made up of Pete Lonigro, Angie Amico, Dan Gattineri and Capt. Moose Bellino. Hitting the 300 mark for the losers were Capt. Joe Marrone 106-123-98 and Tony Chefalo 112-90-104.

Winning 8-0 over twelfth place Penn moved Army from fourth spot to second in the league standing. Capt. Choppers Gangi had a big night for the victors with 110-105-139 while Joe Paonessa was the only Penn man reaching the magic number with 100-88-112.

Keeping hold of third place in the win and loss column is Bates who took seventh place Holy Cross by 5-3. Leading the Bates unit was Capt. Bob Fiore who hit for comefortable strings of 107-113-123 and was closely followed by his brother Ralph who finished up with 86-102-114. Nobody of the losers reached 300 but Capt. Muiskie Tofuri came two pins short with strings of 107-93-98.

Losing 2-6 to next to last place St. Mary's dropped Yale from second to fourth place. Dom Suppa was the only one of the winning combine not to roll 300 or better and doing so were Tony Melaragni, Phil Ardagno, Rudy Fiore and Capt. John Mangano who did best by rolling 98-125-106. Yale's Capt. Richie Bucci was the only 300 hitter with 85-116-116.

Navy and Harvard did not alter their positions in the standings of fourth and ninth places respectively after they ended up with a 4-4 split. Capt. Richie Riga was the only one for Navy going over the 300 target with 95-100-109, while Hokie Procopio did likewise for Harvard when he ended up with 94-94-132.

California's 6-2 win over Alabama moved the winners from seventh to sixth place while the defeated dropped one notch to last place. Paul Gangi was the lone California going over the 300 mark with 101-98-110 while Alabama's only 300 man was Bill Maggio who had 91-120-101. Frank Dattilo of the losers still can't believe it but his first string ended up showing 40 as his score. What-how?

Boston College took eleventh place Maryland to climb from tenth to eighth place. B. C.'s Andy Buzzotta was top performer with 114-120-88 while the 300 hitters for Maryland were John Dattilo 120-120-107, Tony Bavuso 121-101-107 and Gaspar Lentine 145-76-89.

The Aberjona Post VFW Ladies' Auxiliary bowling team rolled their usual match last Thursday at the Winchester Bowladrome.

Eleanor Yore almost broke into the 300 club again with a 298. Too bad you did not quite make it Eleanor. Lucy Corsetti almost joined the 100 club. Too bad Lucy, inasmuch as you were so close. Eleanor of course, was the evening's high bowler with a 298. Fran Lucas was second high with a 281, Marie Macario was third with a 279 and Rose DiTucci rolled fourth with a total pinfall of 273.

The Clubs added three more points to their hold on first place. They are now ahead of the second place team by 8 points.

Rose Airey now holds the high single with a 110.

McCall JHS 12, Belmont 6

McCall Junior High returned to the winning trail again on Friday by defeating a strong Belmont team 12-6 at Belmont.

This Belmont team, one of the strongest in years, was undefeated. They bombed Melrose by three touchdowns in a prior engagement. McCall lost to Melrose last week 32-14.

The McCall defense was much better this week than against Melrose and probably was the great determining factor. Coach Jim Phillips hammered home the three d's — determination, drive and desire, in practice sessions.

The first touchdown came on a pass from quarterback DeTeso to end Vespucci. Fullback Nutile scored the second touchdown on a sweep left.

Distinguishing themselves in the game were the following reserves: Ciacia, Kincaid, Vespucci, Schlener, and McGee. Regulars who did a good job on offense were: Nutile, McGee, Gentile, Sullivan, Harris, and Eaton. Good defensive players were: Harris, Queen, Sullivan, DeTeso, Reardon, Lavelle, Blanch and Bates.

Earlier in the week the team held their own in a scrimmage with the undefeated sophomores. It is hoped that their new confidence will carry over to the Concord game to be played here at 3 o'clock on Friday.

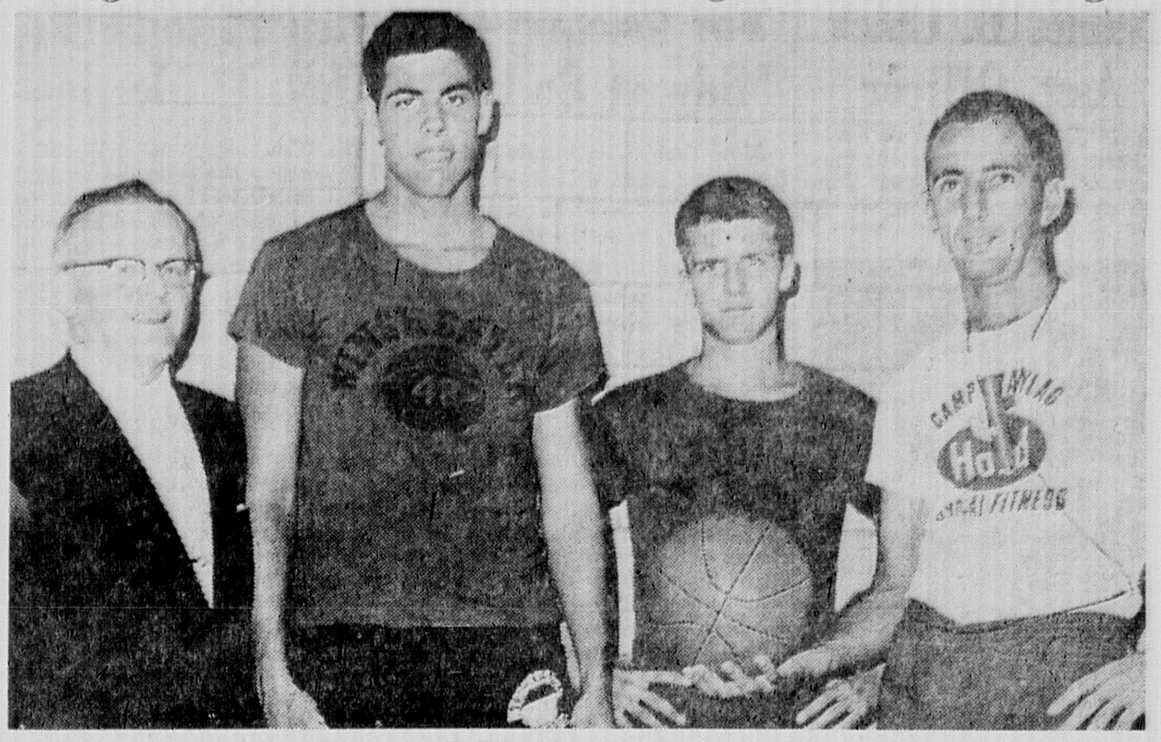
High School Stars Play With Cousy



WINCHESTER HIGH SCHOOL BASKETBALL STARS Pete Fahey and Tom Ford are shown here with "Mr. Basketball" Bob Cousy and Boston Traveler Sports Editor Fred Foye at the Belmont High School Gymnasium last Friday evening. The occasion was the first in a series of high school basketball clinics co-sponsored by the Traveler and H. P. Hood & Sons physical fitness program. Two representatives from each of the eight Middlesex League teams participated in the clinic, which ended in a two-period scrimmage, Bob playing one period for each team. In addition to his duties as head coach at Boston College, Bob is chairman of the Hood Milk Company's advisory board for physical fitness.

GRIDIRON REUNION was held last Friday afternoon when Dartmouth used Manchester Field for short practice session before Saturday's encounter with Harvard. Large Turnout For Meeting On Midwest Colleges

More than 600 students and parents from north and west of Boston were on hand to hear from four officials from the Midwest College Council the story of ten small to medium co-educational colleges which they brougt to this area for the first time Wednesday night, October 23, in the High School auditorium.

Including a large percentage from Winchester, the audience came by car and busload from as far as North Yarmouth, Maine, Amherst and Providence, R.I. The presentation was matched the same night by a similar one held at the Newton South High School for students in that area.

Called their "best session yet" after leaving their Great Lakes home area, the evening at WHS was for the Midwest officials a counteraction to that of Eastern colleges in giving impetus to more student representation from the west. The M.C.C. effort is one to broaden the national representation at its member colleges, not to increase student population.

Speaking for the group were the presidents from Alma College in Michigan and Rockford College in Illinois and deans from Albion in Michigan and Heidelberg in Ohio. They told a story of a group of compact, liberal arts and sciences colleges from which some 70% go on to further study and which offer a large variety of extra-curricular activities and strong but not highly competitive athletic programs.

Host for the evening was W. Howard Niblock, principal of WHS and about 25 of the school's Student Council members ushered and guided for the evening, under the direction of Elaine Toumarkine, faculty advisor. Thomas Morse, assistant principal, and guidance counselors Bernard J. Silva, Constance Trickett and David Sorenson arranged the evening which was preceded by an afternoon program on the same subject for other guidance personnel in the area.

A follow-up for this evening is planned at the High School for the evening of November 14, when representatives of three more out-of-New England Colleges will be on hand at a meeting planned by the WHS Parent Faculty group but also to be open to any interested parent or student in town.

Math Questions Answered For Noonan Parents

A question which recurs among Winchester parents of children going into the "new mathematics" program, "what would happen if my child moved to another town?" was answered last Wednesday evening by John Waite, of Winford Way, head of the WHS Math Department and speaking this time before the Noonan parents group.

Mr. Waite reported the mounting evidence to show that youngsters move with ease from a "new math" program to the "orthodox" math programs but that moving in the other direction is harder especially as more time goes on.

"Nationally more and more schools are turning to the new math," said Mr. Waite, "and we are expecting to see this trend reflected more and more on the College Board examinations.

Mr. Fred Wood, president of the association, conducted a brief business meeting and Mrs. David Choate spoke on what the Community Schools Association means. Miss Minetta Jurgenson, the school principal and the teachers were also present.

Following the guest speakers, everyone enjoyed refreshments provided by Mrs. Richard Allison, her co-workers and the social committee. The table was decorated with a centerpiece of lovely chrysanthemums.

CAPITOL COMMENT

By
YOUR CONGRESSMAN
BRAD MORSE

Legislation providing new tools for the prevention and control of water pollution was passed by the Senate last week. The measure now goes to the House Public Works Committee, which is expected to schedule hearings promptly.

The bill received strong bipartisan support in the Senate and passed by a 69-11 vote. It also won the endorsement of conservation and industrial groups as well as state water pollution officials.

The federal government has accepted responsibility in this field since 1948 when Congress enacted the Federal Water Pollution Control Act. The magnitude of the current and future need for water can be illustrated by two simple statistics. By 1980 we will need 600 billion gallons of water a day. This means that we will have to use 85 billion gallons twice each day in order to meet that need at existing rates of development. The importance of adequate water treatment facilities is obvious.

The legislation passed by the Senate will step up federal contributions to the cost of projects designed to develop new or improved methods of handling sewage and raises the ceiling on funds available for the construction of waste treatment works.

All federal activities in the field would be coordinated by an additional Assistant Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare and a Federal Water Pollution Control Administration within the department. Sponsors of the bill feel that centralized administration of water pollution control will more adequately cope with the broad ramification of the problem.

In addition to the obvious public health question, increased use of our water supply for industrial, agricultural and recreational purposes must also be taken into consideration.

The legislation also provides that discharges of waste material from federal installations will be controlled by permits issued by HEW to prevent additional pollution.

For the first time an effort would be made at the national level to attack the problem of detergents in our water supply. In some public water systems soap bubbles have emerged from water faucets and many people who have their own wells have found them contaminated. This situation results when detergents for home and industrial purposes do not decompose in the water treatment process. Efforts are now being made to develop decomposable detergents which will not contribute to water pollution. When they are available, the legislation provides that rules and regulations would be established to prevent the transportation or sale in interstate commerce of detergents which did not meet prescribed standards.

The legislation enacted by the Senate is a bold effort to protect our existing water supply and to provide for expanding needs. The specific provisions will be searched by the House in coming weeks.

Registrars Of Voters In Favor Of Election Balloting In Schools

The Board of Registrars appeared before the Selectmen on Monday night to report its preliminary findings and favorable initial endorsement on a plan which it is currently surveying that would alter and possibly improve local voting procedures.

The Registrars are looking into the possibility of changing the current practice of having all the registered voters of the Town cast their ballots in the Town Hall auditorium, to setting up six separate voting sites at six different elementary schools — one in each voting precinct. They were also asked by the Selectmen on Monday, October 7, to investigate and analyze the advisability of the Town's either purchasing or renting-leasing voting machines to simplify and improve the efficiency of voting and vote-counting in Winchester.

In checking the schools, with the help and cooperation of the School Department, the Registrars determined that four could be used as advantageous voting places: the Washington School in Precinct One, the Lincoln School in Precinct Two, the Mystic School in Precinct Three and, the Vinson-Owen School in Precinct Four. They were well suited as voting sites, according to the Registrars, due to suitable parking areas for cars, entrance ways to a voting auditorium that wouldn't interfere with classes, enough tables and chairs to handle the voting procedures, and storage space for storing voting machines if acquired.

The Wyman School in Precinct Five was suitable in every other way except that there was no storage space available. The Noonan School in Precinct Six also had no storage space, had a parking problem with its narrow street entrance and may be in line for the construction of an addition to its building which would rule it out as a voting site for a year or so. Suggested as an alternative to Noonan was the Lynch Junior High School, which the Registrars said they would look into.

The Registrars confirmed the Selectmen's belief that with the increasing number of registered voters in Winchester, it becomes more and more difficult to handle the polling in the limited space at the Town Hall auditorium. Of Winchester's population of 21,235 as of 1962, there were 10,407 registered voters as of June 1, 1963. (In Precinct One there are 1710, in Two there are 1568, in Three there are 1636, in Four there are 2111, in Five there are 1738, and in Six there are 1644.)

The Registrars made a visit to Lexington to see the voting machines there, where they have been used since 1956. They reported that Lexington officials said they save about $2000 in election expenses each year with the machines. They

MR. PIGEON STRUTS ABOUT HIS DOMICILE. Appearing totally unperturbed about the whole affair, pigeons, like this nonchalant bird strutting around his messy nesting place amid the substructures of the overpass bridge in the Center, have been declared a health nuisance. The local Board of Health is now in the process of trying to find out who owns the overpass so it can issue an abatement order to get the pigeons fenced out of their homesites.

Nesting Bridge Pigeons Called Health Nuisance; Who Owns Overpass?

The Winchester Board of Health has declared all-out war on a segment of the local bird population. Its first step will be to try and eliminate the most predominant aviary of that group of birds. One major hitch obstructing the inauguration of any plan of action remains to be settled before those birds can be aced out of their present locale, however. And that is: to whom does the aviary belong?

The birds, pigeons, are considered an actual health nuisance, if not health menace, by the local health board. Most of the "dirty birds" make their residence in the substructure of the Boston and Maine Railroad bridge over Church and Main Streets at the traffic circle in the Center. But the ownership of this bridge aviary has all of a sudden become a matter of puzzling speculation. The railroad, the town, and the state: all disclaim ownership!

The odd and interesting situation came about when Michael Saraco, agent for the Board of Health, decided to investigate and analyze numerous recent complaints brought by heretofore embarrassed and meek citizens who, of late, have had to submit to increasingly more and more fowl indignities beneath the bridge.

His investigation revealed that many pigeons have nested their homes there in the substructures of the bridge, and he noted that "the amount of pigeon droppings are such that a health nuisance and potential health menace does exist."

Several United States cities have for the past year been in the throes of pigeon wars. Buffalo hires full-time exterminators to kill the parasites; Cincinnati has a $50 fine for violators of an anti-pigeon feeding law designed to force the birds to leave the city. And New York City, which has traced at least two deaths so far this year to infection by pigeons, is considering feeding them chemically treated corn which would make the birds sterile and thereby gradually exterminate those around the city.

The pigeon is known to carry about a dozen infectious diseases. They are the principle carriers of a fungus called Cryptococcus neoformans, or CN, which they leave all over the place in their excreta, and which can be caught without even touching the actual defecate, but can be inhaled in dust arising from pigeon droppings. The fungus attacks the windpipe and lungs, and in its most severe form, the brain covering—resulting in almost certain death until recently when a new antifungal drug was developed, which dropped the death rate to about 30 percent. (New York City has at least 20 deaths a year due to CN.)

As much as the Board of Health, along with many dropped-on citizens, would like to see the pigeons pack up and fly away, there are no plans at present either to exterminate or get rid of them. All that is proposed now is to eliminate their public nesting places at the overpass bridge.

The overpass bridge, starting near the Wedgemere Station and going beyond the Swanton Street

Median Age Of Local Population 34 Years

How many of the important events of modern times have taken place within the lifetime of present residents of Winchester?

What proportion of the local population goes back far enough in time to remember the first crossing of the United States by an automobile, in 1903? Or the year 1909, when Peary reached the North Pole? Or the outbreak of World War I? Or D-Day, when the Allies landed in France?

A breakdown of Winchester's population into age groups, based on Government figures, shows that only 34 per cent, locally, had even been born by the end of World War I.

In 1912 the 16th Amendment was approved, giving Congress the power, for the first time, to levy a Federal tax on income. That year also witnessed the sinking of the Titanic by an iceberg, with a loss of 2,200 lives. About 27 per cent of the town's residents date back that far.

Only 47 per cent could have been present when Lindbergh flew the Atlantic, in 1927.

Not more than 62 per cent had been born when the Japanese attacked Pearl Harbor, in 1941.

New generations of young people, to whom many of these happenings are purely historical, have sprung up since then in Winchester.

Today, the figures show, there are more of these young folk around, in proportion to the total population, than in the past.

Since World War II, when the birth rate started to zoom upward, they have been arriving on the scene at a rapid rate. As a result, nearly half the population of the United States is to be found in the under-25-age groups at the present time.

Local Merchants Having "Harvest Of Values" Sale

The Winchester Merchants Association has completed plans for a "Harvest of Values" promotion on Friday and Saturday, November 15 and 16, which will include registering for a big drawing on twenty free 15-pound turkeys that will be given away.

Forty-nine local merchants will participate in the special sales on merchandise that will accompany the Friday and Saturday registration days. Customers in association member stores simply fill out coupon blanks and deposit them in boxes there for the drawing.

The names of the winners of the twenty free turkeys will be announced on Monday, November 18, at 7:30 p.m., in plenty of time for Thanksgiving and preparation.

En Ka Lists Its Financial Gifts To Local Groups

The En Ka Society has already started its good work for the 1963-64 season. Announcements of financial support already given to many Winchester groups were made at the first meeting of the year held on Tuesday, October 29.

The gifts have been: the beginnings of a film strip library for the elementary and secondary schools of Winchester, new books and book plates for the two Hospital book trucks operated by the Winchester Public Library, football equipment for the Wee Sachems, equipment and ice rentals for the Winchester Youth Hockey, new furniture to update old rooms in the Winchester Hospital, carpentry work at the Mistick Girl Scout cabin, an electric ditto machine for the Boy Scouts, gifts of clothing for distribution by the Winchester Welfare Department.

The En Ka meeting was held at the home of Mrs. William Hickey, Jr., following a luncheon served by Mrs. William Hopkins and her committee. Mrs. Philip Wadsworth, president, led the business meeting at which time reports were made by committee chairmen.

It was noted that he En Ka Exchange has opened its fifth consecutive season. Started as a service to the town in 1958, the Exchange has become an outstanding part-time business, netting for the society a sum of $2,395.00 during the past season.

At the conclusion of the meeting, the En Ka Exchange Committee presented its annual fashion show. Many high-quality but low priced articles of clothing were modeled to the interest of the members present. The program ended

Rotary Club Buys Moody's Barn For Auction Storage

The Winchester Rotary Club has announced its intentions to purchase the Elmwood Avenue barn, owned by Hiram Moody, to store merchandise collected throughout the year by the club for the annual Rotary Auction each spring, according to Aram T. Mouradian, president of the Rotary Club.

In past years, the club had been entirely dependent on the generosity of a few of its members, (primarily Lester Whittaker's and Mr. Mouradian's barns) who offered their properties for the storage of such saleable auction items as furniture appliances, rugs, books, antiques and knick-knacks. But this year, the club decided that with the increasingly larger amount of goods that have to be stored each year due to bigger collections and bigger auctions, it needed a club-owned and club-maintained storage facility.

The property that will be acquired consists of a barn with two floors, each approximately 45 by 75 feet, having a total of over 6500 usable square feet of floor space for storage.

The purchase of the "Rotary Barn" will be arranged by plans of the club's Finance Committee headed by Mr. John Morgan, local attorney, who will also handle the legal affairs of the transaction. Present thoughts are to raise as much of a down payment as possible by a combination of the club's treasury donation and by the club offering non-interest bearing certificates in denominations of $10 to its members on a voluntary purchase basis, after which the balance of the purchase price will be obtained by a ten year (or less) local bank mortgage.

3 Railroad Freight Cars Burn On Siding

Winchester firefighters responded to a fire in an open railroad box car at the freight yard siding opposite Calvary Cemetery near the Winchester-Woburn line late Monday afternoon. Two other sealed freight cars parallel to and on a track adjoining the burning one were also ignited and had to be put out by the firefighters.

Winchester Fire Chief Frank Amico said it appeared as though the fire in the open freight car, which was empty at the time, was either deliberately set or caused to be set; whereas the two other cars and their contents started to burn as a result of heat radiated from the fire in the open car.

A Boston and Maine railroad official said no immediate estimates of the damage could be ascertained but that from appearances it looked as though the empty open car, whose sides had bulged out in the heat, was extensively, possibly irreparably, damaged; while the other two and some of their contents probably could be salvaged.

At about 5:10 p.m., a Boston and Maine Railroad tower man at the Winchester Tower called the Fire Department to report the fire at the freight siding.

Engines 3 and 4 responded, along with the Rescue Truck and the men began taking hose lines to the flaming freight car from Washington Street at the Calvary Cemetery gate. The metal freight car, lined with wooden sides and flooring, was blazing furiously through the partially opened doors when the firefighters arrived at the scene.

When Chief Amico arrived he instructed the men of Engine 1 to go to the Woburn gate of the cemetery by Central Street and take lines in, and notified the B and M tower that hoses would be going across the regularly used railroad tracks and to stop any trains. One northbound commuter train was delayed a half hour while the blaze was being fought.

FIREFIGHTERS BATTLE FREIGHT CAR BLAZE. Firefighters spent over three hours putting out fires in three Boston and Maine Railroad freight cars on a siding near the Winchester-Woburn line late Monday afternoon and evening. The heat from a fire in one vacant car radiated to two other boxcars containing rolls of paper, which also had to be extinguished.

Earth Tremors Felt Locally A 2nd Time

For the second time in less than two weeks last Wednesday afternoon, October 30, Winchester residents experienced minor shock when the earth beneath them tremored several quick, short times. In the space of mere seconds at approximately 5:40 p.m., the small earthquake tremblings shook many local dwellings and other buildings.

Police received calls from residents at Crescent, Park, New Meadows, and Woodside Roads, Washington and Wildwood Streets, and Fellsdale Close, about the disturbances. Again, as in the previous occurrence of the tremors at 11:30 on the morning of Wednesday, October 16, some residents inquired whether the earth shocks were the result of sonic booms from jet planes breaking the sound barrier, blasting experiments conducted at the Winchester Crushed Stone property off Garfield Avenue by the Monsanto Research Corporation, or actual earthquakes.

One resident told police that the sharp tremors caused several glasses in her home to rock off shelves and fall to the floor and break. No substantial material damages were reported, however.

The first quaking tremors were confirmed to be slight earthquakes by officials at the Weston Observatory and the M.I.T. seismograph station. They extended throughout eastern Massachusetts and southern New Hampshire.

Last week's incident was similarly confirmed as small earthquake tremors. Earth scientists noted that as many as a few hundred such small earthquakes occur annually in the Eastern United States, but that many go either unnoticed or unheralded. Earthquakes of the magnitude which leveled San Francisco in 1906, and which almost obliterated a Yugoslavian city earlier this year, are almost unknown on the eastern seaboard of the United States.

An earthquake is a shaking of the ground as elastic vibrations traverse it. They are normally caused by the fracturing of earth materials, and at the time of fracture, energy is released, which travels away from the center of the disturbance in the earth's architecture in elastic vibrations. The focal center of earthquakes have been located at varying depths ranging from near the surface to more than 400 miles below the surface.

Earth scientists generally accept as axiomatic the relationship that the cause of earthquakes is intimately related to a universal mobility of the earth's surface. Structural and historical geological data give evidence of forces constantly at work moulding the surface skin

Buzzotta, Parsons Win Police Awards

Police Officers Mario Buzzotta and Thomas C. Parsons were presented with Meritorious Service Awards before a large audience in the High School auditorium last night at the 33rd annual Policemen's Concert. The joint award, presented to the two officers for their performance of duty in apprehending two housebreakers last December, was made by Shailer Avery, chairman of the Board of Selectmen.

The two officers received Meritorious Service Awards at last night's annual Policemen's Concert for their action in apprehending the housebreakers.

The awards, consisting of certificates engraved with the officers' names and the action for which they were given, and wooden plaques bearing similar inscriptions with Winchester Police Department badges set into the wood, were given for the first time this year by the Winchester Police Association.

The award ceremony took place during the intermission of the regular concert of professional entertainment acts. Edward Hicks, a member of the award committee, described the nature of the awards to be presented and then introduced Mr. Avery, who actually made the presentations.

Mr. Avery spoke about the good performance of duty displayed by the officers who were to win the awards, while the audience waited in hushed anticipation for the naming of the names, and then called Officers Buzzotta and Parsons to the stage to receive their awards for meritorious service.

The audience, consisting of police officers and their wives and families, town officials and employees, and many interested citizens, enthusiastically applauded the winners of the Meritorious Service Awards.

Present on the stage for the award ceremony were the Selectmen, the concert committee, and the award committee which selected this first year's winners. The award committee consisted of impartial representatives from the Board of Selectmen, Edward Hicks; the Police Department, Lt. Edward Bowler; the Winchester

Republican Women Challenged By Sen. Graham

"How can we be expected to raise disciplined and law abiding citizens when we ourselves are not capable of putting men in office who can execute these laws with integrity and decency?" questioned Senator Philip A. Graham, Republican floor leader of the Senate at a meeting here of the Women's Republican Club held Wednesday evening, October 30th, at the home of Mrs. Thomas L. Morison.

Introduced by Representative Harrison Chadwick, who in turn was presented to the group by Mrs. Sherman W. Saltmarsh, Jr., vice president, Senator Graham pointed out several current issues with which our citizens should be concerned and made reference to some of the abuses brought out in the devastating Blatnik Committee Report on the Massachusetts Department of Public Works. "With the finger of scorn pointed from without, it is about time that we in Massachusetts took some positive action to correct these abuses," declared the minority leader.

Taking a more positive approach, the Senator from Hamilton condoned the Republican philosophy of "helping people help themselves." He mentioned his own educational HELP program and the tax reduction proposal for home owners over 70 years of age as examples of this type of Republican aid.

"We are in a mess," concluded Graham. "The government of Massachusetts is in the control of power politicians who know every devious means to increase their power. High-mindedness and good intentions are not enough to restore integrity to Massachusetts government. It is action on the part of the people that is needed to clean this state up and restore it to its former high level."

now employ about 14 workers at elections, whereas they used to hire 68. Officials and residents of that town affirm that the machines greatly increase efficiency, reduce time spent during elections (in the 1960 national election Lexington had finished counting at 8:45, long before Winchester was anywhere near tabulated), and eliminate there being any recounts of votes because the machines are valid as the final count.

In recommending either the purchase or rental of voting machines for Winchester as soon as possible, the Registrars noted that another town, Brookline, has had the same voting machines for over 20 years without having to make any repairs or maintenance work on them.

Elsie Nelson, town clerk, said that the voting law required one machine for every 400 voters if the Town decided to get machines. (The same law prescribes one voting booth for every 72 voters as the alternative, which Winchester has not had for several years.) The Town would need about 31 machines to comply with the legal requirement, and would cost, if purchased, about $60,000. Rental fees for the machines would be about $150 per year for each machine, or $4500 a year total.

Shailer Avery, chairman of the Board of Selectmen, said: "I can't think of anything more in demand the day before an election (than a voting machine), and less in demand the day after." He said he thought the best plan might be to rent the machines on a lease plan, whereby after so many years the machines would be purchased by the Town's renting of them, and thereby avoiding the heavy initial capital expenditure.

Selectman John Sexton said he would hate to see the Town buy the machines, only to find out one or two or more years later that better and cheaper machines might be developed.

The Selectmen charged the Registrars with continuing their survey and with collating information with the Town Comptroller to find out: (1) number of personnel required if voting places made at the schools and if machines are used the cost of making the change and getting the equipment; (2) preparing an article for the Town Meeting to rent or purchase voting machines in time for use in the national primaries and elections in 1964; and (3) in preparing procedures to have the March election voting take place in the schools in the precincts with the present equipment; and (4) look into using the Lynch Junior High School as a substitute for the Noonan School for voting in Precinct Six.

Also being considered is to offer these same certificates to civic-minded and community spirited non-club members of Winchester who may thus wish to show their interest, appreciation, and support of their town's Rotary Club and its many volunteered endeavors to help and benefit the Winchester community and its people throughout each year by virtue of the club's continuing practice of the Rotary theme "Service Above Self." It is intended that all outstanding certificates will be redeemed at the rate of 10 percent per year of the total number issued, or more or sooner if possible, depending on how such plan will eventually be devised.

The club's major income is derived from the proceeds of its annual auction, such income being primarily distributed to worthy local causes such as the Winchester Hospital, the Girl Scouts, the Little League, the Boy Scouts, the Winning Farm, the PAL League, the Babe Ruth League, for scholarships and many other useful purposes here in the community. Now with the advent of a permanent Rotary Barn becoming a reality, the action by the club confirms the long-time continuance of the annual auction, which benefits these worthy causes.

It has been suggested that with the onset of a permanent auction storage facility being established in our locale, the public may well have the opportunity to examine and purchase much of the collected and stored merchandise far in advance of the annual auction date, thereby eliminating competitive buying for those interested individuals who may be seeking, and are strongly desirous of purchasing, specific items of their choice at other times throughout the year.

Awards

Star, David McLean; and the Woburn Times, Charles Riley.

The award committee in recommending the two officers for the awards, noted that when the officers were confronted with the dangerous situation involving criminals breaking into a house on Priscilla Lane last December, they immediately prepared a plan of action and in following it through displayed "meritorious police service" in exemplary courage and determination.

At 7:30 p.m. on Friday, December 14, 1962, Officers Buzzotta and Parsons discovered a car on Priscilla Lane with a rifle and shotgun in the back seat. It was in a section of Winchester that had been subjected to numerous housebreaks and the area residents were in a state of alarm.

They then noticed a light go on in a Sargent Road house that had previously been in darkness. Officer Buzzotta stayed near the suspicious car and firearms in case the criminals returned to their vehicle for a get-away. Officer Parsons went to the house where suspicious activity was going on.

Officer Parsons found the back door wide open and a pane of glass broken, indicating an illegal entrance. When two men came out of the house he ordered them to raise their hands. They ran back into the house.

Officer Parsons fired two shots into the air to warn Officer Buzzotta, and charged into the house after the two men—who, by every sign, were probably armed.

The two men ran out the front of the house, and Officer Parsons fired another shot into the air to scare them into stopping, but they ran through a wooded section to the rear of Priscilla Lane until they were confronted and stopped at gunpoint by Officer Buzzotta.

Both officers were officially commended for their action by the Board of Selectmen and Police Chief Joseph Derro at that time. The Meritorious Service Award confirmed public recognition to the two police officers for a job well done.

The rest of the Policemen's Concert was fully enjoyed by the attending audience. Everyone received a souvenir program, giving a history of the Winchester Police Department, the aims of the Police Association, and pictures of this year's two retiring officers, Lt. Edward O'Connell and Officer Joseph Quigley, as well as pictures of the Police-School Traffic Officers, the Police Auxiliary, and the special police.

The influence and power wielded by the younger generation has risen just as rapidly.

President Kennedy, who reached the White House at age 43, is a prominent example. He was born after this country had entered World War I.

In Winchester, the figures show, the median age of the population is 34.1. There are as many local people under that age as there are over it.

It compares with a median of 29.5 years in the United States as a whole, 31.6 in the New England States and 32.1 in the State of Massachusetts.

He graduated from Milton High School in 1950 and received his A.B. with honors from Northeastern University in 1955, majoring in sociology. He entered Harvard Divinity School in September 1955 and received his B.D. in 1958.

He held a graduate assistantship under the direction of Paul Johnson for the academic year 1958-59. He also served during this period as Director of Youth, First Congregational Church of milton. He received his Ph.D. degree in June 1953.

Dr. Scroggs was ordained to the ministry of the Congregational Christian Churches. Present standing in the United Church of Christ. At Mount Vernon he was particularly concerned with a college student group conducting weekly sessions using pastoral sermons as a basis for the condideration of personal conflicts and the development of a more satisfying psychological and theological maturity. Dr. Scroggs is writing a book based largely on the therapeutic experiences of this student group.

The Second Congregational Church membership looks forward to having Dr. Scroggs and his wife enter into the ministry, and activities of their church.

Early Winchester Horses Recalled From Yesteryear

Horses were back on the Winchester streets recently when the dry spell caused the Fellslands to be closed to riders from nearby stables and the police received numerous calls from citizens registering curiosity and in some instances distress at their appearance alongside the auto traffic.

Harlan Trott, a reporter on The Christian Science Monitor, wrote a piece published in the Monitor October 8 entitled "A Way of Life Was Leaving," in about three-fourths of which he reminisced on the role of the horse in Winchester life at about the time ". . . Governor McCall had turned the seals of the Commonwealth over to Calvin Coolidge. . . ."

Mr. Trott's familiarity with both Winchester history and horses stems from the same local source. He is the nephew of the late Frank G. Trott, who for many years made his home at 18 Mystic Avenue. Frank Trott was a gentleman who knew as much about horses as any you could find in these parts at that time, for he held for a great many years the post of turf editor for the Boston Globe.

The Star takes pleasure in reproducing, with the permission of The Christian Science Monitor, Mr. Trott's article, which appeared in that paper as a "West Coast Report," datelined San Francisco.

"One of the appealing trends in outdoor recreation clear across the American West is the comeback of the family horse.

"There must be a lot of 'country' left in a good many grown-up 'city' boys. Where else to all these plush horse trailers come from that you meet along the summer vacation trail?

"They couldn't all be heading down the Palouse into Oregon for the Pendleton Roundup. Or making tracks for Nampa, Idaho, for the roping and riding and drillsmanship, and the competing sheriff's posses that impart their feather-reined magic to the ranchers' yearly Snake River Stampede.

"For all we know, they are mainly suburbanites, even as you and I. Perhaps some of them have never quite shaken off the nostalgia of the Saturday night band concert; or of summers long ago when fathers knocked off haying for a day to surrey their families into Woodsville for Chautauqua—down almost the last golden mile of the family horse.

"Horses were going out of business around Boston just about the time we were coming in. When William Bain of Bain Brothers put us to work in his coffee roasting department, there was a horse in the woodpile. 'Since you will be commuting through the North Station,' explained Mr. Bain, 'you will not have to walk to and from India Street. You may stop off at the Chardon Street Stables night and morning to deliver and return the team.'

"Across the street, S. S. Pierce was still transporting edible merchandise to the 'Yarmouth Boats' in a four-horse dray.

"In Winchester, most of the neighbors had disposed of horses. Fresh kids from up around the brickyard were beginning to call them hay burners.

"The McCalls up on Black Horse Terrace were riding around in a Winton. Governor McCall had just turned the seals of the Commonwealth over to Calvin Coolidge who was importuning people to have faith in it.

"Over on Wedgemere Avenue, for a long time, the Martin's just couldn't see parting with Iris. Evenings when Mr. Martin alighted from the 5:15, he would go around to her head the first thing. Quite often he would lay his face against the silver M on her bridle. Possibly the check rein needed adjusting or something. It was funny how Iris' ears were always pointed in the direction of his footsteps. But probably this had nothing to do with it. Mr. Martin merely said the mare was awfully good about standing at the depot.

"Mrs. Martin always looked so pleased to be clip-clopping down Church Street Sunday mornings on her way to the little brown-shingle one across the bridge from the savings bank. When it was cold, the coachman was good about having Mrs. Martin's soapstone foot warmer nice and hot.

"But all up and down elm-rowed South Main Street, stables had been or were being transformed into garages. Even old Mr. Cutting down on Cutting Street was now coming and going in a noiseless fish bowl that ran on batteries.

"In the big yellow Victorian mansion at the head of Mystic Avenue and South Main, the Lawsons' matching Victorian coach house was by now only a cob-webbed crypt. Inside, the ghosts of Thomas W. Lawson's elegant glass carriages stood as mute in their white dustproof shrouds as the gilded age of frenzied finance he described in his book about State Street.

"The Lawson legend still flickered in the Edwardian afterglow. The neighbors remembered how he used to commute summers to his 600-acre farm in Egypt on the South Shore in a special train shown in the New Haven timetable as the 'Lawson Flyer.'

"Dreamwold was enclosed in seven miles of white fences. He had 300 horses. They say he knew the name of each one as well as he remembered the day's closing quotation of Copper Consolidated. He had a training shed bigger than Madison Square Garden—the old garden with Diana teetering on top of everything in her nightgown, dancing down the mauve decades on one foot.

"Nowadays visitors to Brockton Fair don't realize the exhibition hall they're standing in was Tom Lawson's horse barn before the panic. Soon the rest of his rose-bowered demesne was sold—washed up in the finnacial flotsam of those frenzied times. It made older Winchester residents sad the morning after Halloween when they saw his two-horse brougham left on the high-school steps where some pranksters had scuttled it in the dark.

"A way of life was leaving. But the new self-starting status symbols did not have everything their own way yet. Americans were showing as much faith in Coolidge as he had shown for Massachusetts. When the family went to Swampscott one summer, his frugal Vermont nature showed when he shipped the White House linen north in the presidential yacht Mayflower.

"Unflinching in his dual role of White House naval aide and laundryman, Capt. Adolphus Andrews had her sailors unload the stuff quickly at Marblehead and hustle it right over to the Stearns estate.

"Down at Prides Crossing, Mr. Justice Holmes was waving to summer neighbors who still swished by in jingly, leather-squeaking carriages pulled by ponies mad with pride.

"At Newport, September 1930, we remember seeing a nabob pull up at the Ida Lewis Yacht Club Station in a high-wheeled, rubber-rimmed, plum-painted dog cart. Aiming a telescope at Sir Thomas Lipton's Shamrock V, he studied the slithery green challenger, then handed the glass to the mutton-chopped gentleman's gentleman beside him.

"With a jaunty crack of the whip worthy of Swithin Forsyte, late of Richmond Park, the pair jogged away in the direction of Bailey's Beach, no doubt with word the British had landed but not to worry—this time.

"At Dark Harbor, Maine, citizens were debating allowing automobiles on the Isleboro Ferry.

"In Boston, the horse cabs were grouping for their last stand. Their head-drooping ranks in front of the Hotel Vendome were almost as thin as Custer's.

In Winchester, Mr. Parkhurst, our back-fence neighbor, president of Ginn & Company, and donor of Dartmouth's Parkhurst Hall, clung to his solitary cow."

SOI Halloween Costume Winners

The lights were low, the couples were dancing to the strains of Rajjar's music at the Sons of Italy Hall. It was a Halloween Costume Party. All of a sudden there appeared at the door a terrible sight. Everyone gasped and held their necks, for at the door was Dracula. George Canavan did such a good job portraying the horrible vampire that he took 1st prize for the most original costume.

Dracula's first victim was a pretty little thing all dressed up like a Geisha girl. Elaine Laurila's robe was a lovely soft pink and white print and her Geisha style hair-do was beautiful. Elaine won 1st prize for the prettiest costume.

An odd sight appeared when two sacks stepped out on the dance floor with an extra large pillow case for a head that went all the way to the waistline. Their shirts started at the waistline and were then tucked in a little pair of pants that started at the knees. Mr. and Mrs. Peter DeFronzo won the 1st prize for the funniest costumes.

George Herald, a hillbilly farmer who played his part to perfection, won a prize for the 2nd most original costume.

Al and Bobbie Ungaretti won a prize for the 2nd prettiest costume with their clown outfits decorated with large colorful patches.

Paul Orlando as Kid Sparks kept everybody guessing as to his identity until the final unmasking. Paul won the prize for the 2nd most funniest costume.

It was a very hard job to pick winners from all the good costumes. Everyone did such a wonderful job and you could see that a lot of thought and work went into the creating of the costumes.

The winners of the raffle were Ann Procopio, a bottle of cheer, and Charles Lizzotte a 4-foot bottle of wine.

The committee is to be complimented on all the hard work that went into making this affair a memorable one.

Pigeons

bridge, was part of a project begun early in 1950 to eliminate the dangerous Winchester Square grade crossing. The elevated bridge was constructed by the State Department of Public Works at an approximate cost of $6 million, with the Town of Winchester sharing in the expense by contributing $190,000.

According to a copy of the agreement signed between the State, the Town, and the Railroad on August 27, 1954, the "maintenance" of the "Bridge over Church and Main Streets and traffic circle, including both substructure and superstructure," was assigned to the responsibility of the Boston and Maine Railroad. Since the bridge was completed in 1954, the Railroad has performed painting and other maintenance work on the substructure of the bridge, and for this reason Mr. Saraco wrote to the B. and M. legal department on Wednesday, October 23, for their opinion on whether they would assume the expense of preventing the pigeons from continuing their present nestings.

Mr. Saraco said he believed the best method in stopping the birds from nesting in the bridge's exposed sub-spans would be to lay wire mesh across the open areas. He estimated the cost of such a project at a few thousand dollars.

On Friday, October 25, Mr. Saraco met with Chester Prior, attorney for the Boston and Maine Railroad, and Lawrence Boyd, assistant engineer of Bridges for the Railroad. The represntatives of the Railroad said it was their opinion that the bridge was still the property of the State Department of Public Works because it had never been released from the State to the Railroad, and that the B. and M. only owned the tracks and ties.

In a letter dated Tuesday, October 29, Mr. Saraco related the opinion of the Railroad to the Commissioner of Public Works and asked for either confirmation or denial of the fact.

On Monday, November 4, Mr. Saraco called the commissioner to inquire again into the matter. The commissioner said he had not looked fully into the question, but his immediate response was that he believed the bridge was the property of the Railroad.

Mr. Saraco told the Star on Monday that if he does not get a reasonable response or some indication of intentions of action to be taken within a few weeks, he will issue an abatement order on the Railroad to have the health nuisance abated.

Once the Board of Health issues an abatement order, the owner or user of the property must inform the board of its intentions to remove the cause of the order or suffer one of two consequences: (1) a $20 a day fine for every day the abatement order is not complied with after a reasonable time, or (2) the Town will underwrite the expense of removing the nuisance and then bill the owner for the charges.

Mr. Saraco said that when the pigeon nuisance at the overpass bridge has been eliminated, the Board of Health will then ask the Town to have the same nuisance eliminated from the bridge passing over Waterfield Road near the Winchester Station and the bridge passing over the Skillings By-pass.

These bridge sections were not a part of the project plan designed by the State, but were put in for the convenience of the Town at the Towns's expense. The Railroad maintains these bridge sections at a reimbursable cost to the Town.

The Fortnightly Runs Scholarship Benefit Bridge

The dessert bridge sponsored by The Fortnightly was held Monday afternoon, November 4, at Gifford Hall, Crawford Memorial Methodist Church.

The tea table attracted the members and friends with its colorful homemade desserts arranged and served by Miss Ruth Albee, the club's social chairman, and her committee. The autumn floral centerpiece on the tea table was arranged and donated by Mr. Charles Forester, the florist, and was the door prize won by Mrs. Charles J. Cawley. Each bridge table created a patriotic theme with white covers, and red, white and blue napkins. For the highest individual scorer each table had a sterling silver salt-spoon lapel pin by Gorham wrapped decoratively in white paper and tied with red, white and blue ribbon.

Mrs. Paul W. Atwood welcomed the members and their guests and thanked them for their supporting interest.

Donations for the prize of a large silver tray by Gorham were sold. The lucky number was drawn by Mrs. Herbert Thompson, president, and the winner was Mrs. Martin Swanson.

The committee who worked with Mrs. Paul Atwood and co-chairman, Mrs. Francis Bowes to provide the members and friends this entertaining afternoon were: Mrs. Ralph Hatch, Mrs. Paul Stoneman, Mrs. Lester Hall, Mrs. Robert Hadley and Mrs. Carlyle Fiske.

The proceeds from this event will benefit The Fortnightly's Community Hospital Service Committee with Mrs. Paul Atwood as chairman and the Education and Scholarship Committee with Mrs. Francis Bowes as chairman.

Wyman Parents Have A Ball

On last Saturday evening, the parents and friends of Wyman School held their annual dance, whirling to the music of Roger Carpenter and the Meltones amid the beautiful settings of the islands. A frieze of sea shells and water adorned the stage, authentic costumes decorated the walls and mobile sea serpents and lanterns hung from the ceiling.

Mrs. Dennis Smith and her decorating committee of Mrs. William Sauber, Mrs. Wells Whitney, Mrs. Charles Mahoney and Mrs. Frank Cullen did a beautiful job of transforming the auditorium into the islands of Tahiti or Bora Bora. Special thanks also go to Mr. Whittaker of the Winchester Conservatories for so generously doing the exquisite orchid corsages sold by two lovely flower girls, Sara Dillon and Debby Wells.

Punch, donated by Converse Market, and party snacks were served at the gaily decorated tables by Mrs. Walter Armstrong and her committee who included Mrs. Robert Harris, Mrs. C. William Ross, Mrs. James Mulcare, and Mrs. G. E. Dillon.

Raincoats and umbrellas were checked at the coat room with the help of Nancy Armstrong and Martha Harrington.

Near the end of the evening, Mrs. Percy Hill, president of the Wyman Parents' Association and her husband drew the lucky numbers for the door prizes that had been donated by our merchants.

The real success of the evening was due to the splendid efforts of Mrs. Richard Hillger, the dance chairman and Mrs. Judson James, the ticket chairman, who together announced that the evening was a great success.

Garden Clubs Key to Wildlife Conservation

Garden clubs and similar groups should play a greater role in conserving the Bay State's wildlife resources, state fisheries and game director Francis W. Sargent told the annual meeting of the Garden Club Federation of Massachusetts at the South Shore Country Club in Hingham Tuesday.

Sargent told delegates that sportsmen now carry the financial burden of wildlife conservation almost alone. Last year for example, the nation's sportsmen contributed about 143 million dollars directly to state and federal wildlife conservation programs through license purchases and federal taxes on hunting and fishing equipment. State wildlife agencies like the Massachusetts Division of Fisheries and Game almost entirely depend on these sources of revenue. In Massachusetts, sportsmen annually contribute a little over one million dollars in lincense fees and about 140 thousand dollars through the federal aid programs.

"But this is not enough," Sargent said, "to accomplish all that needs to be done if we are to have enough wildlife habitat in the future to insure there being wildlife for all our citizens to enjoy." Sargent told the meeting that the most pressing need is open space, marshes and similar areas for habitat. He said that the nation is losing an estimated million acres a year of such land to unplanned development.

"In Massachusetts we have never had sufficient funds to acquire and manage enough wildlife habitat areas," Sargent said. "Although we have a number of such areas scattered around the state, which are open to outdoor recreationists of many kinds besides just hunters and fishermen, they are too few and most are too small." He said that a survey showed a 25-per cent higher usage on just one state wildlife management area for a multitude of types of outdoor recreation other than just hunting and fishing. "It is important to realize," he stated, "that waterfowl hunters, for example, pay through purchase of migratory bird hunting stamps for national waterfowl refuges on which hunting in either prohibited or greatly restricted. Yet the general public can use these areas without contributing one cent to their purchase or upkeep."

"Whether we seek our recreation with a camera or a gun, binoculars or a fishing pole, makes no difference," the director stated. "The point is that we should work more closely together to see that our joint property, the wildlife resource, is wisely used and effectively managed for the good of both the resource and ourselves."

Three-Year Enlistments

The shortest enlistments offered by any service, with a guarantee of the assignment chosen by the enlistee, are still available in the Army, according to Recruiting Sergeant Fred T. Nixon, at the Army Recruiting Station at 49 High Street, Medford.

Sergeant Nixon said that the Army is the only service which offers guaranteed training or overseas choice prior to enlistment. He said that he is still authorizrd to accept three-year enlistments and that he can provide written guarantees before enlistment that the volunteer will receive the assignment for which he qualifies.

Practicality of this three-year enlistment has been proven both to the satisfaction of the Army and to the millions of young men who have benefited from it in the past.

The term of enlistment allows attendance at any of the Army's 107 technical schools, including even those electronic schools lasting a full year; however, it also allows the Army to utilize the skills thus acquired by the soldier.

Anyone interested in this three-year enlistment with the assignment guarantee, may get details by visiting Sergeant Nixon's High Street office or by calling him at EX 6-5777.

Fire

Meanwhile, the Woburn Fire Department sent Engines 2 and 4 to the blaze, and the Arlington Fire Department sent their Engine 4 to the Winchester Fire Station under the mutual aid assistance program to cover-in for the local firefighters.

After the fire in the New York Central's 7415 car was put out, firefighters noticed that two other cars lined up parallel to and adjoining the burning car were also hot and smoking badly. They waited for a freight shifter to move the train of cars and separate the two before opening the doors of the Chesapeake and Ohio 172110 and Central of Georgia 7691 to put out those fires.

When they opened the doors they found the contents, large heavy rolls of paper (of the type used in making cardboard cartons), and the wood sheathing of the cars on fire and smoking extensively.

The Winchester and Woburn Fire Departments finished extinguishing the fires in the railroad freight cars at approximately 9:10 p.m. There were no injuries reported by firemen.

On Tuesday afternoon the Boston and Maine Railroad took the three cars to its Charlestown repair and maintenance shop.

Annual Charity Duplicate Bridge

Plans are well under way for the annual Charity Duplicate Bridge, sponsored jointly by the Winchester Duplicate Bridge Club and the American Contract Bridge League as part of its national charity program planned for Friday, November 22.

The social "hour" will start at 7:30, bridge will begin at eight. Sixty tables will be ready at Hadley Hall, Church of the Epiphany, in anticipation of an even larger game than last year.

"Not only will there be a pleasant evening of duplicate bridge and socializing, there will be beautiful door prizes for lucky players. And most important, it's for a good cause," says Mrs. Robert Gove, chairman.

The proceeds of the game this year will benefit the American Cancer Society and the United Cerebral Palsy Associations. Last year a total of nearly $250,000 was raised by the ACB Leagues's charity program, and we hope you will take part in raising an even bigger amount this year, and enjoy yourself at the same time.

The American Cancer Society is the only national health organization fighting cancer with a balanced three-fold program, through: research, education, and service. One out of three cancer patients will be saved today. It could be one out of two with early detection and proper treatment.

Cerebral Palsy is a cruel multiple crippler that handicaps more than 600,000 persons in this nation. The United Cerebral Palsy Association, Inc. and its 324 affiliates throughout the country offer medical, education, recreational, and vocational services to the cerebral palsied and carry on a program of research and training in universities and laboratories in the United States and Canada.

So plan on that evening now, November 22. Come with your regular partner—or come alone, we guarantee you'll find a partner at the door. And even if you're new at the game, we likewise promise you a pleasant introduction to duplicate. For tickets in advance call Mrs. Gerry Lawrence, PA 9-5027, or come on down to any Wednesday evening game of the WDBC.

"Relative Values" Delighted Many Last Weekend

On Friday night in Metcalf Hall at the Unitarian Church the curtain rose on the first production of the season presented by the Unitarian Players.

There was a burst of applause at the sight of the elegant set designed by Cecil Prest and Jacqueline H. Sibley. It was constructed by Woodford L. Wilcox, assisted by Stephen Brown, Jr., and C. Dennis Smith, and all concerned with its planning and construction could be proud of the professional quality of their work.

The play, "Relative Values" by Noel Coward, was an excellent showcase for the dramatic ability of this theater group. No one can deny that this play is outdated; it was a "period piece" when written. But there is also no denying that the audience, including this reviewer, enjoyed itself immensely.

Thanks to the considerable acting talents of the Players and the expert direction of Jacqueline H. Sibley, the venture was a huge success.

The dialogue started off at a rapid clip, and the pace was maintained, sustaining the audience's interest in the plot and even supplying a certain amount of suspense.

All the action takes place in the library of the ancestral mansion of the Earl of Marshwood; and the plot evolves about the fact that the Earl is about to marry an American actress, Miranda Frayle, who is the maid's younger sister who ran off to America twenty years before.

The first act was dominated by the subtle acting of Cecil Prest as the butler. He skillfully portrayed the traditional British man servant immortalized by P. G. Wodehouse's Jeeves—efficient household manager, wise philosopher, but one who knows his place. Betty Foskett did a credible acting job as the distraught Moxie, the maid. In the second act, when she has to sit and listen to her sister's monstrous lies about her early life, her gestures and facial expressions were wonderful.

Betty Vallee, in a bright red sheath and a glamorous coiffeur by Woody's Hair Styles, was a delight. In the very difficult role of a flighty, pretentious woman, her acting was carefully controlled at all times. Even among professional performers there is often a tendency to play a part like this too broadly and create a caricature rather than a character; but Mrs. Vallee's restraint was fine. Every gesture and movement had a meaning and she projected the artificiality and shallowness of Miranda without making her out a fool. Her timing was perfect and although her voice was soft, she was easily heard at all times. Even when she changed her vibrant red costume to a simple black dress, her stage presence commanded the audience's attention whenever she was on stage.

Enid Houlding turned in a good performance as Felicity, which must have been a tiring one as she was on stage almost all during the play. She had most of the funny lines and these she tossed off with delightful aplomb. Her vocal expression and timing were very good. Tony Carrigan showed the right amount of petulance as Nigel; Ken Astill was excellent in a small role, gargling in his beard in the British prototype of the gruff military man; and Ron Papile sauntered about the stage with just the right mixture of tired boredom and malicious wit. Ted Knowlton added a dash of American virility as Don Lucas. (We knew he was American because he spoke English ungrammatically.) Bertha Blanchard did very well in a small role and Ann Carrigan was cute and pert in the role of a maid.

At the final curtain all ended happily. Nigel is prevented from marrying Miranda, Moxie goes back to being a maid, and Miranda goes off with Don Lucas.

The town is indeed lucky to have such a versatile group of thespians and we are happy to learn that their spring production will be Jerome Lawrence's challenging play "Inherit the Wind."

The many people behind the scenes who contributed to the success of the play are to be congratulated. They are: Mrs. Woodford L. Wilcox, chairman of production; Robert L. Storer, Miss Hilary Beal, Mrs. Roderick G. Hoag, John White, set decor; Mrs. Thornton Stearns, costumes; George and Louise Hulbert and Ken Astill, publicity; Mrs. C. Dennis Smith, prompters; Mrs. Robert T. Pritchard, Mrs. James E. Kimball, tickets; lighting, William R. Sorenson; Mrs. James Willioughby, program, and Mrs. Ury J. Rath, stage manager, are among the many who helped out on the show.

Editorials:

Rule Not By Men, But By Law: Some School Systems Violate Our Heritage

This nation was founded by men searching for religious freedom, and from that basic principle of human rights we have evolved into a society which allows many more individual human freedoms than any other nation on the face of the earth. And one of the main reasons why this society has become the strong and stable one it has is because it has adhered to the principle that the nation shall be ruled not by men, but by laws—laws which protect the individual within that large mass known as society.

The Supreme Court, the interpreter of our laws, decided earlier this year that compulsory readings from the Bible and recitation of prayers required in the schools of many states was unconstitutional because it was a form of the state's establishing religion. That edict automatically made null and void Chapter 71, Section 31, of the Massachusetts General Laws, which read, "a portion of the Bible shall be read daily in the public schools, without written note or oral comment but a pupil whose parents or guardian informs the teacher in writing that he has conscientious scruples against it, shall not be required to read from any particular version, or to take any personal part in the reading . . ."

The Massachusetts law seemed fair enough to anyone who might object to having to participate in formal religious exercises at the public schools. However, the Supreme Court ordered that those children should not even have to listen to the exercises performed by others, or feel the need to leave the classroom through objection, because of personal and social pressure and embarrassment on such an intimately individualistic thing as devotion.

There was and still is a great amount of disagreement over the decision by those who see no violation of the religious freedom principle in the daily exercises at the public schools.

The majority of school administrators, mostly obeying the laws of the land because they felt they had to, eliminated compulsory readings and prayers from the school program. This was what happened in Winchester: the School Department regretted having to stop the morning exercises, but did so. However, there are some communities in Massachusetts whose school administrators believed their opinions were more valid for their towns and cities than that of the Supreme Court, and persisted in having readings and prayers of a religious nature.

Since schools were first established in the Colonies, they were recognized as the training ground for developing good and responsible citizens in a democracy. For the most part, this belief, strongly held by one of the framers of the Constitution, Thomas Jefferson, has largely been borne out.

However, the rebellion of some school systems (like the one in North Brookfield in this state) in openly and almost belligerently defying the interpretation of the law, is shocking and in poor taste. What kind of an example do the administrators of that school system think they are giving to the children in that town: that it is all right to disobey the law? That the law speaks for everyone but him or they who thing it doesn't pertain to them?

Probably at no other time in the history of American education, except for the Scopes Trial in Tennessee on the right of a teacher to teach scientific evolution, or the so-called loyalty oaths proposed for teachers in the 1950's during a Communism scare, has the freedom of the individual student or teacher or administrator in the schools been under such public view. And some administrators choose to deliberately defy the law, setting themselves up as being "more lawful than the law itself."

While the Constitution allows the right to protest, it does not endorse the right to defy laws, and this is what some school systems around the nation have injudiciously gone ahead and done. How then, must their pupils react when studying about American government and history? Will the textbook answers then not become for them merely theories that aren't and don't have to be understood or practiced? Will not they instead learn that insurrection and outright defiance of the law have a place in this society? And if this is so, will they be better or worse citizens of the future for the experience?

We were pleased to report to the community in an earlier issue of the Star (September 26) that Winchester students, teachers, and administrators took the problem posed by the Court's ruling out their religious exercises and constructively worked out a positive replacement. The high school's Devotional Committee changed its name to Appreciation Committee, and substituted readings of ethical, moral, and cultural significance for the religious readings that were outlawed. Certainly, here was a good and positive approach to providing an adequate, if not better, substitute for something which was taken away and would otherwise be missed.

Other school systems in Massachusetts and in other states look frequently at the Winchester school system as a model example to occasionally follow. Those which think they are fulfilling their function in their towns by defying the Court's order, might do well to look at how the Winchester system provided a better answer.

About Time For A S.P.C.H.!

In Daphne du Maurier's story and Alfred Hitchcock's movie, The Birds, all the various kinds of birds go berserk and unite to attack man. They swoop down in droves and savagely kill people everywhere.

In recent years, in cities and towns across the United States and even the world, medical and health officials have come to the realization that some birds actually are the cause of numerous deaths. They don't unite militarily as in the fiction account to strike at man, but, more in keeping with these civilized and modern times, they employ bacteriological warfare. By simply performing their natural acts of excretion, one breed of bird, the pigeon, drops lethal bacteria all over the place with its excreta.

Pigeons, often seen feeding on the filth in the streets and gutters, are known to be the carriers of at least a dozen infectious diseases. Some of these diseases spread to other birds and mammals, others attack human beings. One that attacks human beings, known as CN fungus, is known to have killed a number of persons in Cincinnati, Buffalo, and New York City. And here in Winchester, the local Board of Health has declared war on the pigeons nesting in the overpass bridge substructures due to their being a health nuisance and possible health menace with the filth they leave piled everywhere.

The current war on pigeons is causing quite a stir across the nation. Legions of kindly souls, pigeon feeders and lovers, raise protest over any action against the winged parasites. Other groups, such as the familiar Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, or S.P.C.A., protest some of the methods used to eliminate or exterminate pigeons in some cities. (Buffalo hires exterminators who either wring their necks or shoot them in the streets early in the morning; Cincinnati has a $50 fine for feeding pigeons; some places lure pigeons with corn bait and then club them to death with baseball bats; and some places are considering feeding them chemicals on bait designed to either kill them or sterilize them.)

So far, Winchester is considering only depriving the dirty birds of their present homesite under the overpass bridge. But that doesn't necessarily remove the pests from the town, it only alters their nesting choices. Next they'll probably roost on the Town Hall or some other public building, or even maybe pick a few choice houses to settle in as tenants gratis.

There's still time left to start a S.P.C.H., or Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Humans. Such a society would include all those persons who have suffered fowl indignities while passing beneath the overpass bridge aviary "community" (including the Highway Department workers who daringly get under the bridge and quickly clean out the piled droppings each morning before some plucky bird spots them as a target). There aren't many Winchesterites who wouldn't qualify as having received their "initiation."

Such a group could meet with the Fair Housing Association and make sure an active policy of trying to deprive pigeons of quality Winchester real estate property wouldn't be discriminatory. One white pigeon spotted on the traffic circle earlier this week would have to leave town along with his darker fellow droppers.

After meeting with any other group that might have an interest in the way the "pigeon war" is handled, the S.P.C.H. would have clear sailing in getting together with the Boston and Maine in persuading them to take the birds out from under the tracks and railroading them out of town.

Then, at the next Town Meeting, the S.P.C.H. could introduce an article for an appropriation to provide for the erecting of an official sign reading: "No Pigeons Allowed."

Democratic Activities In Winchester

Several Democrats and Independents from the West side of Winchester spent a delightful evening Saturday at the spacious home of Mr. and Mrs. Roger Harsch, 10 Nassau Drive. Many of those present were residents who have come to Winchester in recent years to establish their homes here.

Both the upper and lower floors of the lovely house were needed to make comfortable the large group who came to help Roger and Peggy Harsch initiate "Winchester's Salute to John F. Kennedy." And the salute was joyous and spontaneous as it was led by the three special guests of honor, our own State Senator, Phil Pellegrini, Representative Jack McGlynn, who is also Mayor of Medford under Plan E, and the Lieutenant Governor of the Commonwealth, the very popular Francis X. Bellotti. Mrs. Nancy Pellegrini and Mrs. Helen McGlynn, two charming young ladies, were present also.

Beautiful flowers in crystal bowls and vases decorated every room, and the long refectory table with its sliver candelabra bore choice food in plentiful supply.

There were no speeches, just a happy gathering interested in the Democratic Party. The only entertainment was furnished by the host himself, when Roger consented to give a short concert of piano music of a classical nature. As a finishing touch, however, he played "When Irish Eyes are Smiling" and the happy audience sang and harmonized.

Mrs. Bette Hill, 11 Alden Lane, was hostess last evening when the Democratic Registration Committee chairman met to formulate plans which will set up an excellent "new registration group" for next year's campaign. More about this later.

The Dog Soldiers

Part Two

In October of 1865 the Cheyennes, smarting from the Sand Creek massacre, met and talked to the United States Army. Along to help smooth out differences were William Bent and Kit Carson. But when the Dog Soldiers saw that the treaty would cede their lands on the Republican and Smoky Hill, where the Kansas Pacific Railroad planned to lay new track, they flatly refused to sign and rode off in a huff.

For another summer it was peaceful, but during the winter of 1866-67 unaccredited stories circulated that the Dog Soldiers were planning war in the spring. The Kansas Pacific demanded protection. Washington appropriated $150,000 for a full-scale expedition.

On March 1, 1867, Brigadier General Winfield Scott Hancock, the wounded hero of Gettysburg, rode out of Fort Leavenworth at the head of one of the largest forces ever seen in that region. Components of infantry, cavalry and artillery made up an impressive array that the army felt certain would strike fear into the hostiles.

With Hancock rode the celebrated journalist and adventurer, Henry Morton Stanley, of later African fame, representing the New York Herald and the Missouri Democrat. Harper's assigned their best artist in Theodore R. Davis. Adding a carnival touch to the gathering was "Wild Bill" Hickok, gaudily outfitted in a sparkling Zouave uniform. At Fort Riley the newly organized Seventh Cavalry and its illustrious "boy general", George Armstrong Custer, joined the force to complete the picture of radiance.

After several days of marching, Hancock camped on the Santa Fe Trail along the Arkansas River. There he waited for the Indians who had already been notified to assemble for a council. None came. He sent scouts out, who found the Dog Soldiers, with some Sioux, encamped on Pawnee Fork, thirty miles to the west. Hancock then sent emissaries threatening that if they refused to come to him for a council he would go to them. He couldn't have chosen his words with less care. The Cheyennes had no intention of allowing a repitition of Sand Creek.

A day later Tall Bull and White Horse, leaders of the Dog Soldiers, rode into Hancock's camp with a dozen warriors picked for their stature and bearing. At sunset a council was held by firelight; another of Hancock's mistakes because friendly talks were always held during the day. The officers, especially the artillery men with their bright red horsetail plumes and shiny black helmets, looked grandiose in their dress-blue, gold-braided uniforms. They offered sharp contrast to the near nakedness of the Dog Soldiers and to those wearing reservation-issued army long coats.

Hancock wasted few words, and soon the Cheyennes were staring icily at Edward Wynkoop, the agent, as he blurted out his interpretation. "Tell them I have come to restore order. Tell them if they want peace there must be an end to all hostilities; their murdering and raping must stop. Tell them I will not tolerate any further insolence. Tell them we are prepared for war if they so wish." Then, very unassumingly, he complained that there weren't enough Indians here for him to talk to. He wanted to see the famous Roman Nose, even though the Cheyennes explained he was not a chief. Concluding, he said he had decided to visit their village on the morrow.

After some time of uncomfortable silence, Tall Bull arose and answered Hancock's brashness with a similar outspokenness that kept Wynkoop sweating. "You have called us here to talk and we are here, but our ears have little. You tell us that we have committed murder and rape; we know nothing of that. Have you charged the Kiowas, Comanches, Arapahoes and Apaches with these crimes too? You say you are coming to our village; I will have nothing to say to you there, I have said all I want to say here. You ask us if we want war. We do not, but neither will we run from the sound of your guns."

Hancock burned indignantly. "I shall come to your village tomorrow," he repeated.

At dawn the next day Hancock, true to his word, marched out toward the Cheyenne encampment. He had not gone far when some three hundred warriors suddenly appeared, Roman Nose among them. More irascible than ever, Hancock ordered his troops into battle formation. Officers shouted sharp commands; cavalry galloped into line, drawn sabers glinting in the sunlight. Artillery unlimbered, and gun crews readied. Roman Nose, his temper flaring at Hancock's belligerence, wanted to fight then and there, but others calmed him, reminding him of the women and children.

Hancock approached and demanded, "Well, do you want peace or war?"

"Do you think," Roman Nose mocked, "we would have come so close to your big guns if we wanted war?"

"My guns are for preserving the peace," Hancock said.

"Your guns were made for killing," Roman Nose retorted.

The conference was brief. The Cheyennes returned to their camp, bearing the ignominy of Hancock trailing some distance behind. Determined to preserve the peace, Hancock trained his artillery on the village. One morning he awoke to find the camp mysteriously deserted, except for Roman Nose and a few others. "Why?" he asked furiously. "Why have they run away?"

"Do you remember," Roman Nose replied, "when they did not run away at Sand Creek?"

GAILY, GAILY

by Ben Hecht

Does one always live in Arcadia in one's youth? Bernard Kops in the recently published "The World Is a Wedding" describes his early days in London's Stepney Green in utter destitution and degradation as "idyllic." Certainly "Time remembered is grief forgotten" in Ben Hecht's latest. Hecht came to Chicago in 1911 as a cub reporter (age 16½) for the Journal. And what a Chicago!

"Lordy, what a stink of morality, what a Mardi Gras of hypocrisy: Edna Kenton, an early feminist (weight one hundred and fifty pounds) arrested for walking on Michigan Avenue without a corset under he voluminous robes: young women tried and found guilty in the municipal courts of showing their legs on a streetcar, smoking cigarettes in a doorway, trying to sneak into a cafe alone for a glass of beer, or going swimming in Lake Michigan without a kiltie over their bloomers. And all this purity being enforced by men who kept the town's thousand brothels going."

"Nevertheless I see Arcadia . . ."

He does too. Memory after memory comes back to him—of hangings witnessed, beatings, corruption in high places, flop-houses, derelicts, psychos—but he never sat in judgment in those days and everything fed his writer's mind. He had a strong stomach and even stronger moral fiber, an intense zest for living at all, at any price. This he puts across, with conclusions and comparisons. As George Frazier would say, "The man can write."

Alongside the bums were the chief literary lights of the century as yet unlit—Charlie MacArthur, Ernest Hemingway, Theodore Dreiser, Carl Sandburg, almost anyone you can name. They all knew each other, many of them worked together in the same scabrous environment as Ben Hecht and it doesn't seem to have hurt any of them very much, does it? But would each have developed as he did without being able to rub off on the others? They were all intellectuals, angry young men, today's "beatniks" and they had a wonderful time of it.

Hecht comes up with some telling criticisms of today's trend in mores, politics and literature, especially of the theatre and theatre audiences. Many of the vignettes were originally published in Playboy, which in nowise detracts from their literary merit but does set their tone. Undoubtedly, a cub reporter in the New York police courts of the era could tell a similar tale (if he hasn't already) but Chicago seems a more natural setting.

In the light of the current jeremiads about our modern corruption, it is rather comforting to reflect that the "good old days" were bad enough.

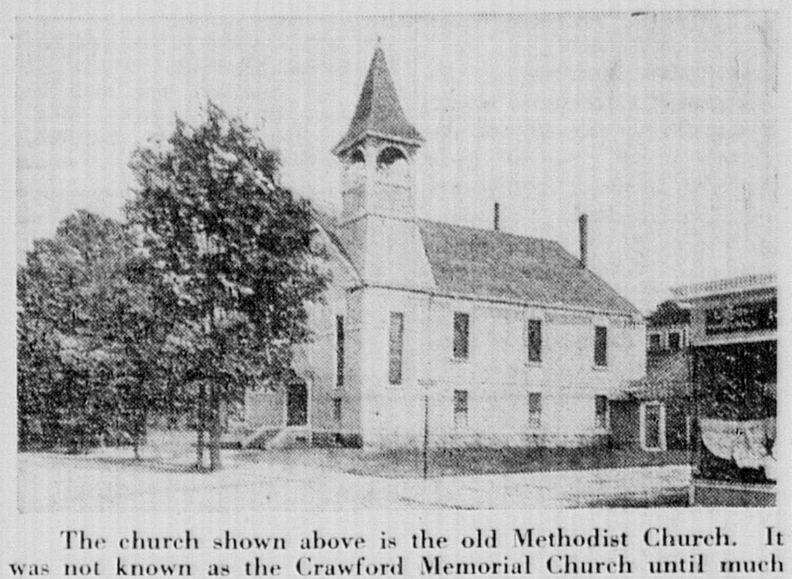
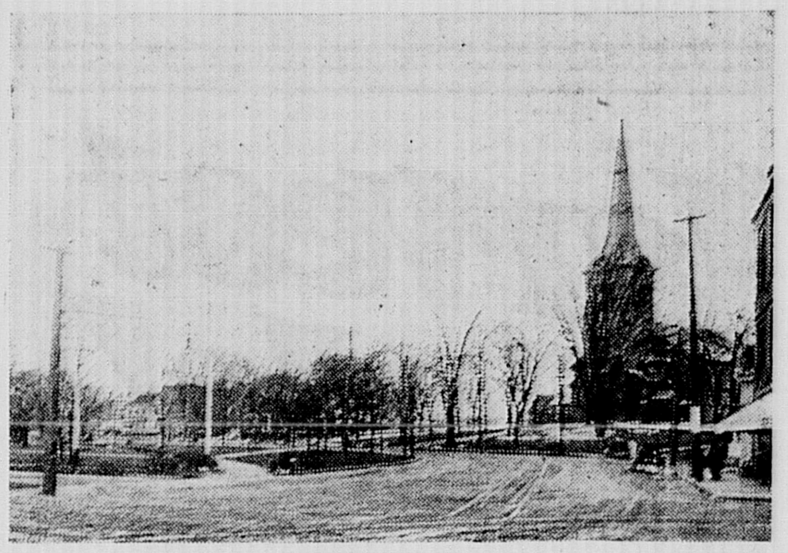
Old Winchester Photos Recall Local Memories

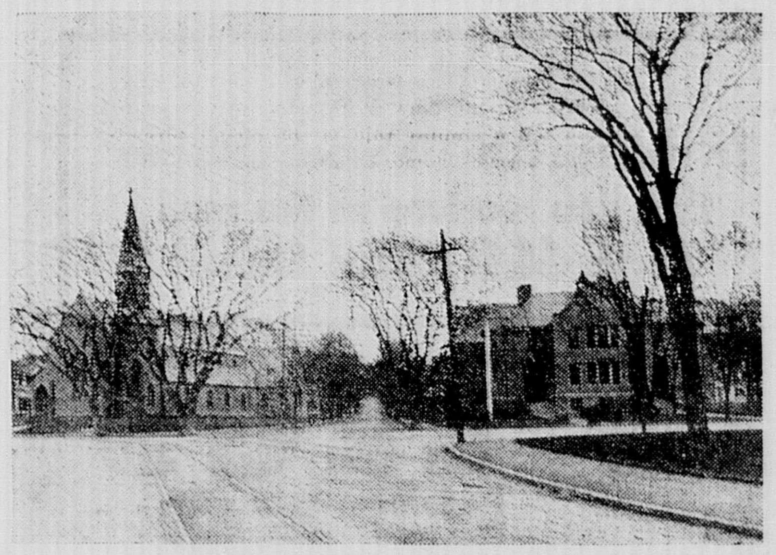
The following pictures, taken some time before 1909, are old scenes around Winchester. They were given to the Star by Henry B. Harris, and came from an old brochure published by the Edison Light Company. Many interested readers wrote and called about these pictures, which were among several that were published last week, and they are being shown again with corrected captions.



The church shown above is the old Methodist Church. It was not known as the Crawford Memorial Church until much later when the new church at Dix and Church Streets was built in 1923. The maples along Mt. Vernon Street, Pleasant Street it was then, are shown in the picture and seem especially fine. Rev. Vincent Ravi was pastor of the church when this picture was taken.



This old picture shows the center of Church Street facing west with the First Congregational Church on its knoll to the right, and the Common with the old wooden flagstaff. The trolley tracks are visible in the roadway, and the Star Office had not then been built. Stetson Hall also had not been built when the picture was taken.



This illustration shows the old First Baptist Church when it stood at the corner of Mt. Vernon and Washington Streets on the site of the fine new church built in 1928. Across the street from the church is the old Wadleigh School building, recently torn down. "Texas Charlie" Swett, Arthur P. Briggs and Joseph Hefflon were some of the masters who held the high, low and middle justice in the "good old days,"

Sidney F. Hooper

Sidney F. Hooper, a widely known engineer and architect, and a former resident of Winchester, died Friday October 25, at the Natick Nursing Home after a long illness. His home was at 30 Cottage Street, Wellesley. He moved his family to Winchester in the early 1900s, living first on Hancock Street, and later on Lawrence Street and Foxcroft Road. He lived for about 27 years in Winchester before taking up residence in Wellesley.

Mr. Hooper was born November 10, 1879, in Davenport, England. He was educated at Mechanic's Arts High School and Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and after his graduation became chief engineer for the Lawrence Construction Company of Worcester, living in Ware.

At the age of 23 years he was in charge of the construction of the Oxford Paper Mills at Rumford Falls, Maine, and the Oxford Dam and the Androscoggin River. He was the first engineer in the country to use reinforced concrete in any great amount, using it in building the Oxford Paper Mills at the dam and on the floor slab portion to the mill itself.

There was much discussion among architectural experts before the concrete was allowed, but its use proved good beyond all expectations and the dam was one of the few that held many years later in the hurricane of 1938.

He served as chief engineer for the Lawrence Company in the building of what was then the senior high school on the hill in Winchester, now the McCall Junior High School. It was at about this time that he moved his family to Winchester.

Mr. Hooper was one of the original authors of the Town of Winchester Building Code, with the late Fred Alexander, which has stood as a criterion through the years.

He formed his own company in 1910 and among his construction accomplishments were the original buildings of the Mattapan Mental Health Institution, then known as Austin Farms; the Nottingham Building on Huntington Avenue in Boston; and headquarters for Major General Edwards of the 26th Division during World War I.

He also built about fifty major apartment buildings in the Greater Boston area. For many years he was retained by the City of Cambridge as building expert. He testified in many famous cases as an expert in county state and federal courts. He was a member of Aleppo Temple, Order of the Mystic Shrine.

Among his more recent accomplishments were the two Veterans Housing Authority projects in Framingham; he being architect and engineer for these large projects with Louis Perrine, who was the contractor. He completed two Homes for the Aged in Framingham, one of which was just completed in 1962. He also built the Elks Home in Framingham. He was architect and engineer for the State of Massachusetts in the Wilmington Housing project. His most recent accomplishment was the solution of the sinking of the piers at the new Prudential Building in Boston.

Another first to his credit was the raising of large buildings, high in the air, on steel-work and replacing them on new foundations. this method was used on the changeover of the Nottingham Office Building at 25 Huntington Avenue from the old Nottingham Hotel.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Katherine I. (O'Meara); and two sons, Raymond H. Hooper of Scituate and S. Francis Hooper of Chelmsford; also a brother, Archie J. Hooper of West Newton, who is well known in construction circles throughout New England.

Funeral services were held on October 28 at the Norris Funeral Chapel. Dr. John W. Ellison, rector of the Church of the Epiphany, officiated. Burial was in Wildwood Cemetery.

Albert Sise Crockett

Albert Sise Crockett of 137 Mt. Vernon Street, executive secretary of the Winchester Personnel Board and a Navy veteran of World War I, died Saturday, November 1, at the Winchester Hospital after a short illness.

Mr. Crockett was the son of Dr. Montgomery A., and Helen W. (Sise) Crockett. He was born Oct. 17, 1889, in Buffalo, New York, was educated at Virginia Military Institute, from which he graduated in the class of 1909, and spent most of his business life as an executive with the General Electric Company. He had been for 30 years a resident of Winchester, coming to town in 1933, and living most of his life on Central Street, moving to Mt. Vernon Street during the past summer.

He served as an officer in the submarine service during World War I. In Winchester he took a prominent part in setting up the Town's Personnel Board, of which he was one of the initiators. He served as the chairman of the board, and then served as executive secretary of the board.

He pioneered in the field of job payment, and his work brought him in contact with personnel boards throughout the State. Because of the esteem in which he was held, he was named chairman of the Massachusetts Municipal Association of Personnel Boards when it was formed.

He was an active member of the Church of the Epiphany, which he served both as vestryman and warden. He was also a town meeting member for many years, and was a member of the Board of Directors of the Winchester Hospital, in which he always took the greatest interest.

He leaves his wife, the former Margery Tower, of Winchester; a daughter, Mrs. John L. Everett of Weston; a son, George H. R. McQueen Crockett of Sudbury; three grandchildren and a brother, Colonel Gilman K. Crockett, U.S.A. Retired, of Long Beach, California.

A memorial service was held Tuesday morning at 11 o'clock at the Church of the Epiphany. The rector, Dr. John W. Ellison, officiated, with Dr. Raymond Caulkins, a retired clergyman and close friend of the Crockett family. Cremation followed the service.

Miss Ive Elizabeth Dolby

Miss Ive Elizabeth Dolby, retired executive secretary of the Camden County, N. J., Anti-Tuberculosis Association and an Army nurse in France during World War I, died Tuesday, November 5, at the home of her nephew, Dr. Philip B. Chase, 1 Robinson Park, after a long illness.

Miss Dolby was the daughter of Edward B., and Elizabeth (Weston) Dolby. She was born in Dalton on May 5, 1892, and was graduated from the Pittsfield Hospital Training School for Nurses in the class of 1912.

During World War I she served as an Army nurse overseas, with the rank of 2nd lieutenant, and afterwards she had been for a time a visiting nurse in Lynnfield and Thoms River, N. J.

In more recent years she had served as executive secretary for the Camden County, N. J., Anti-Tuberculosis Association until her retirement. She had lived in Winchester only since last September.

She leaves two sisters, Mrs. Dora Chase of Winchester, and Mrs. Mary Bryant of Trenton, N. J.

Funeral services were held Thursday afternoon at 3:30 at Grace Episcopal Church in Dalton. Burial was in the family lot in Fairview Cemetery there.

Man and Nature Pose Threats To Paris Bridges

Parisian bridges have been falling down sporadically throughout the city's 2,000-year history.

Fire, flood, ice, wind, errant tugboats, and even houses have damaged or destroyed the picturesque spans over the Seine River.

The charming Pont des Arts, a foot bridge supported by eight graceful cast-iron arches, is the latest victim. The mast of a motor vessel recently smashed into the airy ironwork, splitting one of the arches.

Curiously, the first bridge-builders of Paris often deliberately destroyed their handiwork, the National Geographic Society says. The ancient Parisii lived on a small island in the Seine, the Ile de la Cite. When raids or other dangers threatened, the tribesmen simply burned their two wooden bridges.

Houses Weight Spans

In the Middle Ages, houses and shops were built on the bridges to save space needed in the crowded city. Furthermore, builders believed the weight strengthened the bridges. Occasionally a house-burdened bridge would collapse, casting doubt on this engineering theory.

Overloading, fire, and natural forces destroyed the Petit Pont seven times and the Pont Notre-Dame five times.

The Pont-au-Change, named for the money-changers' shops that once perched on it, burned and was rebuilt several times. Legend has it that farmers from the provinces often waited a whole day to get up courage to cross the ill-fated bridge.

Today, one of the most criticized briges in Paris is the Passerelle Saint-Louis. Rebuilt for the third time in 1862 with a single iron arch, it was struck by a tugboat in 1939 and fell into the water. The Passerelle Saint-Louis was patched up as a steel-and-wood "temporary" foot bridge. An outraged newspaper editor complained that its ugly beams "insult the sky."

The Pont des Arts runs between the Institut de France on the Left Bank and a wing of the Louvre on the Right. Completed in 1804, the Pont des Arts was the first iron bridge in Paris.

The bridge was privately owned for many years, and a toll of one sou was levied on each user. On opening day, 64,000 persons paid to cross.

In its early years, the Pont des Arts was lined with orange trees, flowers, and shrubs set in gay white boxes. The 190-yard span soon became a favorite of promenaders and strolling musicians.

Superb View from Bridge

The superb view from the Pont des Arts encompass the pointed prow of the Ile de la Cite, the Seine with its quay-side anglers and strollers, the noble outline of the Pont Neuf, and the spires and towers of Paris.

Because Paris's bridges are old and subject to many natural and man-made hazards, they are the special concern of municipal engineers who regularly test them for safety. After the Pont des Arts was struck, bridge inspectors found that its central section sagged 8 inches for a length of 80 feet. The segment was removed and the span closed.

Paris officials now are debating whether to restore the bridge or replace it with a badly needed vehicular crossing. Partisans of the Pont des Arts hopefully cite an early effort, unsuccessful, to alter the bridge's approaches.

The controversy ended when a man on horseback rode onto the bridge, surveyed both banks, and ordered, "Let everything stay as it is." The man was Napoleon.

Editor of the Star:

In the passing of Doctor Harry Parsons, there went a man gentle to the core.

By comparison, so many of us go through life filled simply with our own importance rather than the realization that every little act of humility, every little smile, any kind word we speak or kind deed we do not only makes an impression upon someone else but also leaves a mark of goodness on our own soul.

Somewhere in the great beyond another star is shining and the pathway of those of us who knew this doctor should be brighter along the way.

Sincerely yours,
Jim Corrigan

Scholl Family Thanks Go To Firemen, Police

Editor of the Star:

We wish to express our deepest gratitude to the Winchester Fire Department for their quick response to our call for help early Monday morning. Their speed in the answering of our call saved us from what could have developed into a very serious fire.

We also wish to thank the Winchester Police Department and Captain Peter Galuffo of the Fire Department for their help. We really appreciate the fullness to which they are carrying on the investigation of this fire.

Very truly yours,
The Scholl Family

Household Fluids Dangerous

Dr. Todd O. Munson, director of medical services of the Mass. S. P. C. A.'s Angell Memorial Animal Hospital, Boston, reminds the public that fuels and anti-freeze solutions used at this time of year can be dangerous to pets and children if swallowed. Fuel oil, kerosene, turpentine products and anti-freeze solutions are all toxic and they should be carefully stored out of reach of children and pets. Animals and children occasionally drink these poisonous liquids.

Because of their washing habits, cats and kittens which walk in these and other materials or otherwise get them on their coats should immediately be washed in a mild soap and lukewarm water bath until all odor of the fluid is gone. The cat or kitten should then be kept in a warm room for several hours after the animal's coat is dry.

Any animal which has lapped the poison should have immediate veterinary attention. The odor of any of these kerosene or turpentine products is usually on the animal's breath.

Anti-freeze products are extremely dangerous. One of the ingredients in anti-freeze solutions is so attractive to cats that they will often climb into the underparts of the car to lick off fluid spilled on the radiator. Car owners are asked to be extremely careful not to flush this deadly fluid where it can collect in pools and remain available to cats and dogs.

Folk Concert On WHS Stage November 16

The first Folk concert to be sponsored on the high school stage here will take place the evening of Saturday, November 16, at 8 p.m., sponsored by the Metcalf Union, high school group of the Unitarian Church.

The concert will feature well-known vocalists Carol Langstaff and Ray Pong, the Rainbow Valley Boys and one other male group to be announced next week. M.C. for the affair will be Dave Lyman, well known in Greater Boston as the initiator of the "On the Green" programs.

Tickets for the event are available at the Winchester Appliance and the Winchester Drug. Heading up plans which will be carried out by other high school students are Metcalf Union officers Peter Fontneau, president; Bob Jones, vice president; Dexter Lawson, treasurer, and Barbara Benham and Nancy Robinson, secretaries.

Folk singer Carol Langstaff is a young singer of extraordinary talent. She is a student at the Longy School of Music experimenting with the possibilities of combining all of the arts. Folk music has been a part of Carol's life since she was a child when her mother and father, both famous singers, would sing to her during the evenings. She didn't think there was anything special about this music until she went away to school and discovered that her talent was an unusual thing.

Miss Langstaff has been on field trips through the hills of Kentucky with her mother, collecting material, and was greatly influenced by Jean Richie. Carol sings English, Irish and American folk songs and accompanies herself on the Dulcimer, an ancient instrument used by the hill people in Kentucky. Carol's Irish songs come from a close association with the Clancy Brothers in Ireland, where her mother now lives.

St. Mary's School Awards And Activities

Halloween, an exciting time for most children, was especially enjoyed by the students of St. Mary's School. On Thursday, October 31, the children were treated with an interesting movie, Knute Rockne, a film portraying many of the interesting facets in the sports life of this great coach of yesteryear.

Open house for parents and friends was held on Sunday, November 3, from 2 to 4:30 in St. Mary's School. An opportunity was given to the parents of the children as well as any other parishioners to meet the faculty and to see the many improvements made in the school. The cleanliness of the building together with the exhibition of the students' work was the subject of many a conversation.

Sunday also saw the fulfillment of the earnest efforts of the eighteen girls of Grade 8 as they received their Marian Award at the Cathedral of the Holy Cross, Boston. After laboring for over a year and a half to complete the requirements for the reception of the Marian Medal, the highest award that can be received by a Catholic Girl Scout, these happy representative girls saw the reward of their untiring efforts in the joy they experienced while receiving the medal. The following girls were successful in their endeavors:

Mary Anderson, Susan Crimmins, Carol Cutler, Elizabeth Dolan, Janet Donohoe, Carole Duran.

Also Ann Falzano, Mary Forrest, Patricia Galvin, Cynthia Kenny, Diane Neumann, Ellen O'Grady.

Also Janice O'Neil, Martha Rooney, Marcia Stygles, Kathleen Sullivan, Joan Wernig and Susan Zenga.

St. Mary's is very proud of the work that these members of the parish have done and hopes they will prove by their example and lives that they are truly Marian girls.

of the globe, distorting, disleveling, and fracturing it. For example: as land formations are elevated, folded and distorted in the making of mountains (a continuous process, as every mountain range in the world today consists in large part of sedimentary rocks which were at one time formations on the bottom of the ocean), they break frequently, and each break causes an earthquake.

Quantitative analyses of the distribution of earthquakes reveals that statistically, on the average, there are every year one great earthquake, 10 major earthquakes, 100 destructive shocks, 1,000 damaging shocks, 10,000 minor strong shocks, and 100,000 which are generally felt over a wide area (such as the two experienced in Winchester during the month of October).

Lt. Edward O'Connell Ends 41 Years With Police Force

Lt. Edward W. O'Connell, of 9 Mt. Pleasant Street, late of the Winchester Police Department, remembers many things about bygone days here, among them the sight of Theodore P. Wilson, the first editor and publisher of the Winchester Star at the head of town parades back in the early days of the century.

LT. EDWARD W. O'CONNELL

When Lt. O'Connell ended 41 years and six months of regular duty with the force last Thursday night, he brought to a close the longest record on the force, beating out his confrere "Dukes" Farrell by the six months.

Back in April 1922, when he joined, Chief William McIntosh headed a force of 14 men, and Eddie and the others worked a seven-day week adding up to about 70 hours duty. He has seen service under Chiefs Rogers, Harrold and Derro since, his burly voice familiar to many a householder who called the desk at night with a problem. And he reports there isn't a law in the book that didn't come across that desk in the 33 years service he saw night desk duty.

Desk duty was by no means the story of his service, however, as he was the town's first motorcycle officer and wore out four motorcycles covering the township back some years ago. Eddie, who is no horse lover, nonetheless recalls the days before 1914 when the force used horses, and can give the eleven names of the horses that were up in the Town Stables on Lake Street, although he gave them plenty of stall room.

Eddie is an all-Winchester product. He was born, reared and schooled here, one of nine children of Highway Department worker Edward O'Connell. He tried his hand at plumbing, leather work and truck driving before he joined the Police Department. He was made a sergeant in 1930, and a lieutenant six years later.

He married a childhood sweetheart, Ella Hamilton, here and they are the parents of four children, grandparents of 14. One of his four daughters, Mrs. John Peterson, and one son, Daniel, live here in town. In addition he is father to Mrs. Clyde Newport, of Indiana, Mrs. Ernest Geannaris, of Haverhill, Mrs. Charles Duran, of Woburn, and Edward, Jr., of Arlington.

Lt. O'Connell's statistical memory will be among the things missed by the Police Department in his retirement. He can tell the day, hour and year each man joined the force and recalls the history of the town in the same factual manner.

How will he enjoy his new leisure? It is a safe bet that much of the time will be spent on the fresh and salt waters of the area giving the fish a run for their money. Any day is a good day to fish to Eddie, and, speaking of fishing, do you remember that day back in 1925 when . . .? If you've forgotten, ask Lt. O'Connell.

Hospital Friends Held Annual Fall Meeting

The lovely home of Mrs. Harold J. Pyne was the scene of the annual fall meeting of the Friends of the Winchester Hospital on Thursday, October 31. A delightful coffee hour was enjoyed overlooking the terraced fall garden. Mrs. Thomas B. Dowd was chairman of hospitality assisted by: Mrs. John F. Elliott, Mrs. John C. Walsh, Mrs. Richard L. Spellman, Mrs. Lawrence W. Lougee, Mrs. Francis A. McClellan, Mrs. Norman F. Pheeney, Mrs. Gardy Yagjian, all of Winchester, and Mrs. Fred C. Kenney, Jr., of Reading. Pourers were Mrs. H. Rushton Harwood, Jr., a director of the Friends, and Mrs. Althea Brady, director of nursing, Winchester Hospital.

Mrs. Roger C. Crandlemire, president, conducted the business meeting. Waltz Evening was declared a social as well as a financial success. Volunteers are still needed in all areas, and Mrs. Persis Gow, chairman of volunteer services, will be glad to talk with any interested people.

Mrs. Althea Brady, new director of nursing, was introduced. Mrs. Brady is a graduate of the Massachusetts General Hospital, School of Nursing, with a B.S. and M.S. from Boston University. She has had nursing supervisory experience in Boston and Chicago hospitals and came to Winchester from the directorship of nursing, Eye and Ear Infirmary, Lowell General Hospital. We are very fortunate to have this warm and friendly as well as capable person on the staff of our hospital.

The speaker of the afternoon was Mary Ruth Wolf, director of Volunteer Department, Massachusetts General Hospital, who gave us some new meanings of volunteer services. In a hospital where every member of the staff from top to bottom is always rushing, a volunteer's unhurried presence and capacity to give of herself is the essence of service. She spoke of the place for graduate nurses on a volunteer basis just as any volunteer service. Miss Wolf told briefly of the MGH graduate course for volunteer directors which she initiated. The four-week course trains people in leadership and coordination of volunteer services with hospital services.

Let There Be Light

• IN THE LAST few decades we have come a long way from the gloominess which the Western World seemed to believe to be the only way of honoring the departed. The emphasis on black, the marathon "wakes" which left survivors physically exhausted and psychologically drained, the entire atmosphere of bleak hopelessness, has been greatly softened or even eliminated. The funeral rites are just as reverent, but now as we remember the dead we also consider the living and in warm and gracious surroundings we endeavor to remove some of the sting from their tragedy rather than adding to the burden they must bear.

Director

Continued Education For Women Is Discussed At Wellesley Club Meeting

A large and enthusiastic group of Wellesley Club members heard guest speaker, Dr. Virginia Senders, new staff associate of the New England Board of Higher Education here, speak last week on positive ways of overcoming society's "underexpecting" in the area of the intellectual potential of educated women.

Believing that the age-old problem of women's difficulty in fully developing and expressing their intellectual potential has become accentuated because of the increasing amount of time and energy made available to the homemaker by the modern mechanical efficiency devices, Dr. Senders' has a vital concern in this area. This led her to becoming the co-founder and director of the Minnesota Plan for Women's Continuing Education, pursued recently at that state's university under a three year grant from the Carnegie Corporation.

Through counseling, the cornerstone of this program, women are helped to examine themselves and their needs, and are advised as to the means of meeting these needs. Correspondence courses, extension courses, evening courses, graduate college courses of all kinds, as well as study-skills clinics (to facilitate note-taking, reading, and studying), baby-sitting services, and a scholarship program are available through the Minnesota Plan.

After citing a number of interesting case histories resulting from this plan, Dr. Senders told of other modified versions of the program being caried out or considered by other universities and colleges.

Such a provocative subject provided much discussion after Dr. Senders concluded with information about the New England Board of Higher Education which, as an interstate public agency belonging to the six New England states, seeks to improve and coordinate opportunities in higher education for the people, both women and men, of the New England region. Dr. Senders, a dynamic woman and the mother of two sons, holds an A.B. from Mt. Holyoke, a Ph.D. from Radcliffe, and has taught and counseled at colleges, including Wellesley itself.

This Winchester Wellesley Club's evening meeting was held on October 28 at the home of Mrs. Thomas Downes and was preceded by coffee and dessert served under the direction of Mrs. Richard Lindenfelser, social chairman.

Using the theme "People and Excellence", the club president, Mrs. Ellis J. Green, spoke of the recent appointment of Mrs. Horton (former Wellesley College President) as chairman of the National Women's Committee for Civil Rights. Mrs. Green also commented on the 11 young Latin American women who attended a Wellesley College pilot leadership institute, the 9 Negro students from southern colleges who, at the invitation of Wellesley, are spending their junior year on the northern campus, and the recent Symposium on Science at Wellesley. The opening of the spacious new Wellesley College Club overlooking Lake Waban was another campus highlight of interest to alumnae.

The report of Mrs. Colin L. Wheeler, ways and means chairman, brought enthusiastic applause for the success of the 16th annual "Winchester Mornings" programs sponsored by the Club, the record proceeds of which will be divided between the Wellesley Student Aid, the Wellesley College Development Fund, and the Winchester Scholarship Foundation.

Successful also was the recent innovation for introducing new members of the club to their contemporaries among local alumnae. A "Two Decade Coffee" for those of the 1943-63 era was held at the home of Mrs. H. Gardner Bradlee. The invited guests who were entertained by the members of the board were: Mesdames Paul Chase, James Dorsey, David Ewing, Kenneth Hudson, William Johnson, Hobart Kraner, Alan Leland, John McCrillis, Stylianos Pezaris, Ronald Stillman, George Vrotsos, Donald Wysham, and Barbara Page. The guests' 26 pre-school children were cared for by the following Club members: Mesdames Lindsay Caldwell, Herbert Howell, Robert J. Holmes, Ralph T. Jope, John R. Smith, and Richard Swanson in addition to Mrs. Green and Mrs. Bradlee.

Additional activities of the Wellesley Club were evident from the reports of the other officers and committee chairmen: Mrs. Richard Swanson, vice-president; Mrs. A. Lane McGovern, secretary; Mrs. Alexis Thielens, treasurer; Mrs. James Dorsey, acquaintanceship; Mrs. Edmund Merriam, nominating; Mrs. F. Milne Blanchard, publicity and Mrs. John H. McClennan, development.

Unitarians Ready Christmas Fair For Nov. 20, 21

Though it is hard to believe because of the recent summer weather, Christmas is coming and the finest way to start the season is at the annual Unitarian Fair.

The spirit of the "Christmas Fair" has been with the ambitious and clever church ladies all through the past year. They have wonderful surprises in store for everyone.

On Wednesday evening, November 20, the Fair opens at 7 and continues until 10. Come and fine a special shopping bag to fill. Mrs. Robert Roundey and her committee will serve fair visitors home made angel cake topped with ice cream and chocolate sauce plus hot coffee.

On Thursday morning the Fair will be open from 10 until 5 p.m. Baby-sitting will be provided all through this period for pre-school children.

The Art Gallery is being supervised by Mrs. Theodore E. Burleigh, Jr. Again you will have an opportunity to see the work of talented Winchester artists and purchase some for your home.

Morning coffee will be served by Mrs. Edward Read from 10 to 11. Before or after you have visited the fair booths. The book table under the able direction of Mrs. Thornton Stearns and Mrs. Warren Jackson; the candy table managed by Mrs. Robert Tesar and Mrs. Leslie DeGroot; the clothing exchange with Mrs. Darrell Root and Mrs. Joan Heffernan to help you; or the ever popular plants, collected by Mrs. John Lyman and Mrs. F. Lee Foster are all nearby.

Mrs. Philip P. Wadsworth and Mrs. Harold Meyer are busily collecting delicious food to sell. They are interested in having homemade bread among other good things.

Luncheon will be served from 11:45-1:30 p.m. by Mrs. Lindsay Caldwell and her committee. Afternoon Tea can be enjoyed from 2:30-4:30 p.m. in the Alliance room supervised by Mrs. Edward Reynolds.

The Children's Fair, with Mrs. William Bird as chairman, is from 3-5 p.m. with gifts, grabs, balloons food and a fortune teller. Mrs. Ganson P. Taggart, who is handling the children's entertainment has a surprise in store this year, a real "Punch and Judy" puppet show!

Come and see the lovely decorations created by Mrs. James Joslin. Remember the date and start the Christmas season early at the Unitarian Church.

Fall Bulb Planting

Although it is rather late in the season to be planting spring flowering bulbs, it is perfectly alright to do so. (Thanks to our extended Indian summer.) Now is also the time to prepare selected bulbs for forcing into early bloom next spring.

The everpopular Crocus, a member of the Iridiceae Family, continually rewards the gardener for a very small investment. All that one must do is plant the corms two and one-half inches deep in good soil. Every third or fourth year the corms must be lifted and separated. Corms bloom only once; new ones, however, are produced every year, resulting in a display of flowers every spring. The new corms are formed on top of the old, so in a very short time the corms would be out of the ground, if they are not lifted and replanted deeper.

The Snowdrop, (Galanthus nivalis), is usually the first plant to bloom in the spring. The bulbs must be planted four inches deep. Do not, however, have too much space between them, since the beauty of this species depends on the impact of a mass planting.

Tulips, (Liliaceae tulipa), are probably the most popular spring flowering bulbs. They should be planted about three inches deep in rich soil, and about five inches apart each way. A good combination to try is red tulips and blue forget-me-nots. Tulips and hyacinths also go well together.

A rose-bed is a perfect place for tall tulips. The background of new fresh green leaves shows off the flowers and, after the blooms are dead, hides the withering leaves. It is extremely important to lift the bulbs after the foliage has died. They should be stored in a cool, dark, dry airy place.

The Hyacinth (Liliaceae hyacinthus), is grown almost in as great a quantity indoors as out. When outdoors, the bulbs should be planted three inches deep in good soil. The Dutch hyacinth, familiar to all, has the characteristic star-shaped flowers in a great cluster on a single spike; the Roman hyacinth less popular has the same star-shaped flowers, but they are spaced about two inches apart on many long bending stems.

Indoors, the hyacinth can be grown in many ways. The most successful way is to plant the bulbs in ordinary garden soil in regular flower-pots. Some directions call for the bulbs to be placed in pebbles or in a glass of water, but both result in inferior foliage and flower development.

The bulbs should be planted just under the soil-line in a roomy pot. This should be sunk in the ground or kept in a cool dark place, maximum temperature 50 degrees, for a period of about ten weeks. At the end of this time, bring the pots into the living quarters.

It is extremely important to keep a paper "tent" over the bud stalk until it is an inch longer than the leaves. Buds will open upon exposure to sunlight, and it is important to allow them to attain a large size.

Tulips may also be forced, however, they require 15 to 20 weeks in a dark cool place. Paper-white narcissus are easy to work with, requiring only eight to ten weeks in cool darkness.

With all bulbs, the elapsed time is not as important a factor as the progress of the plant. Each plant should have a shoot two to three inches long before being brought into light and warmth.

They go together — the power of God and the triumph of man. One is the source. The other is the reflection. It's an idea worth pondering, for it holds the key to dominion over evil in all its forms. Robots, Ubangis Liven Halloween Dance at Legion

The masquerade dance at the American Legion headquarters on Saturday evening was a great success. Approximately ninety per cent of those in attendance were in masquerade attire.

The grand march took place at 10 p.m. Judges of costumes were Mrs. Michael Signorelli of Medford, Mr. John Miraglia of Medford, and Mr. Jack Errico of Winchester. The judges had a difficult decision since the costumes exhibited were excellent, but they did a fine job, and are due many thanks.

Mrs. Dante DeTeso won a prize as "The Robot" (most original); Mrs. Arthur Banester, "A Member of the Ubangi Tribe," (the funniest); and Mrs. David Janero of Lexington was chosen "The Prettiest."

Mrs. Robert Purrington of Woburn was the winner of the eighteen pound turkey.

The hall was artistically decorated in true Halloween fashion. During the evening crackers and cheese were distributed among the tables and after the dance coffee and dessert was served. Everyone left the hall in a gay and happy feeling, and all are looking forward to the next dance, which, by the way, is going to be on Saturday evening, November 29th. Make plans now and watch for further notices in the local paper.

Report To Massachusetts

By Sen. Leverett Saltonstall

Trade Negotiations: A Two-Way Street

In a statement prepared for delivery on the Senate floor Senator Leverett Saltonstall (R., Mass.) stated that "useful trade negotiations are a two-way street" from which all participating nations expect to benefit.

When the Trade Expansion Act was first proposed, the Administration projected that it would have a favorable effect on our overall domestic economic picture and would assist us in keeping our position as leader of the Free World nations. "We hope that these expectations will be borne out," Saltonstall stated. "However," he warned, "we must not overlook the fact that although the overall effect of our new trade policy will be favorable, certain industries, which are especially vulnerable to an increase in imports, may be severely injured. In some industries the level of imports has already risen sharply. Plant shutdowns and local unemployment may well be the unfortunate result of the ever-increasing volume of imports.

"Many industries in my own State of Massachusetts—industries which really form the core of the State's economy—have already begun to feel the adverse effects of increasing imports. Many goods imported from foreign nations may be sold at lower prices in our markets. This competition already has caused and will continue to cause harm to some of our domestic industries and to the people employed in them unless, under the Trade Act provisions, we take prompt action to grant them protection and relief."

The senior Bay State Republican cited the wool textile, shoe and leather, and electronics industries as examples of industries that have already been hurt by import competition. He urged that immediate action be taken by the Administration to aid the wool textile and shoe industries under the authority contained in the Trade Expansion Act, and in the Agriculture Act of 1956. He further urged that industries such as the electronics group which fear that further tariff reductions will cause severe injury to domestic producers, prepare strong cases to support their contentions for presentation at the hearings which will be held by the Tariff Commission and the inter-agency Trade Information Committee before a final decision is made on the items selected for possible tariff concessions at the "Kennedy Round" of negotiations at Geneva next year.

"We hope to be able to lower some of our trade barriers and to increase our export trade through the Trade Expansion Act," Sen. Saltonstall concluded. "We want to see this trade increase, but this must be done in an orderly way so that the whole effect is a higher standard of living, both for the United States and for the other nations of the world. We in Congress have given to the President the responsibility for assessing all of the factors and problems involved, and for deciding on a course of action which will be beneficial in the long run to all concerned and help to achieve the objectives of the Trade Expansion program. That action can and must follow if certain of our industries are to continue to advance and to give employment to our citizens."

WHS Students To Canvass Town For Owen Scholarship

Under the leadership of the Student Council, members of the student body at the high school will canvass the town this Saturday in support of the Laurence Owen Memorial Scholarship Fund by means of a benefit field hockey game planned for a week from Friday, November 15.

At the time of its first award at the graduation exercises following the February, 1961, death of the young skater, herself a member of that class, this scholarship was credited to the "dedicated effort of the Senior Class." And since that time the student body has each year found means of actively supporting the academic memorial to a former student outstanding not only in her international skating achievements but also in the field of study and warmth of personality.

The field hockey game this year will be between the girls' varsity regulars and the faculty, with male and female contestants both allowed on the latter team. It is scheduled for 3:15 at Ginn Field, with a rain date of November 22 preplanned.

The Student Council is composed of some 40 students including room representatives and honorary membership for class officers. It is led this year by Peter Fahey, president, John Stavros, vice-president, Judy Belliveau, secretary, and Julie Devaney, treasurer.

Police Need More Traffic Officers At the Schools

The Winchester Police Department is looking for qualified men and women between the ages of 21 and 65 to assist the Police and School Departments in controlling motor vehicle and child pedestrian traffic on school days, according to Police Chief Joseph J. Derro.

Chief Derro has announced that the department will be happy to interview prospective school traffic officers for the job. He noted that the school traffic officers perform a valuable service for the community in maintaining safe crossing zones for children going to and from schools, and said he hoped there would be a lot of applicants for the job.

Jaycees Welcome New Members At Nov. 12 Meeting

The Winchester Junior Chamber of Commerce welcomes all men between the ages of 21 and 36 to its monthly general meeting on Tuesday, November 12, at 8 p.m., at the Winchester Red Cross House.

Joe Saylor, president, has announced that the program for the evening will include a 25-minute film which promises to be of special interest to new and prospective Jaycee members. The film features highlights of the Jaycee National convention held last spring in Louisville, Kentucky. The Junior Chamber of Commerce is a national organization and includes the Winchester chapter as a charter member.

Membership director Bill Bird will discuss plans for an orientation meeting for new and prospective Jaycee members. Students, Parents To Meet College Admissions Men

"Matching the Student and the College" will be the topic of a panel discussion sponsored by the Parent Faculty Advisory Council on Thursday evening, November 14, at 8 p.m. in the High School auditorium. Representing their colleges will be R. L. Hoffhines, assistant director of admissions, Ohio Wesleyan University, Delaware, Ohio; George W. Gibb, director of admissions, Muhlenberg College, Allentown, Pa., and David Rowe Jefferson, director of admissions, Dickinson College, Allentown, Pa.

Admissions officers of the colleges and members of the audience will receive sample copies of typical high student records which are sent to colleges on graduating students who wish to enter college. Parents, faculty and students are invited to attend.

Mr. Howard Niblock, principal, will moderate the panel and explain various parts of the high school record report. Each admissions officer will describe briefly his college and will evaluate the sample students records in the light of his college's admission standards. The audience will have an opportunity to ask questions of the panel.

Mr. Miles Weaver, chairman of the Parent Faculty Advisory Council, said, "This meeting is part of a continuing program (1) to help parents and students better understand the intricate process of matching student and college, and (2) to acquaint them with some of the many fine colleges and universities in the United States."

With all the important things that are happening in the world today, The Globe feels there's no need to try to jazz up the news. We don't feel that the important issues—whether they're going on in Moscow or Washington or Back Bay—need any phoney whoop-la to make them good reading. People who read The Globe, we feel, depend on it for the plain, unvarnished facts of any news story—all the facts, both sides of the story, straight, clean and complete. In other words, we don't slip up and let opinions get in when we're supposed to be reporting. (Of course, The Globe has opinions, and you'll find them in The Globe every day—on the editorial page and in signed columns where they belong.) If you like a level-headed paper that gives you all the facts—in depth—switch to The Globe. At any newsstand. Or if you prefer, phone AVenue 8-8000 and we'll deliver it to your home every day.

Highway Safety In November And December

"November and December will tell the story of whether or not Massachusetts exceeds last year's high total of highway fatalities, the worst in 25 years," Registrar of Motor Vehicles James R. Lawton said today.

In an appeal to the more than 2 million Massachusetts motorists, the Registrar cautioned that November and December traditionally are the two worst months of the year for highway fatalities. In 1962, a total of 160 men, women and children—81 in November and 79 in December—lost their lives in this period. This represented more than 20 percent of 1962's 701 fatalities, the worst year since 1937 in Massachusetts.

As of midnight, Tuesday October 29, Massachusetts had experienced 564 fatalities, 27 more than the 537 figure for that date in 1962.

In 1961, 126 persons were killed in motor vehicle accidents in this two-month period. Again this represented more than 20 percent of the 575 fatality figure for 1961.

"The 1962 rise in fatalities was 21 per cent over 1961," the Registrar added, "and at least it appears that we have halted this type of yearly increase. Our problem is naturally made more difficult by the yearly increase in registrations, 60,000, and in licensed operators, 85,000.

"However, none of us in highway safety can consider our work completed so long as the life of any one child or adult is lost."

CAPITOL COMMENT
By
YOUR CONGRESSMAN
BRAD MORSE

Americans have often been criticized for having a low level of participation in national elections. Statistics indicating that only about 62 per cent of Americans of voting age actually vote in Presidential elections are cited to show that we take less interest in our national government than do citizens of other nations. President Kennedy has appointed a special committee headed by Census Bureau Director, Richard Scammon, to study the problem.

It may be that the low percentage is less a product of apathy than of outmoded voting restrictions. Most states have residence requirements for voting. The typical law requires a year's residence in the state, six months in the county, and 30 days in the precinct, ward or town. Some states have more stringent requirements.

Because Americans are extremely mobile, millions of citizens find themselves unable to vote due to residence restrictions. It is estimated that in 1960 five million citizens, otherwise qualified to vote, were unable to do so because they could not meet state residence requirements.

While there is merit in the argument that new residents may and have an adequate understanding of local issues and candidates, this should not apply to national candidates and issues. A voter, who is familiar with the Presidential candidates and has followed their campaigns and speeches until shortly before the election, should not be deprived of the right to vote simply because he has not lived in another state for a sufficient period of time.

Under the Constitution, voting requirements are the province of the states. Thus, a Constitutional amendment is required to insure that citizens can vote for national officials regardless of residence requirements. Several Members of Congress, including my distinguished colleague from the Sixth Massachusetts District, Congressman Bates, have introduced resolutions proposing such an amendment.

The suggested amendment would prevent a state from making or enforcing a law which would prevent a resident of the state from voting for Presidential electors, for Senator, or for Representative in Congress on the grounds of insufficient residence, provided that the citizen was previously registered and eligible to vote for such candidates in another state.

Thus far no action has been taken by the House Judiciary Committee on these proposals. Before the amendment could take effect, it must be proposed by a vote of two-thirds of both Houses of Congress and ratified by the legislatures of three-fourths of the states. The length and complexity of this process makes it unlikely that it could be completed before the 1964 election. Thus we can expect that several million American citizens, otherwise qualified and interested in voting for President in 1964 will not be able to do so.

It is my hope that both Houses of Congress will focus their attention on this problem and move in the direction of enabling every interested, qualified voter to cast his ballot in a national election.

Living With Your Heart

The hunting season is upon us in Massachusetts, and the Massachusetts Heart Association today urged hunters to exercise commonsense precautions to cut the toll of heart attacks that the season brings.

Throughout the Bay State, hunters will go out for birds from October 21 to November 29; the archery season for deer opens November 11 and runs through November 23; and the big push—the traditional deer season—opens December 2 for one week.

The MHA counseled heart patients who wish to hunt to confer first with their physicians. Hiking through marshes and brambles, trudging uphill, stalking the prey, cool weather, high altitudes, all can impose a greater-than-usual strain on the heart.

If the physician gives his blessing and the recovered patient follows his advice carefully, he can enjoy hunting for years to come. The Heart Association offered the following suggestions to remove the strain from hunting:

1. First, get into condition. Hunting is an active sport which deserves prior training. Start with moderate exercise and then step it up gradually.

2. On the trip itself, take the load off your heart in every possible way. For instance, use warm but lightweight clothing.

3. If the expedition is at a higher altitude than you're accustomed to, go a few days early to let your body adjust to it.

4. Whenever you feel tired, rest as often and as long as necessary.

5. When the deer season arrives, never try to drag in a heavy carcass alone. It's a job for two or more able-bodied men. Arrange a signal before-hand and wait until help arrives. A man with heart trouble should let others take this job over completely.

6. Never hunt alone. If you have heart trouble, tell at least one companion about any medication you may be taking, where you carry it and instructions for using it.

In case of emergency, stricken hunters should be kept absolutely still and have the quickest medical aid possible. If possible, the doctor should go to him rather than the victim being taken to the doctor. If he must be moved a litter should be used.

Gore Place Comes To Life For The History Minded

The Winchester Historical Society was treated to another outstanding lecture last Saturday afternoon in the Rich Room of the Library when Mrs. Laurence Polson, curator of Gore Place in Waltham, took the group on a most interesting tour of that Mansion via colored slides.

The beautiful circular stairway, the choice pieces of china and many original pieces of furniture were a joy to behold. Interested people, knowing the value and history of this Mansion, formed the Gore Place Society and restored it to its original beauty, rating now as one of the five most outstanding houses of the Federal Period in this country.

The Winchester Historical Society strives to be the medium whereby the ideals of the past may come to life. The general public is cordially invited to rediscover these hidden treasures and join the next meeting in February.

U. F. Campaign Rapidly Reaching Its 1964 Goal

It's full speed ahead for the United Fund's metropolitan campaign express, as thousands of volunteers this week visited homes and local businesses in the residential phase of the 1964 campaign.

The metropolitan campaign began November 1 and is the last phase of the overall drive for a goal of $10.1 million to aid 200 social, health and welfare agencies in Greater Boston.

Last week, chairman Elliot L. Richardson reported that 69 per cent ($6,949,000) had been pledged or received towards the goal. This money has been raised in the large firms, public service, commerce and industry, advance gifts and construction departments from thousands of employers, employees and others.

Mr. Richardson has stated "that it now appears that if we can get most residential givers to contribute $5 more than they did last year, the United Fund will go over the top."

Residential solicitors have been asked to suggest to possible givers that they can help meet the goal by giving only an additional 10 cents a week (or a $5 increase over previous giving).

Among the heartening reports, said Mr. Richardson, was one brought back from Washington, D. C. This related to a check received from President Kennedy as his contribution to his hometown area's United Fund drive.

Water Repellent Product Checked As Being Hazard

The Food and Drug Administration today warned householders and others against use of "X-33 Water Repellent," an extremely flammable masonry water proofer. FDA Commissioner George P. Larrick urged consumers who have purchased the product to return it unopened to their dealers immediately because of the extreme risk of flash fires and explosions.

Mr. Larrick warned householders against trying to destroy or dispose of the product themselves without first consulting their local fire department.

The Commissioner said that the X-33 product as manufactured up until about two months ago has a flash point (point of ignition) at a temperature below 40 degrees F. The product manufactured since then has been changed and has a flash point of 73 degrees F.

However, Mr. Larrick said, since the labels on the cans do not indicate which product is which and because of the extremely flammable nature of the old product, all cans of X-33 Water Repellent should be returned to the dealer. The user runs the risk of possible death or severe injury because of the highly hazardous nature of the old product.

Steps are being taken to remove the extremely flammable water proofer from the market, Mr. Larrick said. It is distributed by the Wilmington Chemical Corp., of Chicago, Ill.

FDA made over 20 seizures of the X-33 product following reports of injuries from flash fires in Rochester, N. Y., last October. In all, eight injuries and one death have been reported due to X-33 explosions. The latest case involved the death of a housewife and severe burns to her husband last May 28. The housewife painted her basement walls with X-33. When she finished she sat down to rest. The windows were reported opened and no pilot lights were on. Suddenly an explosion and flash fire occurred. Her husband, on the floor above in an attached garage, was severely burned and the roof was blown off the garage. The housewife died two days later. FDA said the cause of ignition could not be determined.

FDA said the product first appeared on the market early in 1962. The wrap-around paper label was inadequate under the Federal Hazardous Substances Labeling Act. The firm devised a new sticker label to send to dealers for attachment to the cans. The 20 odd seizures involved cans of X-33 which failed to bear the new sticker label.

It became apparent, however, that even the sticker label was not enough warning to protect consumers against the product. In a letter to the Wilmington firm, Malcolm R. Stephens, director of FDA's Bureau of Enforcement, declared:

"We have reservations about the desirability of lay people attempting to use it in the home. Because, however, the statute is a labeling law and does not give us authority to rule products off the market irrespective of any labeling that may be employed we have given consideration to the question of a revised label for the article . . ."

The revised label would include as a part of a prominent and conspicuous warning statement, the following:

"The potential hazard from the use of this product is so great it is recommended the user, before applying the material, consult with a professional expert in handling such highly hazardous materials to minimize the chance of personal injury or property damage."

Living With Your Heart

("Living With Your Heart" is a community service of the Massachusetts Heart Association of Greater Boston Chapter).

The Cardiovascular System exists to serve its master as long as he lives. The master will do well to respect its requirements and its limitation, but he amounts to more than this system, or any other body system. Old people seem to be much more aware than younger ones that they are in charge of themselves. Their independence is at risk when they are told - or fear - that their heart or their circulation are not as good as they should be. How much must they abandon their goals and restrict their involvement with life because of this? What price do they pay if they give too much attention to present or predicted troubles? What degree of physical fitness can they preserve? These are questions which greatly interest our Heart Association.

From Galen's time on, health has been felt to be the ability to move without pain or restriction in the program of living chosen by the individual. For those of us who are old, the question is, must we now take stress and strain as bad, and narrow our program progressively to avoid them? Or can we still view tme as challenges and opportunities to grow?

We remember a time when rest was the most important ingredient in medical treatment. One stayed in bed for months with typhoid fever and pneumonia, and for years with tuberculosis or rheumatic fever. Well-to-do-young mothers were supposed to stay in bed for six weeks after their babies were home. Nowadays, all this has changed, thanks to the great advances in medicine and surgery and to a better understanding of psysiology.

Rest takes place in relation to exercise. Our humble hearts are content with a fleeting moment of rest between each beat. We don't accumulate strength by not using ourselves. But how much rest do we need? Should it extend to cover the time available for it? The authorities whom I consult most - the members of our Age Center - seem to feel that it should be enough to let one awake refreshed each morning. For some this is only six hours, for most it is between 8 and 9 hours. Few of them "have time" for an afternoon nap, but some like it because it improves their appreciation of the evening's opportunities. In retirement they no longer use a vacation as the time to Get Away From It All but as a means of recharging their interest batteries.

Exercise, regular use of the body, is necessary to keep bones strong and to keep muscles readily available. But what if we find ourselves approaching old age and out of condition? Do we hide behind shortness of breath and aching muscles and say, "at our age what can you expect?" Or are we candid enough to admit that what you expect does not matter; it is what we find we must do to preserve our independent way of life that counts.

Setting up exercises are good. They are easily neglected because we do them badly, or because a miraculous improvement is slow in coming. For those who like discipline it helps to make them a regular part of the daily toilet, like brushing the teeth or shaving. It is wise, too, for each one to decide what exercises to do and for how many times, since we start with different needs and capacities.

There is an interesting difference between exercise as work and exercise as play. In work we do not get away from our dull selves. We are more virtuous, perhaps, but still worrisome and preoccupied. At play, one has to relax as well as work; one has to pay attention to the game. When it is over we are refreshed. We have a sense of coordination. Even more important, we have a sense of humor, a sense of having been ridiculous and enjoying it. Life does not look quite so grim, decisions seem more possible to make. Social play (dancing, bowling, skating, swimming) has the added advantages of increasing friendships and of brushing off the barnacles that we feared were the necessary incrustations of our age.

My Age Center friends have taught me that it is easier to play in old age if one was accustomed to playing as a young adult. But even the most shy and timid can dance alone in his room, to music from the radio or record player or from his heart. And one can dance and gain zest even if one is confined to chair or to bed. One of the most famous dances Charlie Chaplin ever did was with his hands manipulating rolls fixed to forks, on a table.

Music Hath Charms, Much Else Besides

As William Congreve wrote in 1697, "Music hath charms to soothe the savage beast, to soften rocks, or bend a knotted oak." He wasn't far wrong.

Today the noble art is being used in some unlikely places—in the barnyard and the dentist's office, the factory and the operating room, the National Geographic Society says.

In McKeesport, Pennsylvania, dairymen piped music into a barn to lull somnolent cows into yielding more milk. The experiment rated mention in the British House of Lords, whose members learned that cows prefer the Blue Danube Waltz to noisy jazz.

Patients who arrive at their dentists' offices with frazzled nerves and sagging courage calmly submit to the whirring drill after exposure to the languid strains of a Chopin nocturne.

Hens Lay More

Some poultrymen report their hens lay more eggs under the influence of music.

And in a Phoenix, Arizona, hospital, obstetricians have been experimenting with music as a substitute for anesthetics on the theory that music "Brings sweet sleep down from the blissful skies," as Tennyson wrote in "The Lotus-Eaters."

Music therapy is also used in hospitals in the treatment of mental patients.

In southern India, a botanist has claimed that music makes plants grow faster and yield bigger crops. The notion, received by other scientists with frank skepticism, is not new in India. The puranic scripture Bhagavata describes the deity Krishna as having made flowers bloom when he played his flute in the gardens of Brindaban.

Powerful Sounds

Music's next-door neighbor in the sonic spectrum—the higher range of frequencies called "ultrasonic"—has produced some of the most dramatic examples of the hidden power of sound waves.

Ultrasonic waves, just beyond man's hearing range, have been used to wash clothes, repair teeth, measure the fat on a living hog's back, test the tenderness of beef-on-the-hoof, guide torpedoes, measure ocean depths, find fish, and even to ease a presidential backache.

This latter application occurred in 1961. When Pres. John F. Kennedy suffered a strained back, doctors used ultrasonic radiation to relax the muscles and reduce pain.

In February, 1963, botanists at Utah State University said they had used sound waves to create living viruses from plant substances.

And those softened rocks and bent oaks Congreve spoke about? Ultrasonic "knives" can cut through sapphire, one of the hardest of minerals; and ultrasonic energy, the Oregon Forest Research Center reported, can change the form of wood products.

Reading Battles Sachems To 30-30 Tie On Monday

ED CUTTING hurdles goal-line congestion for Sachem TD in second-period action against Reading while halfback Dave Rowe (18) watches. Despite three Cutting touchdowns, Sachems let win slip through their hands.

Sleeper Pass, Point-After Decisive

Reading High School came from far back in the second half of its Middlesex League football game Monday afternoon and pulled out a hat-hoisting 30-30 tie ball game that seemed every bit as good a a triumph for the White and Red.

The equalizer came on a sleeper pass that you seldom see nowadays, it having been legislated off the books. Technically the officials ruled that Wanagel covered the rules by being within 15 yards of the place where scrimmage commenced when the ball was snapped. No one on the Winchester side will agree to this, but the ruling stood and Reading went on to send co-captain Tine up the middle for the big two points necessary to tie up the game.

Had there been another minute or two to play, after what seemed an interminable final quarter, Reading might have had another, so completely was Winchester outclassed at this point. The Rockets had just intercepted a pass deep in Winchester's territory when the final whistle blew.

Winchester had a one-touchdown lead in the final minutes of play, when Reading blocked a punt and recovered the ball at the Winchester 47. "Vic" Papadinis, however, pulled Winchester out of that when he intercepted a pass and ran the ball to the Reading 28.

Stavros got a yard, but Winchester was assessed 15 yards for holding, putting the ball back on the 43. The Sachems couldn't get going and punted to the 38 yard line where the Reading receiver's knee hit the ground.

"Sleeper" Pass Scores

Kelly sent Tine from a spread off Winchester's weakened left tackle and the hard-running fullback cut back and bulled his way to the 21. A couple of linebucks and a pass made first down inside the Winchester five, and at this point Kelly hit Wanagel across the field with a "sleeper" pass for the score. Tine bucked for the equalizing two points.

Good Start By Sachems

Winchester started well. Russell Thomas ran the kickoff back only to the 13. The Sachems refused to give ground and Reading punted to the 43 yard line. Cutting at once, behind some good blocking and showing plenty of speed on his own, circled his own right end for a first down at the 35. David Rowe picked up two and Bob Branley was dropped without gain.

Rowe picked his way through the scrimmage for a first down at the 18, and from there the Sachems drove ahead until Cutting dove over to score from the one yard line. The try for the extra points after was no good and Winchester is going to have to do somehting about this big deficiency in its game.

A 15 yard penalty against Reading for clipping on the kickoff put the ball away back on the 13. Reading, however, failed to get started and punted from its 15, the high short punt going outside at the 26.

This was on the first play of the second period, and Cutting brought the crowd to its feet when he swept his own right end for the touchdown. The try for extra points was muffed in the end zone.

Reading Scores

Reading started after the kickoff which was run all the way back to the Winchester 48. From this point the Rockets drove ahead until Cutting pulled down Newell at the 15. Here Tine on a pretty delayed handoff skirted the Winchester left end for the score. Kelly kept the ball himself and easily added the extra points.

Pass interference was called against Reading, giving Winchester the ball and a first down at the 30. Cutting picked up eight and Goldin bucked for a first down at the 10. Here Branley hit Papadinis with a pass in the end zone for the tally. Once again the try for the extra points failed.

Stavros Steals Ball

On the very next play Winchester got a big nod from Lady Luck, when Stavros stole the ball from the Reading kickoff receiver at the 35 yard line and legged it all the way to score. The try for the extra points failed.

Reading was pushed back to the 22 where the visitors punted. The Winchester receiver fumbled and the ball was recovered by Reading at the Winchester 45.

The Rockets couldn't do anything with the pigskin and the half ran out with the Sachems leading 24 to 8. Few would have given much for Reading's chances of pulling out a tie at this point.

With the resumption of play Reading held for downs on its 10 yard line. Winchester wouldn't yield and took over on downs at the 32. Here a 15 yarder for holding stalled Winchester's drive, but a flea-flicka pass to Cutting advanced the ball to the 20, and a pretty screen pass made first down at the seven.

Reading Interception

Here a pass was intercepted by Reading and on third down following Kelly from a spread formation tossed off a long one to Tom Foley, who was covered by two Winchester defenders, but none-the-less succeeded in making the catch at midfield and scooting all the way to pay dirt. A pretty "look-in" pass added the extra points. In the early minutes of the final quarter Winchester recovered a Reading fumble at the 18 yard line.

Winchester Scores Again

At this point a pretty forward lateral from Branley to Ed Cutting went all the way out to the right, Branley holding the ball until the last possible minute. A pass for the extra points was overthrown.

This was the Sachems' last gasp, and Reading still had something left as they showed running from a spread formation, which weakened materially the Winchester frontier and set up Tine's vicious line plunging.

Starting at the 15 Reading put together a drive that featured two pretty Kelly tosses at the 43 and 30. Here Kelly sent Tine into the line and the big fullback drove for a first down at the 20. Tine carried twice from here and went over without a hand being laid upon him. The extra points were no good. The summary:

Winchester—Le, Faieta, Sullivan, Papadinis; lt, Frongillo, Howard, Gilberti, Lawson; c, Stavaridis; rg, Mears, Kelly; rt, Kimball, Tuttle; re, Puffer, Grant, Johnson; qb, Cutting, Blaisdell; lhb, Branley, Goldin; rhb, Rowe, Mahoney; fb, Stavros.

Reading—Le, Henry, Sarmanian; lt, Robichaud, Winkler; lg, Hodson, Stark, Scott; c, Ryan; rg, Murdoch, Pierro, Richards; rt, Anzaldi, Hubbard, Devaney; re, Powers, Wanagel, Jellison; qb, Sweeney, Newell; lhb, Foley, Kelly, Hayden; rhb, Crace, Conti; fb, Kelly, Tine.

Winchester 6 18 0 6—30
Reading 0 8 8 14—30

Touchdowns: Cutting 3, Papadinis, Stavros, Tine 2, Foley, Wanagel. Points after touchdown: Kelly 2 (rush), Anzaldi (rush).

Jack Concannon of Boston College was rated fifth by the NCAA in total offense for 1962. In 272 plays Concannon gained 1,745 yards.

Scouting Report

BELMONT
Coach: Bob Frink
'62 Record: 5-1-3

Past performances show Belmont to be a good but sometimes inconsistent team. Their loss to Melrose (42-8) was similar to the Sachem loss (46-8); and their win over Cambridge Latin (22-0) was again matched by the Sachems (28-0). But while Winchester lost their season's opener to Concord 20-6, Belmont downed an injury-riddled Patriot eleven last week 8-0. Both teams also played remarkably similar games against Reading. Consensus? Even though Belmont is in second place with a 5-1 record, this Saturday's encounter should be a toss-up. Quarterbcak Bobby Mara will bother Winchester more than any other signal-caller they have faced so far. Others to watch: Gerry Geralamo, a halfback, and Tom Nicosia, an end.

Duck and Upland Seasons Extended

Inland duck hunters in Massachusetts welcomed Governor Peabody's announcement that federal authorities have granted an additional ten days of hunting to make up for days lost from the first half of the duck season during the recent woods closure. Massachusetts is the only state so far to be granted an extension of duck hunting for this reason and this is the first time this has been done.

Duck and coot (mudhen) hunting during the special extension November 4 through November 14 inclusive will be legal in inland waters and land areas and will not be legal on coastal waters. Shooting hours will be sunrise to sunset including November 4. The second half of the duck season will be open statewide November 29 through December 27 inclusive as originally announced. Shooting will be legal at 12:00 noon E.S.T. on November 29 and sunrise to sunset thereafter.

Governor Peabody and state fisheries and game director Francis Sargent expressed pleasure that their efforts to obtain the added days were successful.

A previous proclamation by the governor opening the woods on October 29 also extended the upland gunning season on pheasants, quail, grouse and squirrel from December 9 through December 18 inclusive. Hunters are reminded that these seasons will close on November 30 under existing regulations, then reopen at sunrise December 9. Sargent praised division personnel who made an all-out effort to stock pheasants when the woods ban was lifted.

No extensions were established on woodcock, rabbits or racoon. The woodcock flights are gone anyway after the regular closing on November 28, and the rabbit and racoon seasons are so long that any extension would be unnecessary.

Dwight D. Eisenhower was varsity halfback at West Point in 1912; he was also head coach at St. Louis College (now St. Mary's University), San Antonio, Texas, in 1916, and of the Third Army Corps All-Stars, Fort Meade, Maryland, in 1921.

Sachem Soccer Team Ties Wellesley In Final Game

SOPHOMORE HALFBACK Peter Thorp breaks up Wellesley attack in fourth period of last Thursday's 0-0 tie at Manchester Field. It marked the first time that the newly conceived soccer team played on home ground.

Newton carried a 7-1 record into last Thursday's game, and expected to determine the final outcome early in the game. But the Sachem soccer team never did accept this philosophy. In a defensive struggle going into an overtime, the Winchester team played on even terms with a more experienced Wellesley team, settling for a 0-0 tie.

The defensive work of Barry Weeks, Randy Randlett, and goalie Dennis O'Connell kept the Wellesley attackers off balance, constantly setting up offensive situations which halfbacks Fisher, Saddler, Thorp, and Pierce took into their own hands.

This Red and Black team has improved tremendously over the season, showing some subtle skills not expected of a first year team. Coaches Knight and Bouley have been quite happy with the progress of the young team, and hope to present an exciting 1964 version of Winchester soccer next year. The team will have a number of juniors and sophomores returning, but will sorely miss the seniors who have instilled such spirit into this team.

Seniors on this year's team are Captain Randy Randlett, Dennis O'Connell, George Murphy, Ron Scherban, Gerry Hills, Ernie Sackett, Tom Kuhn, Jim Kerrigan, John Stockwell, Dick Penner, and Jeff Russell.

OUTSTANDING is the way opposing coaches have described Sachems' soccer captain, Randy Randlett. Commenters have predicted a brilliant college career.

PROBABLY WISHING he really did have four legs is Sachem Gerry Hills, after receiving pass from George Murphy, as he leads varsity forward line in attack during 0-0 deadlock with Wellesley last Thursday afternoon at Manchester Field. Ernie Sackett and Ron Scherban keep pace.

Indian Tracks

BY FRANK PROCOPIO

Rocky Colavito, currently on the Detroit Tigers trading block, traces a history of disappointment. He started his baseball career with pitcher Herb Score, a righthanded fireballer who was always easy to get along with. The two became inseparable friends; they traveled together, roomed together, and occasionally got into arguments with Cleveland general manager Frank Lane together. That is, until "Trader" Lane decided the Indians needed revamping. Cleveland fans were appalled when Colavito was exchanged for Harvey Kuenn in the spring of 1960. Not long after, Score was hit in the eye by a line drive off the bat of Gil McDougald, and he never again pitched with the same old authority. The accident bothered Colavito more than he revealed. Last year, after averaging 37 home runs a season, he suffered his worst batting slump. Only a second-half surge increased his RBI output to 91 and his homers to 22. Still, rumors persisted that he would be wearing a different uniform come the spring of 1964. Last week the Milwaukee Braves confirmed reports that they wanted him; others in line are, the Yankees, A's, Senators, and, of course, Boston's own . . . October is generally the month when major league ball clubs begin their housekeeping. Released in the last three weeks were, Johnny Logan (Pirates), Minnie Minoso (Senators), Ray Moore, Vic Wertz, and Wally Post (Twins), Jim Lemon (White Sox), and Tom Morgan (Angels). Sent to the minors were, Marv Breeding (Dodgers), Elio Chacon and Marv Throneberry (Mets), Jim Coates (Reds), Whitey Herzog (Tigers), Julio Becquer (Twins), Jack Reed (Yankees), and Norm Larker (Giants) . . . Also released was a likeable infielder named Billy Gardner by the Red Sox; but who was thought enough of to be offered an instructing job at Seattle with special emphasis on rookies Dalton Jones and Rico Petrocelli . . . All baseball releases and demotions are sad things to watch but none sadder than the most recent indignity applied to Herb Score, whom Indianapolis has just shuffled off to a whistle stop called Lynchburg.

Probably the least noticed and least publicized team at Winchester High is the undefeated sophomore squad under Coach George Watson. Their record to date reads:

Winchester 28	Belmont 0
Winchester 16	Lexington 8
Winchester 8	Stoneham 6
Winchester 12	Melrose 0
Winchester 14	Wakefield 6
Winchester 14	Woburn 6

Notice that no more than a single TD was scored against them in any one game. Fans who would like to see them in action can do so this afternoon (November 7) at 3 p.m. at Manchester Field when they play host to Reading in the final game of the season . . . Charlestown's Dick DiVola who defeated Tommy Tibbs for the N. E. lightweight title last week has several friends in Winchester. Among them, Frank Carroll, presently "vacationing" on the West Coast, who is a pretty fair authority on the manly art of self defense himself. Last spring another Winchesterite, Jack Herzog, ran into DiVola in Texas where the two were undergoing a six-month army stint . . . Winchester's cross country squad finished third in Class B competition last Saturday afternoon at White Stadium, Boston, where the 26th annual running of the state championships were held. Outstanding was Sachem Jon Buckley who finished with a time of 12:53, and captured individual honors . . . Last call for those members of the 1930-31-32 Winchester Town Teams, who will participate with the Woburn semi-pro football club of the same era in a reunion to be held November 10 at St. Anthony's Hall, North Woburn. Those interested should contact Roy Horn, Angelo Tofuri, or Frank Amico.

S.O.I. Men

League leading Notre Dame was bested by Yale the last time out but still rides the driver's seat despite the 2-6 setback while the victors climbed one notch to third. Capt. Richie Bucci was the big gun for the winners with strings of 131-104-107 and Don Kenton missed the 300 mark by two pins when he rolled 83-116-99. Capt. Moose Bellno of losing N. D. led all in the match with 138-95-115.

Bates' 8-0 win over Army moved the victors from third to second spot while Army was hurt when it dropped from second to fifth slot. Roundy Fiore and Capt. Bob Fiore had an excellent night with respective strings of 100-117-137 and 122-113-98. Also giving a big hand were Butsy Mistretta 99-110-98 and Max DiMambro 111-86-108. Top performers for the cadets were Capt. Choppers Gangi 114-100-116 and Rugged Muraco 118-97-96.

Moving up one notch to fourth place is Navy after its 6-2 win over ninth place B.C. Navy Capt. Richie Riga continues to knock them over and hit for 122-133-111 and close behind was Mario Mascioli with 111-106-104. The big ones for B. C. were Capt. Tony Saraco who had 108-113-93 and Andy Buzzotta 99-105-100.

Holy Cross took California 6-2 to hold sixth and seventh spots respectively. Al Repucci and "New Shoes" Subrizio were the main cogs for the victors with respective strings of 105-92-105 and 111-92-98. Charlie Gangi and Capt. Dick Trabucco did well in a losing game when they rolled 106-106-107 and 120-97-100.

Harvard and Maryland split for the night but it was enough for Harvard to climb one rung to eighth while Maryland remains in eleventh. Harvard's Joe Capone was the only 300 hitter for Harvard with 96-137-113 while Maryland's three magic markers were Capt. Woozy Giacalone 127-106-100, Slim Lentine 105-110-95 and Johnny Dattilo 113-90-102.

Tenth place Georgetown took thirteenth place Penn 6-2 with the 300 rollers being Capt. Joe Marrone 102-119-106, Tony Chefalo 98-104-119 and Jake Ciarcia 96-111-95 for the winners while Carl Bertolucci was the only Penn man to hit the mark with 109-112-116.

St. Mary's squeezed out a 5-3 win to gain twelfth place over last place Alabama. Capt. Johnny Mangano led his winning team with 114-95-103 and helping him was Rudy Fiore 85-108-109. Capt. Dick Tofuri was Alabama's lone 300 bowler with 104-100-118.

S.O.I. Women

Your reporter is still all a-jitter over last weeks exciting performance on alleys 1 and 2 at Strike Lanes. The star was Cusi Fiore. Her masterpiece 106-119-120 - 345 grand total. Cusi sure had it that night.

I understand one of her teammates knew it was her night to shine and kept right after her to do better and Cusi sure came through. That girl was Flo Paonessa.

Ann Carpinteri got her first spare that night too. Could be because your husband was there watching. Cusi's team took all 8 points and I understand her team set a record by bowling a 1308 total pinfall for the night. Nice going Viceroys and a big "nice going" to Cusi. A real "living doll."

It was a night for double 100 pluses. T. Nappa had a 106 and a 112 strings, as did R. DeTeso with a 113 and 100 strings. Good bowling girls. Kools are still top team.

K. of C.

On last Thursday evening the ghosts and goblins really did a job on the K. of C. bowlers. It being Halloween, there was quite a few bowlers absent.

Bob and Dick Fiore spent the evening chasing the little ones around the school yards, and as a consequence their teams both went down to defeat 8 to 0.

Dick Burke has returned from his scouting trip of the bocci players in Rome. He fell in love with the Italian cookies over there and brought a cookie-duster home with him.

The Rams continued to roll by beating the Eagles 6 to 2. Dick Tofuri bowled a 316 for the Eagles but his team was handicapped because Joe Cullinane was looking out the window all evening for the stork.

Tom Cahill was back in championship form and he helped the Bears defeat the Vikings 6 to 2. The Browns and 49ers split 4 points each Joe Lynch did a good job of filling in as anchorman.

In addition, as he is supervisor of buildings and grounds for the schools here, he visited many schools in the area and was invited to attend a school dedication by the Prime Minister.

Harriers Third In State Meet

On Saturday, November 2, the Winchester Cross Country team concluded its season with a third place finish in the State Class B Race, where a total of 16 teams competed in that class this year.

Highlighting the performance for Winchester, was a first place finish by Winchester co-captain, Jon Buckley, Jon seized the lead about two hundred yards from the start of the two and a half mile race and maintained a comfortable margin throughout. This was a fitting climax to a fine year for Jon, who has consistently been one of the top two finishers in the league tri-meets.

Eric Schaefer, the other co-captain, also turned in a fine performance with a 27th place finish. Other finishers for Winchester were: Robert Lynch 26th, Ian Jenike 34th, John Larkin 40th, Neil Shapleigh 43rd, and Tom Kelley 50th. Especially significant was the fact that Winchester's last man was 50th in a field of over 150 runners.

This year's team matched last year's record of six wins and three losses, however, the Middlesex League was noticeably stronger this year. Next year's team will have a strong returning nucleus and should seriously challenge for the league and state titles. Returning lettermen will be Ian Jenike, Robert Lynch, Tom Kelley, Neil Shapleigh, John Larkin, Jeff Strout and Steve Smith.

These boys will be strongly backed up by several promising JV runners including John Cussen, Ted Jope, Dave Swanson, Alain Padula, Charles Swim, Charles Thoms and Steve Fahey.

Coach Rawden would like to thank all of the loyal supporters that provided welcome morale support during the course of the season. Thanks is especially due to those who ventured forth under the adverse weather conditions of last Saturday's State Meet.

Physical Culture Contest At Woburn YMCA

The Woburn Area YMCA is sponsoring its annual "Mr. Northeastern and Eastern Massachusetts" Physique contest and Odd Lifts meet on Tuesday, November 12th. This could be one of the most interesting meets ever held in the Woburn area. Spectators and contestants will be coming from all over the northern and eastern parts of Massachusetts to view this popular event. At the last two meets there were well over 200 in attendance and the number is expected to swell to much larger proportions because of its past successes.

In the Odd Lifts meet, which has seven different weight classes ranging from 123 lbs. to heavyweight, there will be some very prominent lifters vying for top honors. Namely, Eastern States Champions Archie Burgess and Peter French of Boston, recordholders Frank Porter of Boston, Ernie Cioto, Joe Zarella, Bob Jordan, and Neil Byam, all from the Woburn Area YMCA. According to most reports, some long-standing records are expected to fall before the onslaught of these talented lifters.

In the Physique contest, some of the most well-developed bodybuilders ever assembled in one place will be competing for the top prize of the night, "Mr. Northeastern and Eastern Massachusetts". Last year Peter French of Boston won the coveted award for the most perfect body with Herb Rothfarb and Sam Deleo both of Cambridge taking the 2nd and 3rd spots.

The bench-press, deadlift and squat are the three lifts the athletes will perform in the meet. The Odd Lifts differ from the Olympic Weightlifting in that none of these lifts are raised overhead.

Last year Frank Porter of Boston set a record of 580 lbs. in the deadlift, which consisted of pulling the weight from the floor and assuming a stand-up position. It was quite a feat. On that same night Joe Zarella and Ernie Cioto, both of Woburn, were just as impressive when they did record squats of 470 lbs. in the Heavyweight class. Both have plans to better this record in the upcoming meet.

The YMCAs that plan to send their top lifters to the meet come from Dorchester Boston, Hyde Park, Cambridge, Fitchburg, Malden, Melrose, Newton, Marblehead, Quincy, Somerville, Wakefield, Woburn, Worcester, Greendale, Beverly, Haverhill, Lawrence, Lowell and Salem.

The event will start at 6:45 p.m. sharp at the Woburn Area YMCA on Main Street, Woburn. The spectators fee is listed at 75 cents; for children under 12, 50 cents.

Those who still wish to enter or have any question concerning the meet are asked to call the Woburn Area YMCA (WE 3-2668) and speak to Director Anthony "Tiny" Giglio. According to all indications, this event should be one well worth its price, and one that will be long remembered.

Sachems Hosts Belmont At Manchester Field Saturday

Winchester High plays host to Belmont Saturday afternoon in a Middlesex League football game on Manchester Field.

Belmont looks to be better this season than in the past, and should give the embattled Sachems quite a ball game.

On Monday against Reading Winchester looked like quite a ball team in the first half but petered out at the end of the battle.

Belmont beat Wakefield two weeks ago, 16-6, and won an 8-0 victory over Concord Monday afternoon. This would indicate Winchester has its work cut out if it is to win Saturday.

Belmont has plenty of size and has a boy who throws the ball well. Winchester's pass defense has left something to be desired, and it is likely that Coach Knowlton will work his charges hard this week, anticipating a flood of leather.

Belmont now is in second place in the Middlesex League behind Melrose, while Winchester is back in the ruck. The Sachems showed against Reading that they can move the ball, and when you recall that Reading beat Rindge, conquerer of Class A Malden, perhaps the Sachems did not do too badly.

One thing is for sure! Winchester has got to make a conversion now and then if it is to stay in contention. The coaching staff knows this and is trying to come up with something before the season is over. Maybe they'll hit the jackpot Saturday against Belmont!

Lake Trout Reproducing In Quabbin Reservoir

Evidence that lake trout are reproducing in significant numbers in Quabbin Reservoir was verified this year by data collected by the Division of Fisheries and Game.

Fishermen interviewed by the creel census agent at the three mooring areas during the 1963 season reported the capture and release of numerous undersized lakers from six to eighteen inches in length. Commonest sizes reported ranged from nine to fifteen inches. Studies of laker growth have shown that this is the size normally attained by Quabbin lakers during their third year of life. The fish of that size taken in 1963 must, therefore, have been fingerlings in 1961, the division says.

The division ceased stocking lake trout fingerlings in 1957 and did not resume stocking them until the spring of 1963. At that time, establishment of the species was still quesionable, so an "insurance stocking" of 53,000 two-inch lakers was made. Therefore, any laker whose origin can be traced to one of the intervening years, 1958 to 1962, must have been spawned within the reservoir. As the fingerlings meet this requirement, they must be native lakers.

Proof of the fact that the nine-to-fifteen-inch fish seen in 1963 were indeed two-year olds in their third growing season was obtained this past August when two lakers measuring eleven and one-half inches long were netted off Mooring Area No. 1 by state fisheries workers. Readings of scale samples taken from these young lakers revealed that the fish were two years old.

An indication of the abundance of native lakers in Quabbin Reservoir is afforded by comparing the number of reports of 1963 catches of the above two-year-old natives with similar reports of stocked two-year-olds caught in 1958 and 1959. In 1963, 224 such reports were received by the creel census agent compared to only 54 such reports in 1958 and 63 such reports in 1959.

This data sems to sustain state fisheries workers original hopes that Quabbin Reservoir may eventually have a self-sustaining lake trout population.

It has been known for some time that excessive weight is a distinct health hazard and not conducive to longevity. Putting the danger of excess poundage in simple terms, we might start with a group of 36 men in their 40's, 18 thin, and 18 fat. At 50, barring outside causes of death, there will still be 18 thin men, but only 12 of their beefier brothers. At 80, six of the lean men can still expect to be around, but only two of the meaty ones will survive. Thus, excess weight creates a 3 to 1 odds against a long life.

Refreshments will be served at 1 o'clock. Members and guests are cordially invited.

ACROSS THE COUNTER

Does where you usually shop depend primarily on price and convenience? This is the traditional shopping pattern of most Americans. But it's risky — and often downright unwise — to follow these rules in buying an intangible article like insurance.

"Quality and performance," says the sales vice-president of one of America's largest insurance groups, "can't be sold on the basis of price and convenience alone. The real value of insurance can't be proved on a box top, nor ordered through the mail."

"Insurance is bought on the strength of the PROMISE made," he continued. "In exchange for a premium, funds will be forthcoming to meet financial losses from certain events. Insurance is not bought because it comes in a pretty package, is printed in four colors, or snaps, crackles and pops!

"Buy insurance," he cautions, "on the basis of the SINCERITY and SERVICE of the agent representing the insurance company. Without his skill and precision, the promise may not fit the need, and the need itself may be unprotected."

May we design the right "Program of Protection" for you?

Town Heads "Over The Top" UF Drive; 75% Of Goal Passed

Winchester now leads as one of the top five towns out of 49 cities and towns in the Greater Boston area in the amount of money contributed to the United Fund's 1964 campaign for over 200 charities, according to Audley Clarke of 65 Myopia Road, general chairman for the Winchester drive.

Mr. Clarke said Winchester is also the first town of its size to go over the 75 per cent mark, with two weeks left to go in the official solicitation campaign, and is number one in the amount contributed in the north and east divisions of the Greater Boston area.

The Winchester goal assigned by United Fund headquarters in Boston is $19,500. However, the local committee set its sights a little higher for Winchester donors, hoping to get $22,000. Mr. Clarke said that because of the bad weather in the past few weeks, the nearly 500 solicitors have only been able to reach about half of the residents. But when all the contributions and pledges are in, he said, he anticipated that the Town might even surpass the committee's goal.

In describing local contributions to date, the committee has noted that both the business and advance gifts campaigns went well beyond last year's donations, and if the residents follow the same pattern, the Town will surpass last year's amount by far.

During the year 1962, Winchester residents received more in services rendered by United Fund agencies than it paid for in contributions. Raising in the neighborhood of approximately $16,000 that year, various organizations in Town (or out of Town giving service to Winchester residents) received a total of about $41,722.

The following local expenditures by the United Fund were revealed earlier this year: Winchester Red Cross, $18,818; youth services such as Boy and Girl Scouts and YMCA and YWCA, $11,292; Winchester Visiting Nurses, $8,445; family services such as Legal Aid and Traveler's Aid Society's, $2,494; children's services such as guidance counselling and clincs $1,587; and Winchester's share of the total $742,330 made available to 23 Red Feather hospitals and of the total $550,000 given to the Salvation Army.

The Greater Boston United Fund "People Helping People" campaign entered the final two weeks of its drive with 78.9% or $7,972,810 of its goal of $10.1 million. Final Report Night is scheduled for Wednesday, November 20.

Elliot L. Richardson, this year's United Fund campaign general chairman, stated that this report is an improvement over the same period last year.

He reminded volunteers at a recent joint report luncheon that an additional five dollars from each residential giver would put the United Fund campaign over the top in this year's campaign for the support of its 200 health and social agencies.

Mass. Council Of Churches Elects Penner President

The Rev. Dr. Albert J. Penner, 63, of 329 Highland Avenue, head of the Bay State's oldest and largest Protestant denomination, was elected as president of the 11-denomination Massachusetts Council of Churches on Thursday, November 7, at the council's annual assembly in Boston.

Dr. Penner, currently minister and president of the 570-church Mass. Congregational Christian Conference, will hold the council's highest office for a period of one year.

Town Employees May See 53 Week Year In 1964 Pay

The year 1964 could turn out to be the equivalent of a 53 week year so far as Winchester's 196 town employees are concerned.

A look at a calendar will reveal that next year will be like any other year with 52 weeks, but the town employees may pick up a check for an extra week's work in 1964, as a result of the present method of the Town's accounting payrolls.

According to James Costello, town comptroller, Winchester is the only town around that pays its employees on the basis of a 52 week year instead of being on a 365 calendar day year payroll. The difference is that there is always a day left over at the end of each year after the 52nd week's payroll (364 days) has been disbursed and the Town closes the books for that year, starting the next year's books with the following week. Therefore, every seven years, there is an extra week's work accumulated by the Town's employees which the Town must pay out in one lump sum. Next year, it will cost the Town an additional $16,000 beyond its normal payroll appropriations to cover "the extra week," unless the Selectmen change the present method of accounting for payrolls, as is recommended by the Comptroller.

Mr. Costello has recommended that this year the Town's department heads finish up their last week's payrolls on Saturday, December 28, and then pay the employees for the extra two days of work out of this year's budgets Then, he suggested, next year the Town should go on a 365 calendar day basis instead of the 52 week system.

Callahan Receives Rotary Fellowship To Go to Caracas

William J. Callahan, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Callahan of 20 Kendall Street, has been awarded a Rotary Foundation Fellowship for study in Venezuela during the 1964-1965 academic year. Official announcement of the award was made last week by the international organization, confirming an earlier announcement made last June by Larry Chase, former president of the Winchester Rotary Club.

Mr. Callahan, one of 134 students in 34 countries earning fellowships for next year, plans to study at Central University of Venezuela in Caracas. He antici[illegible] leaving for Caracas next September.

Mr. Callahan attended St. Mary's School here in Winchester and was graduated from Matignon High School in Cambridge in 1954. He received his bachelor's degree from Boston College in 1958. Automation In School System Passes Trials; More Future Uses Seen

Although automation in the Winchester schools got off to a somewhat cloudy start a year ago when the High School was delayed a day in opening due to problems involved with the initiation of the new computerized scheduling system, and although there have been some problems with the new system this year; nevertheless, the School Department is in general pleased with the clerical time and money saved and the increase in accuracy and efficiency so far achieved.

Beyond the immediate fulfilling of scheduling and report card "statement" functions which automatic computing machines now perform for the School Department, many administrators and teachers forsee even greater potential applications in the area of compiling information and making statistical evaluations of programs and results.

Undoubtedly, with numerals being assigned to people for all-number direct telephone dialing, and for ZIP code zone mailing, and various other functions that are now being "numberized, categorized, and computerized," some persons may object to young school children having their class schedules, scholastic marks, and other individual statistics put into computers. However, the School Department is convinced that computers provide a solution to many administrative and clerical problems, and will prove more and more useful as time goes on.

Recently the School Department, which does not actually own or operate any large computers, changed its affiliation for computer programming and operation, and now Norton Demsey, director of guidance, predicts that marking results will be on time, accurate, and efficient.

The department is now a member of the New England School Development Council data processing project. In this group preliminary processing work is done at the Newton Jr. College Center and the computer work at various centers in the area.

"The difference now," says Mr. Demsey, "is that the NESDC group with which we now work allows us to stay close in on the job and supervise." In addition the high school administrators have had a year's experience with the system and the Lynch and McCall personnel had their baptism with this fall's scheduling, so that all are more familiar with procedure."

Why a computer for marking and scheduling? For the same reason the computer is taking over bank statements and billings: time and money are saved, accuracy and efficiency are gained.

In academic scholarship markings there are four copies made of each card record—one for the parent and a copy each for teacher, counselor and the child's permanent school record. The new system, therefore, eliminates several possibilities of clerical error.

In the multiple elective scheduling at the secondary schools, the advantage of guidance reveals a wall chart for the scheduling of the high school's 1100 students entitled, "WHS Cross Tally." This graph view of the results of student elective choices (made by the computer in a few minutes) shows at a glance the number of students who, for instance, signed up for Electronics I and then, across the board, exactly how many of each of these have signed up for every other course listed. Immediately, the scheduler sees that Electronics I must not be scheduled at the same time as say, Mathematics II, for the percentage of conflicts is too high, and he can read the same data relating to every course. Unavoidable conflicts will always be with the schools; but they will be revealed more quickly and therefore minimized.

The procedure for this week's preparation of fall grades has involved the students presenting one of their own I. D. cards to each instructor. The teachers, over last weekend, marked these I. B. M. "mark sense" cards with electrographic pencils on a band of "goofer dust," an abrasive material more readily picked up by the machines. Mr. Demsey and Thomas A. Morse, assistant principal of the high school, then take these cards to the data center where they are punched with the correct marks and where new class lists are made from them.

The teachers have a chance to double-check cards and lists before the administrators take them to a computer center where the "scholarship reports" and final lists will be printed.

Both Mr. Demsey and Mr. Morse attended a six-week institute this summer on data processing as a part of the school's participation in the New England School Development Council project. They are joined by other school administrators in their enthusiasm not only for the immediate results of the use of automation, but especially for the long-range possibilities in areas of statistical evaluation of programs and results.

They feel there is unlimited potential here for the improvement of gaining information. It will come in simple areas such as elementary school census as well as in studies of such things as the factors in high school dropouts, or even more involved, the many ramifications in a correlation of standard test results with academic grades and other academic measures.

It is hoped that there will not be too many "F's" on the secondary school report cards due to go out in a week or so for the "F" goes back on the card for the first time in many years and it does not stand for "fine," but rather for "failure."

The cards will otherwise read from "A" to "D," representing "highest, " "high," "average," and "low" respectively; and the attitude marks will be "1," "2" and "3," standing for "good," "needs improvement" and "unsatisfactory," in order.

Actually the term "report card" has become a misnomer for the schools, as the "scholarship reports" are printed on rather thin paper, not on cards. As an economy measure the explanation of the marks will go out to parents on accompanying mimeographed sheets rather than printed on the back of the reports.

Use Of Wadleigh Site Is Studied In School Needs

As part of the overall town land use study which the Planning Board has been conducting for three years, one idea which is being reviewed is the possibility of using the old Wadleigh School land opposite the Town Hall as a site for a school administration building.

In a recent letter sent to the Board of Selectmen, the Planning Board stated that if the Selectmen had no alternative suggestion for the use of the Wadleigh site, the board would recommend the construction on this site of a school administration building sometime in the future.

Although no action is planned on the proposal until school administration space needs come to the fore again, nevertheless, the School Committee officially notified the Planning Board of its full endorsement and support of the idea.

At a meeting held three years ago, at which the Town departments were considering present and future building needs, Dr. Harry Gilson, superintendent of schools, suggested that an annex for the Town Hall be built at the Wadleigh Building, and that the Wadleigh be renovated, not only for the needs of the School Department, but also to meet the needs for more space required by other Town departments.

Meantime, the School Department has had to settle its administrative offices in the Lynch Junior High School, and many other Town offices have been renovated at the Town Hall. Dr. Gilson said yesterday, however, that he still felt the Wadleigh site would be an ideal location for the School Department to have its administration offices—near the other Town departments with which it does so much business. Also, he added, that location

McCormack's Store Enlarged, Renovated

Today and tomorrow, McCormack's Apothecary is celebrating its grand opening after the completion of a building expansion and remodelling program that saw the drug store double in size and restyle in modern fashion.

Frederick W. McCormack of 7 Copley Street, proprietor of the drug store that has been at the Church and Main Street corner for 65 years, said the recently completed expansion and renovation was the most ambitious enlargement of the store since he purchased it from his brother, Henry, in 1947. He said business had increased since the store was last remodelled following a fire in 1951, necessitating the enlarging of the store.

Mr. McCormack said that in utilizing the drug store's increased space, he concentrated on four features: a greatly expanded prescription department, which he described as "the background of the drug store"; a bigger cosmetic department, which he termed "one of the finest in the area," and carrying both imported and domestic lines for men and women; a larger candy department, with both bulk and boxed imported and domestic lines; and an enlarged greeting card selection.

In describing the store's new modern decor, Mr. McCormack said he sought "an elegant appearing but tasteful style." That style was achieved by Jackson Bickford of

THE NEW McCORMACK'S. The McCormack's Apothecary sign, put up last week as one of the final touches on the drug store's recently completed expansion, reflects the modern decor and atmosphere inside. The drug store was enlarged to twice its former size, and entirely remodelled, both inside and outside, in a new, modern fashion.

Years Of Education Is Factor In Income

How much is an education worth, financially, to the average young man in Winchester?

Does it pay, in the long run, to get more schooling, or is it better to drop out and start working a few years earlier?

Answers to these questions are contained in studies and reports made by the Department of Labor and by other agencies, federal and private. They show that each added year in school results in more income for the average person throughout his working career.

Also, they find, the chances of getting a job and of holding it are much brighter for the high school graduate than for the drop-out.

The subject is of particular interest at this time because of American Education Week, November 10th to 16th.

In Winchester, based on the amount of schooling the average young man is now receiving and based upon present income levels locally, he can expect to earn approximately $472,000 during his working years, the figures show.

This is considerably better than his prospects would have been 15 or 20 years ago, thanks to the rising educational level locally and to higher wage scales.

The amount compares favorably, also, with lifetime earnings in the rest of the United States, $248,000, and with the $275,000 in the New England States.

PROPOSED FIVE-STORY APARTMENT BUILDING. Currently under review by the Board of Appeal is this proposed plan for a $2 million, five-story modern apartment building with 44 family units and with indoor parking facilities for 36 cars. The plans as presented conflicted with certain zoning by-law rules, the board contended, and which must be resolved before it can be built.

Apartment Building Before Appeal Board

At a Tuesday night hearing in the Town Hall, the Board of Appeals heard a petition by Frank J. Millyan, Jr., of 170 Forest Street, for a variance to construct a proposed five-story "L"-shaped modern apartment building fronting on Main Street.

The building Mr. Millyan proproposed would be located between the Station Cleaners and the so-called "Cullen Block," on land which is now used as a parking lot for cars. The building, according to Arthur Rand of 6 Atherton Road, architect for the project, would extend back from Main Street to Elmwood Avenue, and "L" wing off to Park Street.

According to the plans presented at the hearing, the building would contain about 44 apartment units, would have indoor parking facilities for approximately 36 cars, and would also have two or three stores on the ground Main Street floor. It would rise about 44 feet above the street level.

Mr. Millyan said he would make the building a first class construction job, at an approximate cost of nearly $2 million, and it would be an all concrete building with brick curtain exterior walls, aluminum doors and windows, acoustic ceilings, all electric heating, and probably two elevators and two stairways.

At the hearing, legal technicalities involved in the Town's zoning by-law rules and regulations were

Bringing Opera To Children Here Gets New Impetus

"Children should first experience opera at an early age. They feel and respond to the fantasy of music-drama sometimes more directly than their parents," said Miss Sarah Caldwell, artistic director of the Opera Group of Boston, Inc. at a well-attended joint meeting of members and friends of the Opera Group Guild and the Winchester College Club, at the home of Mrs. Robert A. Nyere, 19 Arlington Street, yesterday afternoon.

Many young children who have participated in previous productions of the Boston Opera group have derived much personal benefit therefrom and Miss Caldwell wants to share this pleasure with as many other children as possible.

To carry out this wish of Miss Caldwell's, the Opera Group Guild is sponsoring "Dress Rehearsals for Children" in Boston. There will be two series of two operas each, with full cast and orchestra. Tickets for these performances will not be for sale, but each season subscriber will receive a complimentary ticket for a child, and Guild members may earn additional such tickets by selling subscriptions for the 1964 season.

In order that the young people in the 5th through 12th grades who may be attending the performances shall know what to expect, Miss Caldwell promised an Operalog for at least two of the four operas to be performed.

In addition, the Winchester Public Library co-sponsors of the study groups, will provide suitable books in the Children's Room as well as books, recordings and films in the main library, for reference by the Opera Study Groups being formed. Mr. Robert Wagenknecht, new head librarian, presented the library's interest in the project to those present.

Mrs. William W. Davies, III, chairman of the Opera Study, reminded attendants that membership in the Guild or the College Club is not mandatory for participation in the Study Groups, whose meeting dates will be announced shortly.

Board 19 in the men's pairs appears to be a lay down for six spades provided the Heart Finesse works, which it does.

Let us see what happens if West leads his singleton diamond. The Ace wins the trick and South is elated with North's holdings provided the spades break three-two and the Queen of Hearts is on the correct side.

He immediately leads the Queen of Spades and West permits the Queen to hold. South then goes to his hand with the Ace of Hearts and leads out the King of Spades. West takes the Ace and puts declarer back on the board promptly with a Club.

South cannot get back to his hand to lead out the rest of the Spades. If he leads a Diamond West will overruff and set the contract.

West would have made a mistake if he had taken North's singleton Queen of Spades. No matter what West would have returned South could get back to his hand with the Ace of Hearts, pull trumps try the Heart finesse and romp home with the contract.

Are your ears red, mine are, I tried to play the contract at six No Trump, down four.
